trust him with all our happiness, all our work, all our care. If he be our strength, no foe can hurt us. If he be our salvation, eternity is too short to speak his praise. Great is the happiness, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, which we may by faith draw from his perfections, his Christ, his promises, and ordinances! And thrice happy is the church when her members know him and his mighty works, and with one mind, and one mouth, glorify him!

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1. Prophecies of heavy, oppressive, and ruinous judgments are often called burdens; and those denounced against Babylon also often relate to Antichrist. 2, 3. Assemble the forces to their respective standards.—Order them to present themselves to the noble captains of Media and Persia, and to break into the houses of the noble Chaldeans. I have stirred up, and by my providence separated and strengthened these Medes and Persians, to execute my judgments upon Babylon, and to perform the most gallant actions, which will illustrate my honour and greatness. 6, 9. The day of the Lord, or of the wicked, denotes the period of his awful judgments upon them. 10. The whole country of Chaldea shall be filled with horror, and their princes and nobles degraded or murdered. 12. Men fit to bear arms shall become very rare; or the Medes and Persians shall refuse every ransom of their lives. 13, 14. Because of their wickedness, the whole nation shall be quite unbinged and ruined. The Chaldeans shall flee for their lives; but none shall dare to harbour them. All their auxiliaries shall run away, and leave them to shift for themselves. 19. Babylon, once the so large, glorious, and impregnable capital of Chaldea, shall be utterly destroyed in the most wrathful manner.

Ver. 1. Burden. 'Oracle' (Boothroyd). But the word burden, denoting the heavy judgment that Babylon was doomed to bear, seems best calculated to convey the meaning of the prophet. See Ge. 4. 13. C.

Ver. 3. Sanctified ones. 'My enrolled warriors' (Lowth). There can be little question of the preference due to this translation.—That rejoice in my highness. 'Them that rejoice in their own dignity' (Boothroyd). C.

Ver. 4. In the mountains. Media and Persia, from which countries Cyrus drew his armies against Babylon, were mountainous countries, and are described as such in contrast with the low-lying plain upon which Babylon was built. C.

If this restoration be synchronous with that predicted ch. xi. 11:—and there is no reason to suppose two different restorations—then the restoration ch. xi. being a restoration, not merely to political power, but to godliness (see ch. xii.), the captivity into which Israel will bring their former oppressors must be a spiritual captivity to the yoke of Christ. CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Joshua spared Moab by divine com-

REFLECTIONS.—Destruction and anguish in tremendous triumph follow sin through impenitent cities and nations. Sudden and unexpected ruin awaits haughty transgressors. And to call on idols or creatures when God is our enemy is but to add to our anguish. The wealth which men eagerly gain but invites the invader, tempts the robber, and endangers the owner. It increases the owner's care and grief, while it assists his enemy to destroy him, and if hardened sinners escape one judgment, they prepare for another. But if such be the case of a ravaged nation, alas! the terrors, the torments, the howlings spoiler: for ⁹the extortioner⁸ is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the oppressors⁹ are consumed out of the land.¹

5 And ⁱⁿ mercy shall the throne be established;² and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle⁴ of David, judging and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness.³

6 ¶ We have heard⁴ of the ^{pride} of Moab; he is very proud: even of his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath: but his lies⁵ shall not be so.⁶

7 Therefore shall Moab ^{howl} for Moab; every one shall howl: for the foundations⁷ of Kir-hareseth shall ye mourn;⁸ surely they are stricken.

8 For ^{the} fields of Heshbon languish, and the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen⁹ have broken down the principal plants¹ thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness; her branches are stretched out,² they are gone over the sea.³

9 Therefore⁴ I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: I will water thee with my tears, O Heshbon, and Elealeh; for the shouting⁴ for thy summer fruits, and for thy harvest is fallen.

10 And ^{gladness} is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field; and in the vineyards there shall be no singing, neither shall there be shouting: the treaders shall tread out no wine in their presses; I have made their vintage shouting to cease.

11 Wherefore² my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for Kir-hareseth.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab ^{is} weary on the high place, that he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail.

13 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning Moab since that time.⁵

14 But now the LORD hath spoken, saying, in woe. Who shall abide with devouring fire? Who shall dwell with everlasting despair.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 1. Send ye the lamb—your acknowledgments of tribute to the king, see 2 Ki. 3. 4, and so, either by repentance avert the threatened judgment, or secure a home and protection against the day of national calamity. The main object of this prophecy is to exhort Moab to look for and submit to Messiah the ruler on his appearing. See ver. 5. C.—Sela. Sela is unquestionably the celebrated city Petra, afterwards the capital of Edom. It is situated in a deep and wild ravine, or rather cluster of ravines, in the midst of a mountain-range of red sandstone. Its rock-hewn temples, tombs, and palaces are still the wonder and admiration of travellers. Sela was not in Moab; but it seems probable that on the occasion the prophet here refers to the fugitive Moabites had taken refuge in the ravines of Edom, and they are exhorted to send from thence their tribute, and the tokens of their submission. The words rendered 'from Sela to the wilderness' may either signify, as they are translated in the Vulgate, 'from Sela to the wilderness', or, as interpreted by Vitranga, 'from Sela towards the wilderness', &c.; that is, from Sela towards the wilderness that leads to Jerusalem. The great wilderness (in Hebrew Midbar, which is the word here used) of Judah lay between the border of Edom and Jerusalem, and through it lay the direct and indeed the only road. P.

Ver. 9. To 'weep with those that weep' is a distinguished Christian duty, not only of perpetual obligation, but for the discharge of which the world affords continual opportunities. Our Lord wept over Jerusalem, leaving us an example of the sympathy with which we should regard, not only our friends, but our enemies, in their sorrows. C.

Ver. 13. That time. What time? When it was seen that he had become 'weary of his idolatry on his high places,' ver. 12, and had come to his sanctuary, not in the piety of faith, humiliation, and penitence—but in the superstitious throes of despair, to offer his unacceptable, because his compelled, petitions. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How unwilling is God that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! Injustice towards God or men is a ready mean for depriving us of all we have. Never do any protect or cherish the people of God in their distress but he remarkably rewards them in kind.—Nor is it ever wise to stand aloof from them; for though they fall, they shall quickly arise: though now they wither, anon they shall flourish in glory and honour. When sin abounds, rage against the church flames, and pride towers, destruction and anguish are at the door; and carnal mirth shall quickly be turned into weeping and wailing. And when God rises up to punish the guilty, no idol can help, avert, or defer his stroke.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 3-5. The Syrians shall be in as despicable and ruined a condition as the Israelites; and the glory and multitude of Israel shall be exceedingly diminished, like one dying of a consumption. And being ripe for ruin, the Assyrians shall make a clean riddance of them, as reapers in harvest do of the fields of standing corn. 9-11. The cities of the Israelites shall stand as high heaps in the country, forsaken by the inhabitants, as they were by the

Within three years,⁶ as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall be contemned, with all that great multitude; and the remnant shall be very small and feeble.⁷

THE burden¹ of Damascus. 'Behold, Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.'

2 The⁵ cities of Aroer are forsaken; 'they shall be for flocks, which shall lie down, and none shall make them afraid.'

3 The⁶ fortress also shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus, and the remnant of Syria: they shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, saith the LORD of ^{hosts}.

4 And in that day it shall come to pass, ^{that} the glory of Jacob shall be made thin, and the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean.

5 And ^{it} shall be as when the harvest-man gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm; and it shall be as he that gathereth ears in 'the valley of Rephaim.'

6 ¶ Yet⁷ gleanings shall be left in it, as the shaking of an olive-tree, two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the LORD God of Israel.

7 At⁸ that day shall a man look to his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel.

8 And he shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands, neither shall respect that which his fingers have made, either the groves or the images.⁴

9 ¶ In¹ that day shall his strong cities be as a forsaken bough, and an uppermost branch, which they left, because⁵ of the children of Israel: and there shall be desolation.

Canaanites in the days of Joshua or Barak. Because they have forsaken their God, Saviour, and Protector, nothing shall thrive with them; but after all their care to strengthen their state, the Assyrians shall seize everything they have, and carry them into a miserable and lasting captivity. 12-14. But notwithstanding all their vast multitudes, fury, noisy ravage, and blasphemous boasting, God, by his just rebuke, shall destroy the Assyrian army before Jerusalem, and make the small remains thereof flee homeward with the utmost terror and precipitation.

Ver. 1. Damascus is taken away. The inhabitants of Damascus were taken away captive by Tiglath-Pileser, 2 Ki. 16. 9; and to what ruinous condition it was then reduced, and how long it remained so, history gives no information. It has, however, still continued a city of great note and importance; but that fact forms no contradiction to the prophecy, as it is evident from ver. 3, that by 'being a city,' the prophet meant the capital city of a Syrian monarchy. But to that estate it never returned; for since the death of Rezin, its last king, the country around Damascus has always continued a mere province of some of its conquerors. There have successively been Sennacherib, the generals of Alexander, Judas Maccabeus, the Romans, the Saracens, the Crusaders, Tamerlane, the Mamelukes, the Turks, lately the Egyptians, from whom, by aid of England, it has again been wrested by the Turks. C.

meant? Some say it was a noted pool or lake; but there is no lake in that district, and the word 'sea' would scarcely be applied to a mere pool. We learn from Nu. 32. 1 that the country round Heshbon and Jazer was called 'the land of the sea,' that land must have extended to the shore of the Dead Sea. May not that sea therefore have been called by the inhabitants of the district, 'the Sea of Jazer,' just as the northern lake was called Tiberias and Genesareth?—P.

5 And the waters shall fail from ^hthe sea,⁹ and the river¹ shall be wasted and dried up.

6 And they shall turn the rivers far away, and the brooks of ⁱdefence shall be emptied and dried up:³ the reeds and flags shall wither.

7 The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, and be no more.⁴

8 The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

9 Moreover they that work ^jin fine flax, and they that weave networks,⁵ shall be confounded.

Ver. 8. This prediction began to be fulfilled when many of the survivors of the captivities of Salmanser and Esarhaddon turned from idols to the true God, 2 Ch. 30. 10, 11, 35, 18, and it continues to be fulfilled in the gleanings that are still gathered to Christ. C.
Ver. 14. The multitudinous host of Sennacherib seems to have been immediately in the eye of the prophet, of whom the angel of the Lord smote 185,000 in one night, 2 Ki. 19. 35. But similar destruction is predicted against all the spoilers and robbers of Israel—a prediction amply verified in the overthrow of the Babylonian, Grecian, and Roman powers, mainly on account of their cruelty to the people of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Companions in wickedness are soon made partners in punishment. Nor can the strongest fortifications defend from God's almighty wrath. Sin fearfully sickens and consumes persons and societies. And when nations are ripened by it, easily and extensively God strips them of their numbers, glory, power, and wealth. But thrice happy is it when the destruction of many is rendered instrumental for the conversion of a remnant to Christ, and when the loss of outward things makes us look off from them all to God himself. Alas! how professors, by their forgetfulness of God, ruin themselves and their country, and turn their most noted outward comforts into real plagues! But puny and empty nothings before God are the mightiest armies of his adversaries. He triumphs over those in his judgments who triumph over his people in their wickedness. And short-lived are the terrors or troubles of believers. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Let them therefore treasure up past experiences as a ground of future confidence in the like temptations.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 4. God's being like a clear heat, or a cloud of dew, may either be understood of his afflicting or of his comforting them. 5, 6. Before they can ripen their designs, they will bring to themselves destruction, and by their wickedness bring eternal woe to their souls.

Ver. 2. Vessels of bulrushes. That the Egyptians employed vessels of bulrushes, coated with bitumen, is evident from Ex. 2. 3, as well as from general history. And it appears their Ethiopian neighbours employed them likewise. C.—Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation stretched out and levelled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto (the dread of neighbouring nations), a nation that measureth out its fields after each inundation, and then treadeth down its seed with the foot of the husbandman, whose land the rivers have nourished. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No place can protect sinners from a just God. No furious rage, which may render them a terror to their neighbors around, can hinder him from finding them. His providential interpositions ought carefully to be remarked: and when dangers are most alarming, he is often nearest to defend and save us. No rage of his enemies can ever disturb his

PALM TREES AND PYRAMIDS—THE PYRAMIDS OF CHEOPS IS REPRESENTED BY SOME AS BEING THE ALTAR OF THE LORD, REFERRED TO IN THESE VERSES. [Isaiah, xix:19-20.]—"In that day there shall be an altar of the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord. And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt." In a curious book entitled "A Miracle in Stone," Dr. Joseph A. Seiss claims that the 19th and 20th verses of this chapter refer to the great pyramid of Egypt. He says that the altar and the pillar in these verses refer to one and the same thing, that the verses refer to some specific and telling monument, and that all their terms most fully apply to this marvelous hand-made mountain of stone. He thinks the location of the pyramids corresponds to the teachings of the text that the great pyramid is the hub of Egypt's curved shore line, and so is in the midst of the land and at the border between Palestine and Egypt.

CHAPTER XX.

A type prefiguring the shameful captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia.

IN the year that ¹Tartan came unto ²Ashdod, (when Sargon² the king of Assyria sent him,) and fought against ³Ashdod and took it;

2 At the same time spake the LORD by Isaiah³ the son of Amoz, saying, ⁴Go and loose the ⁵sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. And he did so, walking naked⁴ and barefoot.

3 And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years for a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia;

4 So⁵ shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners,⁵ and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and barefoot, even ⁶with their buttocks uncovered, to the shame⁶ of Egypt.

5 And ¹they shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory.

6 And the inhabitant of this isle⁷ shall say in that day, Behold, such is our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape?

repose. Often he seems to have forgotten his people when he is just ready to work their deliverance. And while he is all-sufficient for the protection, quickening, and comfort of the people, he will not save them unless they repent and accept Christ.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1. God's riding upon a swift cloud denotes his coming speedily and irresistibly to execute fearful judgments. 2. After the death of Sethon the country was divided into twelve petty governments; all which, after a long civil war, Psammitichus subdued. It may also relate to the civil war between Amasis and Pharaoh-Hophrah, &c. 4. God shall give them up to the tyranny of Psammitichus, Nebuchadnezzar, the Persian kings, &c. 13-17. Infatuated by their giddy tempers, the princes shall follow pernicious counsels, and lead the subjects into ruin. Neither shall any, high or low, do anything proper for their relief, but shall be quite dispirited and terrified by the threatenings and judgments of God. The report of the destruction of Israel and ravage of Judah by the Assyrians, and the overthrow of Judah by the Chaldeans, or the prophecies uttered in the land of Judah, shall throw the Egyptians into the utmost consternation and fear of the like miseries. 18-23. Nevertheless their terrible and long-continued distresses shall at last issue in the conversion of a great many of them, even in the city of their idols, to the Christian faith; and they shall make a solemn and open profession thereof, and shall, through Jesus Christ, avowedly worship the true God everywhere in the country. After God has, by his angel's cutting off Sennacherib's army, and by Alexander's victories, delivered them from their Assyrian and Persian oppression, Jesus, the infinitely mighty Saviour, shall deliver them from Satan and their lusts, and their heathen abominations. By God's wonderful providences they shall be gradually brought to the saving knowledge of, and openly worship him, and solemnly and candidly devote themselves to his service. And in the apostolic, and especially the millennial period, they, and the eastern nations, who had warred with and oppressed them, and the Jews, who had sinfully courted and been sadly oppressed by both, shall harmoniously embrace the gospel, and unite in the service and distinguished favours of God.

Ver. 1. The idols of Egypt shall be moved. Egypt was anciently either the parent or the great patroness of idolatry. The remains of her idols, even till this day, are of the most gigantic stature. But truly they have been moved, for they are often mutilated, or thrown down, or even carried away into distant lands—memorials at once of the greatness and the littleness of man. His greatness of power in executing works so truly wonderful; and his littleness of understanding in worshipping them as gods, C.

Ver. 7. The paper reeds by the brooks. The papyrus (whence the English word paper) from which were manufactured rolls for writing, cordage, baskets, boats, &c. C.

Ver. 18. The city of destruction. The slightest possible change of the first letter makes it either the 'city of destruction' or the 'city of the sun.' 'City of destruction' seems the most probable reading, as 'city of the sun' seems heathenish rather than scriptural; and is expressively emblematic of that ruin from which the gospel delivers sinners who have destroyed themselves. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God pours the greatest contempt on men's idols; on everything which they inordinately loved or trusted. At his will created comforts concur

POMPEY'S PILLAR—RAISED IN HONOR OF DIOCLETIAN. [Isaiah, xix: 23.]—"In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria; and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria." In the verse quoted from Isaiah, Egypt is represented as going to Assyria, and the Assyrians as coming to Egypt. What is true of Egypt and Assyria has been true of Egypt and many other surrounding nations. There was a Persian dynasty in Egypt, a Macedonian dynasty, and a Roman dynasty. Pompey's pillar may be taken as a monument which stands for this universal relation of Egypt with other nations. This was erected by Pompey, a Roman prefect, in honor of Diocletian some little time after A. D. 302. It is made of granite brought from Aswan. The shaft is about seventy feet and the whole monument, including its pedestal, is a little over one hundred feet high.

to aggravate our ruin, and created supporters fail or fight against us. Fomenters of faction, cruel tyrants, and infatuated and giddy princes are the greatest plagues to nations. And when one sinner or sinful society is cut down, it becomes survivors to consider and tremble. If men persist in their wickedness, God is determined to destroy them. But strange, and often unaccountable to us, are his providential dispensations. He often deals most sharply with those for whom he has the greatest mercies in reserve. Deeply he wounds in order that he may graciously heal. He bereaves men of all that they have in this world, that he may give them his gospel, his grace, his ordinances, his Christ. He seeks constantly to form intelligent, devout, and harmoniously bold societies of believers out of those whom Satan had singularly besotted, sin corrupted, and miseries depressed. And it is comely when the servants of the same God, purchased by the same blood of his Son, and begotten by the same Spirit, lay aside all their animosities, and with one heart, one mind, and one mouth glorify God!

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 1. The word Tartan signifies 'general' or 'commander-in-chief,' and it is probable it is the official title of the first military officer of Assyria rather than a proper name.—Sargon was one of the greatest of Assyrian kings. He reigned between Shalmaneser and Sennacherib, and was the father of the latter. He ascended the throne in B.C. 721, and appears to have reigned about fifteen years. His various expeditions are recorded on the Assyrian monuments. He is only mentioned by name in this passage of Scripture; but he may be 'the king of Assyria' intended in 2 Ki. 17, 6, P.

Ver. 3. Three years. Probably he so walked only three days, a day for a year, according to prophetic rule, Nu. 14, 34; Eze. 4, 6, C. Ver. 5. And they. That is, the Jews who trusted to Egypt and Ethiopia for help against Assyria, and who disregarded seeking help of God, shall now be afraid of similar calamities, and be ashamed of their unbelief and ingratitude. C.

Ver. 6. Isle. The Hebrew word here translated 'isle' has various shades of meaning. Generally it means 'land' as opposed to water. Then it signifies 'coast,' and then 'isle.' In this passage it should be rendered 'coast.' The reference manifestly is to Philistia, which lay on the coast of the Mediterranean. P.

REFLECTIONS.—O what need of a self-denying humility in the ministers of Christ! They know not to what apparently hard service he may put them. Into what pitiful condition men's wickedness plunges them! Alas! the dreadful nature of slavery and captivity to inward lusts! How created confidences shame pain, and ruin us at last! But thrice happy are those who in time flee from them all to the never-disappointing Jesus Christ!

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 1, 2. Dreadful calamities shall come upon Babylon on the river Euphrates, which shall reduce it to a desert and fen. Irresistibly they come from Media and Persia, between which and Babylon the wilderness is inhabited by fierce savages. The revolted Medes and Persians shall furiously revenge upon the Chaldeans all their treachery and cruelty to other nations, and shall relieve the enslaved Jews and others from their bondage. 3-5. To their infinite consternation and anguish, their nights of revelling and mirth, and their luxurious feasting, shall be quickly turned into ruinous wars, and into horrid scenes of murder. 6-9. For lo! within view of their watchmen, Darius and Cyrus march forward, with their armies of Medes and Persians, well furnished with everything necessary to destroy Babylon and her multitude of idols. 10. This either represents the afflicted Jews as having this prophecy delivered to them for their comfort, or the Chaldeans as threatened with terrible destruction after they had miserably destroyed the Jews and others. 11, 12. To the affrighted Edomites no other information can be given than that a night of dreadful calamities, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, &c., shall follow their present respite and prosperity. Nor is there any method to escape it, but by a penitent turning to God and his people.

Ver. 1. The desert of the sea. The waters around Babylon are called sea, and the fertile plain is threatened with being turned into a desert—a threatening now literally realized during centuries. C.

Ver. 2. Elam. Elam was a son of Shem, and founder of a great nation. The country of Elam lay on the east bank of the Tigris, and bordered on the Persian Gulf. It embraced the more modern countries of Persia and Susiana; and in this passage it may be regarded as equivalent to Persia. Its capital was Susa; and one of its early monarchs was Chedorlaomer, who is mentioned in Ge. xiv, P.

Ver. 3. I was bowed down, &c. Isaiah, and not a Babylonian, is the speaker; for to Isaiah was the vision declared, ver. 2, 6, C.

Ver. 4. This cannot be the speech of a Babylonian, but of the prophet speaking of the pleasure which a body weary with toil, and a spirit weary with heavy and vexing thoughts, finds in the sleep of the night. C.

Ver. 5. Anoint the shield. This anointing has been interpreted of oiling the shields, that darts might more readily fly off. But this is an unsupported interpretation. Neither seems it proper to derive the interpretation from some obscure or imaginary custom of anointing shields, never adverted to in Scripture. Is not the shield rather the emblem of a chief chosen and appointed by the princes for the defence of his country in its imminent dangers? C.

Ver. 7. This ought rather to be translated: 'And he saw cavalry, horsemen two abreast, riders on asses, and riders on camels.' The Hebrew word rendered 'chariots' sometimes signifies 'riders,' as in 1 Sa. 8, 4: 10, 18. The Persians used both asses and camels in their armies for riding; and they were accustomed to advance in pairs, two abreast. P.

Ver. 10. O my brethren, the sowing and harvest of the Lord, whom I have laboured to thrash out of your chaff, and winnow into cleanness: lo! I have declared unto you the whole revelation of God! C.

Ver. 11. Dumah. In the midst of the Arabian desert, about 250 miles east of Edom, is an ancient town called by Arab geographers Dumah, but by the modern Bedawin el-Yauf, 'the belly,' probably on account of its features and position. A tradition exists that it was founded by Dumah, the son of Ishmael. It stands in a circular valley, and is encompassed by a ridge of sandstone hills. It still contains about 3000 inhabitants. P.

Ver. 13. Dedanim. Two Dedans are mentioned in Scripture; one descended from Cush, Ge. 10, 7, the other from Abraham by Keturah, Ge. 25, 3. It is the descendants of the latter who are referred to here. Their chief settlements were in Arabia, near the eastern border of Idumea. They seem to have been largely engaged in transport trade, carrying wares from central and eastern Arabia and Persia to the marts of Phoenicia and Egypt, Eze. 26, 20; 38, 13, P.

Ver. 14. Tema. Tema, now called Teyma, is a small town and district east of Idumea, and not far distant from Dumah. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! what desolations in populous nations, what alteration in fruitful soils, does sin produce! Quickly they, who treacherously spoiled and murdered others, meet with the same fate. And often the most dreadful ruin comes upon sinners when they are most secure and self-confident. How useful and informing are God's faithful ministers! and what insight they ought to have into the mind and work of God! It is very necessary to discern the signs of the times; and to consider earthly prosperity as but a common inlet to fearful calamities; that we may improve the present hour for returning to God. Kindness to distressed neighbours is ordinarily, by Providence, rewarded with similar reliefs. But how empty is that glory which can be diminished or ruined! Let therefore the Lord alone be my everlasting light, wealth, and honour.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 1-3. The heavy judgments of Jerusalem, which is surrounded with moun-expect, in profane revelling and mirth; which impudent contempt of God and his judgments shall never be forgiven you. 15-19. And you, Shebna, what property or relations have you, a foreigner here, that you should build a stately palace or tomb for yourself? Behold, God shall, in an irresistible manner, drive you into captivity, and overwhelm you with shame and contempt. In a distant country thou shalt live and die obscurely; and your stately chariots and other whom the 'merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished.

3 And by great waters the seed of Sihor,⁶ the harvest of the 'river, is her revenue; and she is a⁶ mart of nations.⁷

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon; for the sea⁸ hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying, 'I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins.

5 As⁹ at the report concerning Egypt, so shall they be 'sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

6 Pass¹ ye over to Tarshish; 'howl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

7 Is this your 'joyous city, whose antiquity is of ancient days? her own feet⁴ shall carry her afar off² to sojourn.

8 Who¹⁰ hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth?

9 The LORD of hosts hath purposed it, to stain³ the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

10 Pass through thy land as a river,⁴ O daughter of Tarshish: there is no more strength.⁵

11 He⁶ stretched out his hand over the sea; he shook the kingdoms: the LORD hath given a commandment against the 'merchant city,⁶ to destroy the strong holds⁷ thereof.

14 This verse presents many difficulties to the interpreter. Why are the Chaldeans here mentioned? What is the meaning of the second clause? What place is referred to in clause three? The following seems to be the sense:—Behold the land of the Chaldees (the people who were the instruments employed in the destruction of Tyre); this people (the people now inhabiting the land) was not (had no existence as a nation until a recent period). The Assyrians founded it (the country) for dwellers in the cities (the Chaldeans, who, previous to this time had led a wandering life). They built up towers (the towers of Babel), they reared up the palaces thereof. Hence the Chaldeans brought it (Tyre) to ruin.—P.

marks of honour shall remain, to the reproach of king Ahaz, who preferred so worthless a wretch. 20-24. Eliakim shall be advanced into thine office, and tenderly govern the people. He shall have the supreme government of the king's court and family, and dispose of everything belonging to them. He shall be established in his office; and by his prudent carriage shall procure respect to himself and his relations: all of whom, from the highest to the lowest, shall be advanced by him, and own their dependence on him. 25. But you, Shebna, who now appear so firmly fixed in honour, shall then be disgraced and ruined, and all your dependants along with you.

Ver. 6. Uncovered the shield. Polished metallic shields were covered to preserve them from being tarnished; but were uncovered in battle, when their brightness was intended to dazzle and confound the eyes of the enemy. C.

Ver. 8. He discovered the covering of Judah. This expression has been interpreted to 'take away the veil,' an allusion not likely to be applied to Judah. Is it not rather a military allusion, signifying, 'he has passed the fortresses of the frontier,' the covering lines of defence? C.

Ver. 15. Shebna. All that is known of Shebna is contained in ch. xxxvii. 2. Ki. 18, 19; but from the threatenings here denounced he appears to have been a leader in the epicurean not that occupied the place of repentance towards God. C.

Ver. 23. I will fasten him, &c. In eastern houses there are many pins or pegs fastened in the walls for the suspension of vessels, &c. In reference to this custom, Eliakim is characterized by his capacity, ver. 24, of attending to the greatest amounts and the minutest details—one of the highest practical qualifications of a truly great mind: nothing too great for its capacity; nothing too little for its condescension. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How unbounded is the knowledge of God! Not a motion in our course, not a word in our tongue, not a thought in our heart, but he knows it long beforehand! How severe are God's corrections of his own professed people! Pious men, and especially faithful ministers, will be distinguished patterns of grief for public calamities, and of eyeing the hand of God therein. In times of peace many things lie quite neglected. And even in danger, many mind nothing but external means of relief, atheistically overlooking God himself. Nor can the best of rulers reform the hearts of their subjects. Luxury leads to infidelity. But how dreadful is it when professors riot in revellings and mirth, when God is calling them to uncommon humiliation for sin! Alas! such luxurious feasts and frothy songs issue in everlasting damnation!

It is very rash for court favourites to pride themselves in their station, or to tyrannize over others. God may suddenly displace and debase them. Preferment is only honourable when it is obtained unsought for, and when it is wholly improved to the glory of God and the benefit of mankind. It is a great mercy for churches and nations to have men prudent, active, and faithful in the principal places of government, especially after almost everything has been mismanaged by others. And above all, infinite is the mercy of JEHOVAH, in setting up Jesus Christ a Saviour to restore what he took not away; and that he has intrusted him with the whole concerns of his own glory and of our eternal happiness!

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 1-5. Those concerned in the ships of Cilicia, the south parts of Spain, and other sea-ports, shall grievously bewail the extensive destruction of Tyre, as the harbours and places of entertainment and commerce there shall be all destroyed by the Chaldeans or Greeks, and part of the inhabitants carried captive; of which they shall be informed by the people with whom they trade. There shall be nothing but mournful silence and desolation in Tyre, which had been lately filled with mariners, merchants, and goods: filled with the corn and other commodities of Egypt; and resorted to by all the trading nations of the known world. Zidon, her parent and neighbouring city, shall be quite overwhelmed with confusion, because Tyre, long the mistress of the sea, instead of sending forth her colonies, shall be bereaved of her inhabitants. And the ruin of Tyre shall be no less alarming to the Egyptians and other neighbouring nations than the destruction of Egypt by Moses, or by the Ethiopians or Assyrians, &c. 6, 7. Notwithstanding her antiquity, and wonted gaiety and mirth, the inhabitants of Tyre shall, in great anguish and grief, leave their own country, and flee for shelter to Lesser Asia, Spain, or the north of Africa. 8, 9. Nor shall all their glory and wealth be able to prevent their ruin, since God has determined to pull down their pomp and magnificence as a warning to others. 10. Their fortifications and armies being ruined, the inhabitants of Tyre, long supported by their sea trade, shall be glad, in multitudes, swifly to flee from their country never to return. 11, 12.

It is God who, to the terror of the nations around, permits the Chaldeans or Greeks to destroy it; and though never conquered since it was founded by the Zidonians, it shall now be destroyed. Nor shall the inhabitants, carried captive to Chaldea or Greece, or who flee to other places, obtain there any fixed safety or quietness.

13. Nor need the Tyrians think the ruin of their city impossible. The Chaldeans, so anciently formed into a nation by Nimrod, and lately re-established by Baladan, an Assyrian prince, shall, after all their fortification of Babylon their capital, and their conquest of nations, bring them, and then be brought themselves, to ruin. 15-17. And after the Tyrians have been deprived of their trade for seventy years, answerable to the continuance of the Chaldean monarchy, they shall find again their wonted liberty; and they shall, by every engaging art, draw the nations to trade with them as formerly. 18. At last the Tyrians shall, in the apostolic age, be converted to the faith of Christ, and shall employ their power and wealth to promote his glory, and plentifully support his ministers and members.

Ver. 1. Tarshish. 'Tarshish' is a name common to Tarsus in Cilicia, some portion of India or Africa situated on the Indian Ocean, or of Spain; which last probably is the country here meant. See ver. 6. C.—Chittim. The Chittim were a people descended from Javan, Ge. 10, 4. Cyprus was probably their original seat. Its chief town was Citium, which is radically identical with Chittim. The Greeks afterwards occupied Cyprus, but seem to have been called Chittim. They established colonies far and wide throughout the Levant. From them Macedon—Ma Keti, 'the land of the Keti or Chittim'—derived its name. They also settled in Italy. P.

Ver. 3. The seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, is her revenue. Grain from the banks of the Nile, 1 Ch. 3, 5. The river, most probably the Euphrates, as the channel of Indian commerce. C.

Ver. 5. Tyre. Ancient Tyre was situated on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean, about 25 miles south of Sidon. Near Tyre, on an island, about half a mile from the land; for upwards of 300 years it was justly considered the commercial capital of the world. Yet, when at the height of prosperity, its destruction was foretold by Ezekiel, Eze. xxvi-xxviii., as well as by Isaiah. Yet how unlikely was its ruin! It was a place of prodigious strength, so that it successfully withstood Shalmanezar, king of Assyria, during a siege of five years; and was not taken by Nebuchadnezzar till after a siege of thirteen years. The island city had walls 150 feet high, but was taken by Alexander after a siege of seven months, and reduced to a state of utter ruin. It subsequently recovered a portion of its prosperity; but has long been what Ezekiel foretold, 'as the top of a rock, a place to spread

CHURCH OF THE COLUMN, ATHENS—ONE OF THE FIRST CITIES IN EUROPE WHERE ST. PAUL PREACHED THE GOSPEL, AND A CITY NOW FILLED WITH CHRISTIAN CHURCHES. [Isaiah, xxv:6-9.]—"And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wine on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Above is a picture of the Greek Church of the Column in Athens, Greece. The above prophecy of Isaiah is connected with the year B. C. 704, but is thought to refer to the church of the future. Just two years before the date of this prophecy, or B. C. 714, Hippomenes rendered himself execrable in the eyes of Athenians by his cruelty in exposing his own daughter to be devoured by horses. Now, through the influence of the church to which Isaiah referred in his prophecy, Athens is a Christian city.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 The prophet praiseth God for his past judgments, 6 for his saving benefits, 9 and for his victorious salvation.

O LORD,^a thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name: for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithful and truth.

2 For^a thou hast made of a city an heap; of a defenced city a ruin: a palace of 'strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

3 Therefore^a shall the strong people glorify thee, the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

4 For^a thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.¹

5 Thou^a shalt bring down the noise of strangers,² as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the shadow of a cloud: the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

6 ¶ And^a in this mountain³ shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

7 And^a he will destroy⁴ in this mountain the face of 'the covering cast⁵ over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations.⁶

8 He will 'swallow up death in victory; and the LORD God will 'wipe away tears from off all faces; and the 'rebuken of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the LORD hath spoken it.

9 And it shall be said in that day, Lo, 'this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the LORD: 'we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.

10 For in this mountain 'shall the hand of the LORD rest, and Moab⁷ shall be trodden⁸ down under him, even as straw is trodden down for the dunghill.⁹

11 And^a he shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim: and he shall bring down their pride together with the spoils of their hands.

12 And the fortress of the high fort of thy walls shall he bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the dust.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 A song inciting to confidence in God, 5 for his judgments, 12 and for his favour to his people. 20 An exhortation to wait on God.

IN that^a day shall this song be 'sung in the land of Judah: We have 'a strong city; 'salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks.

2 Open^a ye the gates, that the righteous nation which 'keepeth the truth¹ may enter in.

3 Thou wilt keep him^a in perfect 'peace, to the amazement of all beholders, draw both Jews and Gentiles to himself; and at last, for the eternal manifestation of his glorious perfections, translate his whole kingdom to the celestial mansions above.

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 1-5. All the desolations which thou hast made in the cities of the heathen are the execution of thy purposes and fulfilment of thy word: and thereby shall the stoutest of thine enemies be obliged to acknowledge thy almighty power and strict justice. And as thou hast formerly protected and comforted thy people when furiously assaulted and distressed by their powerful enemies, thou shalt continue, with infinite ease, to baffle the most furious attempts of thine adversaries, and to reduce them and their posterity to ruin. 6-9. In Judea, but chiefly in the firmly-founded and wide-spread gospel church, shall the Lord exhibit, offer to, and bestow on sinful men of all nations, the spiritual and eternal blessings of his new kingdom, feast them on the flesh and blood of his Son, remove their ignorance and guilt, redeem them from death, comfort them against grief, remove the tokens of his anger, and enable them to triumph in himself and his salvation. 10-12. And while he dwells with, delights in, and protects believers, he shall everywhere, and with infinite ease, utterly destroy all those who reject Christ.

Ver. 1. I will exalt thee. Who is the speaker of these words? Isaiah, or some other? Is not the speaker 'the Lord of hosts,' 'manifest in the flesh,' 'before his ancients gloriously?' Comp. Ro. 15.9 with Ps. 18.49. See also ch. 26.19, 20, where none but Messiah can be the speaker. C.

Ver. 2. Made of a city an heap. The last city mentioned by the prophet is in ch. 24.10, 'the city of confusion,' which is Babylon. Babylon natural being long a shapeless ruin—a heap—the emblem of the ruin to which Babylon mystical is yet to be reduced.—A palace of strangers. Babylon is called 'a palace of strangers,' because of the rich and princely visitors drawn by interest or curiosity to visit and reside in it; or of its warlike enemies drawn by cupidity and ambition to invade and take possession of it. C.

Ver. 6. A feast. The gospel is frequently represented under the emblem of a feast, Mat. 8.11; Lu. 14.16; 22.29, 30.—Fat things—the emblem of abundance and prosperity, Ge. 41.26, 29.—Wines—wine, the emblem of the restorative power of the gospel promises, Is. 45.1, 2.—On the lees—refined mechanically by rest, and chemically by mutual agency of the parts, from all turbid and feculent mixture, the emblem of a church purified from all false doctrine, heresy, and schism.—C.

Ver. 7. The veil that is spread over all nations. I will remove the 'veil of Moses' from the Jew, and him to see Christ in all the sacrifices, the only 'end of the law for righteousness;' and I will remove the veil of prejudice and antipathy through which the Gentiles have hitherto looked upon the Jews. Ver. 11. 'And he,' not the Lord, but Moab, 'shall spread forth his hands in midst thereof, as the swimmer stretcheth out his hands to swim;'—that is, Moab shall struggle as a drowning man:—but God shall bring down his pride, and the rapacity of his hands together.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice blessed is that people whose God is the Lord; and who have all his persons, perfections, purposes, promises, threatenings, and works engaged in their behalf! It is wicked, mad, and self-ruinous for the mightiest powers of hell or earth to injure them, or to attempt their destruction. Why then should not their lips be filled with his praise and honour all the day, who is so much to them, has done, does, can, and will do so much for their salvation in time and eternity? What a ground of grateful praise is it, that in Judah's land, on Calvary's mount, Jesus prepared himself, and all the fulness of God in him, to be our abundant provision! He finished transgression, and made an end of sin. He, through death, destroyed death and him that had the power of it, and secured an infinite fulness of light, life, and salvation for believers. What ground of praise is it that, in the gospel, he sets before sinners of the Gentiles all the fulness of God in himself, for our present and everlasting nourishment! And why not rejoice in him for that he has pledged his infallible promise, that heathenism, Popery, and everything sinful and ruinous, shall give place to his glory filling the whole earth, and to his being in heaven our everlasting ALL and IN ALL.

4 Trust¹ ye in the LORD for ever: for 'in the LORD JEHOVAH is everlasting strength.⁴

5 ¶ For¹ he bringeth down them that dwell on high; the 'lofty city, he layeth it low; he layeth it low, even to the ground; he bringeth it even to the dust.

6 The^a foot shall tread it down, even the feet of the poor, and the steps of the needy.

7 The way of the just is 'uprightness: thou, most² upright, dost 'weigh the path of the just.

8 Yea, in the 'way of thy judgments, O LORD, have we 'waited for thee; 'the desire of our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee.

9 With my soul 'have I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: for 'when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.

10 Let^a favour be showed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness: 'in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the LORD.

11 LORD, when 'thy hand is lifted up, they will not see: 'but they shall see, and be ashamed for their envy at the people; yea, 'the fire of thine enemies shall devour them.⁵

12 ¶ LORD, 'thou wilt ordain peace for us: for thou also hast 'wrought all our works in us.⁶

13 O LORD our God, 'other lords beside thee have had dominion over us: 'but 'by thee⁷ only will we make mention of thy name.⁸

14 They^a are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish.

15 Thou¹ hast increased the nation, O LORD, thou hast increased the nation; thou art glorified: thou hast 'removed it far unto all the ends of the earth.

16 LORD, 'in trouble have they visited thee, they poured out a prayer⁹ when thy chastening was upon them.

17 Like^a as a woman with child, that draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, and crieth out in her pangs; so have we been in thy sight, O LORD.

18 We^a have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind; we have not wrought any deliverance in the earth, neither have 'the inhabitants of the world fallen.¹

19 Thy^a dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead.

20 ¶ Come, my people, 'enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for 'a little moment, until the indignation be overpast.

21 For, behold, the LORD 'cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: 'the earth also shall disclose her blood,² and shall no more cover her slain.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The care of God over his vineyard. 7 His chastisements differ from judgments. 12 The restoration of the dispersed.

IN that^a day the LORD, with his sore, and great, and strong sword, shall punish 'leviathan the piercing¹ serpent, even leviathan that crooked serpent; and he shall slay 'the dragon that is 'in the sea.

powerful. 19. The Jewish nation, seemingly dead under the Assyrian ravages, the Chaldean captivity, and present dispersion, shall again revive and flourish. The gospel church shall be restored, after her decays, by the influence of a preached gospel: and at the last day every believer, through union to Jesus Christ, shall be raised to everlasting life. 20, 21. But as terrible troubles must come for the punishment of the wicked and the manifestation of their wickedness, it is necessary that every saint, by faith, repentance, and prayer, flee to God for protection, lay hold on his promises, and depend on his perfections and providences, till that time of fearful calamities be over.

Ver. 1. A strong city. The church is the city of God, Ps. 48:1; He. 12:22, including the idea of compactness, Ps. 122:3, or close fellowship and mutual dependence—rights of citizenship, Ep. 2:19—riches of commerce—thrones of judgment, and walls of defence, C.

Ver. 2. The gates. The gate of doctrine in principle, precept, and promise—and the gate of baptism into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Mat. 28:19, 20.—Keepeth the truth. There is no rational characteristic of the true church but keeping the truth as it is in Jesus, in profession of doctrine and power of godliness, Ja. 1:18, C.

Ver. 7. More literally, 'the way for the just is smoothness' (made even); 'smooth the highway of the just thou orderest.' C.

Ver. 9. In the night. During the dark period of national calamity. See Ps. 30:5, C.

Ver. 10. Will not behold the majesty of the Lord. The Jews could see no majesty in Jesus, mainly because he did not assume the forms of human pride, but came 'meek and lowly.' They would not acknowledge his power even when he cast out devils; they would not believe his witness, even when he rose from the dead, C.

Ver. 12. God works all his people's working, (1) by subduing their enemy, Ro. 8:7; (2) by giving them the will, Phi. 2:13; (3) by furnishing the power, He. 12:21; and (4) by prospering their undertakings, Ge. 39:3, C.

Ver. 15. Thou hast removed the nation, &c. This is not a prophecy of the removal of Israel from Canaan, nor their scattering among all nations, but of the final enlargement of the kingdom of the Christ, when 'the heathen shall be his inheritance, and the ends of the earth his possession.' C.

Ver. 19. Messiah, who was originally revealed as the seed of the woman, came in a body prepared, that he might do the will of his Father in the suffering of death: and so be crowned with glory and honour in the victory of the resurrection. Messiah must here be the speaker, as the prediction is true of him and not of another. Which reference of the passage to him is still farther confirmed by ver. 20, in which the speaker addresses Israel as their king, saying, 'Come, my people.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Truly blessed are they who have fled to Jesus Christ for refuge, and are encompassed by his promises and infinite perfections! No Christian character can be formed without a steadfast and exact adherence to God's truths. Truly righteous, upright, and humble saints are an inestimable blessing to nations and churches. Steady faith in God's perfections and promises produces much solid peace and composure of mind. If we trust in him firmly, we shall find ground to praise him constantly. And if we by faith put our strong enemies in his hand, he will easily bring them down. If with ardent desires we wait for him in every ordinance and providence, we shall quickly find him to our comfort. And the earlier and more earnest our supplications are, they will be the more graciously answered. Alas! how hardened are many hearts, that neither mercies can melt nor judgment awaken them! But it is good for us to draw near to God and renounce all his rivals! Whatever discouraging providences he may exercise us with for a while, confusion and ruin will overwhelm all his and our enemies at last. Let us therefore be sober, and hope to the end for his salvation. He quickens dead souls, revives dead churches, and will at last quicken our dead bodies, and make them like unto his glorious body. Under manifold troubles and injuries let us possess our souls in patience. The Judge stands at the door. Our afflictions, however sharp, will soon be over; and our protection in them, under the shadow of the Almighty, is both safe and sweet. But what awful discoveries will God make of men's sins when he rises up to punish them!

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 1. Tyrannical oppressors, strong, furious, crafty, and mischievous, are likened to leviathans, serpents, dragons, &c., especially if they dwell near such animals, as the kings of Assyria, Egypt, and Babylon did. 2, 3. The reformed Jewish nation and gospel church is likened to a vineyard bringing forth the choicest vines; because, being planted, watered, and protected by God, they abounded in good works. 4. Though I was angry with them, mine anger is turned away through Christ: but if hypocrites in the church, or profane persons without it, offer to contend with me, they may expect to be quickly destroyed. 5, 6. Jews and true church members shall, as reconciled through Christ, be firmly settled, and shall increase in numbers and glory. 7-9. Nor will God afflict his own people in the same wrathful and ruinous manner as he does their heathen or antichristian eneevery moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

4 Fury¹ is not in me: who would set the briers and thorns against me in battle? I would go through² them, I would burn them together.

5 Or let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me.

6 He³ shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.

7 ¶ Hath he smitten him, as he smote those⁴ that smote him? or is he slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?⁵

8 In⁶ measure, when it shooteth forth,⁶ thou wilt debate with it:⁷ he⁸ stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind.

9 By⁹ this, therefore, shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin; when he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalk stones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and images⁹ shall not stand up.

10 Yet¹⁰ the defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: there shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof.

11 When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: the women come and set them on fire; for it is a people of no understanding:¹¹ therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will show them no favour.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall beat off¹² from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the great trumpet¹³ shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 The prophet threateneth Ephraim for their pride and drunkenness. 5 The residue shall be advanced in the kingdom of Christ. 7 He rebuketh their error, their untowardness to learn, 14 and their carnal security. 16 Christ, the sure foundation, is promised. 18 Their security shall be tried. 23 They are incited to the consideration of God's discreet providence.

WOE to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty is a fading flower, which are¹ on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome² with wine!

2 Behold, the LORD hath³ a mighty and strong one,⁴ which, as a tempest of hail, and a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand.

3 The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden under feet:⁵

4 And the glorious beauty which is on the head of the fat valley shall be a fading flower, and as the hasty⁶ fruit before the summer; which, when he that looketh upon it seeth, while it is yet in his hand he eateth⁷ it up.

5 ¶ In that day shall the LORD of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue⁸ of his people,

6 And for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate.⁹

7 ¶ But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way: the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment.

8 For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean.¹

9 ¶ Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts.

10 For precept must be² upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little:

* ch. 1. 3. 27. 11. 53. 1. Je. 6. 10. 4. 22. 8. 7. 5. 4. 5. Ho. 4. 6. 2 Ti. 3. 7. or Mat. 23. 4. 15. 8. 9. Col. 2. 21. 8 Or, hath been.

troubles, their enemies lose more in the end. Troubles must either destroy the sin or the sinner. And if mitigated troubles be merciful, sanctified ones are much more so. How provoking to God and ruinous to men is ignorance of God under the means of knowledge and grace! But how marvellous is it that, by the most terrible outward calamities, he should pave the way to remarkable mercies, and that the ruin and scattering of nations should introduce a gathering to Jesus Christ and his worship, nay, to his heavenly mansions! And notwithstanding all the opposition of hell and earth, no faithful soul shall come short either of grace here or glory hereafter.

CHAPTER XXVIII. Ver. 1-4. The proud state and drunken nation of the Israelites shall quickly be robbed of their present transitory power and honour. The Assyrians, furiously invading their country, shall irresistibly, easily, and suddenly reduce them to debasement and misery, lay desolate their country, and seize on their wealth. 5. 6. But the kingdom of Judah shall be marvellously preserved and continued in their relation to God; their magistrates shall be endowed mies; but will so mitigate their troubles as that they may be able to bear them; and make them means of stirring them up to repentance and reformation, particularly in detesting and destroying their idolatrous altars, groves, and images. 10, 11. Nevertheless to punish the stupidity and blindness of the present generation, and their imitators in wickedness, the defenced cities shall be laid desolate, and the palaces become pastures for flocks and herds. The whole country shall be exposed to the ravage of the most weak and contemptible enemies. 12, 13. By the providence of God, and proclamation of Cyrus, the Jews shall be brought back to their own land from Chaldea and from Egypt, and shall build the temple and restore the worship of God at Jerusalem. In the latter days they shall be gathered from the east and west, north and south, and shall embrace the Christian faith, and from every quarter shall God, in the apostolic and millennial periods, gather men to the church and worship of Jesus Christ.

Ver. 1. The book of Revelation describes a period during which 'the woman,' the emblem of the persecuted church, hides herself in the wilderness, Re. 12. 6, 14, which well corresponds to the admonition, Is. 26. 20. At the same time (Re. 12. 9) the dragon, the old serpent, is cast out, which well accords with the prophecy in the text—the destruction of leviathan, 'the dragon that is in the sea.' C.

Ver. 4-6. THE VINEYARD replies—'I have no wall for my defence! O that I had a defence of the thorn and the brier!' JEHOVAH speaks—'Against them should I march in battle, I should burn them up together. Ah! let her rather take hold of my protection!' THE VINEYARD replies—'Let him make peace with me, peace let him make with me!' JEHOVAH speaks—

'They that come of the root of Jacob shall flourish' (Louv. 14). C. Ver. 9. By this fatherly chastisement shall Jacob's children be purged of their evil inclinations; and all the fruit, ver. 6, of my tending and watering shall be the removal of idolatry, the national sin that has hitherto most easily entangled them. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No enemy is too strong for God to deal with; and his remarkable deliverances tune his people's hearts to praise him. Being infinitely dear and precious to him, his church can never fail, nor any true member miss the joy of faith. He, as reconciled in Christ, delights to reconcile the world to himself, and bless men with all spiritual blessings in him: but it is infinitely hazardous to set ourselves in opposition to him. Never are our troubles on earth so sharp, but it is a mercy that they are not heavier; and when God inflicts one sore judgment he ordinarily restrains another. Whatever the saints lose in their 11 For with ²stammering lips,⁴ and another tongue, will he speak⁵ to this people.

12 To whom he said, ¹This is the rest where- with ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing: ²yet they would not hear.

13 But the word of the LORD was unto them precept upon precept,⁶ precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; ³that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

14 ¶ Wherefore ¹hear the word of the LORD, ye scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem:

15 Because ye have said, ¹We have made a covenant with death,⁷ and with hell are we at agreement; ²when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made ³lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves:

16 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ¹I lay in Zion for a foundation ²a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: ³he that believeth shall not make haste.⁸

17 ¶ Judgment⁴ also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet; and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding-place.

18 And ¹your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it.⁹

19 From⁵ the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and ²it shall be a vexation only to understand the report.¹

with wisdom and prudence, and their armies with courage and valour to pursue the enemy. 7-13. But they too, their priests and prophets not excepted, are so stupefied with drunkenness, error, and superstition, that there is no possibility of instructing them, however frequently the same things be repeated to them; therefore God shall send among them the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans, who shall instruct them by repeated and ruinous strokes. And since they have refused to hearken to God's promises, and the offers of his Son and salvation, as the only sure and effectual means of comfort and happiness, their refractory despising of his repeated invitations shall issue in their ruin. 14, 15. And because you, rulers of Judah, deride God's threatenings, and boast that, by confederacies and other political devices, you have secured yourselves and your nation from danger; 16. Behold God exhibits and offers to you his precious Christ, as the sole foundation of solid hope, and the only sure refuge in time of trouble, on whom whosoever believeth need take no unlawful means to escape or get out of trouble. 17-22. But such of you as reject him shall have all your vain hopes frustrated. The Assyrians shall certainly ravage the country: nor shall your confederacies and carnal politics in the least protect you from their fury. They shall quickly involve you in misery; nay, the very rumour of their approach shall fill you with consternation and anguish. None of your devices to which you have trusted will secure you, while, contrary to his usual method, God shall employ his almighty power for the destruction of a great part of his professed people; and if ye despise his threatenings, ye shall be enslaved by the Assyrians and others: for he has determined to accomplish, by sword, famine, pestilence, and captivity, the utter destruction of the Israelites, and of a great part of the kingdom of Judah. 27, 28. In the eastern countries, wheat was beaten out from the husk by drawing a kind of drag with iron wheels over it.

Ver. 1. Woe to the crown of pride. Samaria was beautifully situated on a hill, and surrounded by a rich valley; and its position and splendour naturally suggested the idea of a crown upon the head of a monarch.—Drunkards. Not merely habitual drunkards from wine, but persons intoxicated with pride and self-will beyond reasoning, and regardless of warning. C.

Ver. 2. With the hand. Not beating off a few topmost gleanings, as in ch. 27, 12, but plucking the best and ripest 'with the hand.' C.

Ver. 3. To the drunkards it is impossible to communicate instruction, it can only be communicated to those who have been converted and become as little children, Mat. 18, 3. C.

Ver. 13. The word of the Lord was 'precept upon precept,' that the rejection of it being manifest, his righteousness might be manifest also in his judicial deliverance of them to their own devices, wherein they should 'fall backward, be broken, snared, and taken.' C.

Ver. 15. For we have made lies our refuge, &c. Not that they admitted either the thought or word, that they had adopted 'lies and falsehood' as their refuge and covering, but boasted of principles and practices which, though their sophistry, self-sufficiency, and idolatrous inclinations had persuaded them to be true and

rendered 'bread'
corn means 'bread',
then the grain from which bread is usually made; that is wheat.
The latter signification it has here. The mode of threshing wheat is this—It is spread out to the depth of two feet or more upon the circular
threshing-floor.
A yoke of oxen or horses is then attached to the threshing-instrument, and are driven round and round over the grain
until the straw is reduced to powder. It is this process which is expressed by the Hebrew word translated 'bruised.' It does not mean that the grain is bruised,

only the straw—P.

41 The Hebrew word
rendered 'bread'
corn means 'bread',
then the grain from which bread is usually made; that is wheat.
The latter signification it has here. The mode of threshing
wheat is this—It is spread out to the depth of two feet or more upon the circular
threshing-floor.
A yoke of oxen or horses is then attached to the threshing-instrument, and are driven round and round over the grain
until the straw is reduced to powder. It is this process which is expressed by the Hebrew word translated 'bruised.' It does not mean that the grain is bruised,

only the straw—P.

14 Therefore, ^{behold}, I will proceed to ^{do} a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: ^{for} the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

17 ¶ Is it not yet a ^{very} little while, and ^{Lebanon} shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a ^{forest}?

18 And in that day ^{shall} the deaf hear the taiser to hurl men quickly into the depths of disgrace, poverty, and damnation, than pride and drunkenness. God faithfully honours and blesses the nation which conforms to the principles of righteousness. But thrice happy are those to whom Jesus Christ, and God in him, are their glory and crown. Base corruptions often continue, even amidst the most candid and zealous attempts towards reformation. But it is shameful and ill-boding when priests and prophets are partners in their stupidity, and ringleaders in superstition and wickedness. What multitudes obstinately live in ignorance or rejection of God's truth! But if they refuse to hear his word, he will make them feel his rod: and none shall feel it more certainly than proud scorners and obstinate refusers of Jesus Christ. How rich is the grace of God, in exhibiting Jesus as a Saviour to men, when they have eminently ripened themselves for his judgment! Eternally safe are they who trust in him, when all other refuges fail, when all carnal projects and self-righteousness prove lies in their right hand.—But what sovereignty, wisdom, holiness, and equity does God manifest in forming and timing every judgment which he inflicts!

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 1, 2. Jerusalem is called ARIEL, from the altar of burnt-offering which devoured the offerings sacrificed upon it.—Notwithstanding all their sacrifices and pretended devotions, both city and temple shall be brought into great straits,—and filled with fire, blood, and carcasses of men, a great sacrifice. 3, 4. By the enemies whom I shall appoint against you, your present haughtiness and scoffing shall be turned into great debasement, distress, and submission. 5-8 doth perhaps not only denounce the sudden destruction of their enemies by the fearful judgments of God, but also the ruin of the Jews' auxiliaries and armies, and their own terrible distress, while their enemies were quite insatiable in devouring and destroying. 9-12. With amazement ponder and bewail your condition, and cry for deliverance; for all ranks are besotted with corrupt principles, unsteadiness, and stupidity; and neither ignorant nor learned either understand or regard the warnings of God. 13-16. Because their religious devotion is merely in outward appearance, while the most abominable wickedness reigns in their heart, and merely an observance of the commands of Hezekiah, or the traditions of the elders, I will punish them with astonishing miseries, baffle all the deep-laid projects of their politicians, and give up their doctors to amazing stupidity. All their subtle devices, for perverting the order which I have fixed, shall be as easily altered as clay by the potter, and as ineffectual to accomplish their designs as clay without a potter. 17-21. Amazing changes shall happen on fields and nations: the long-barren Gentile world being converted to Christ, and rendered fruitful in good works, while the Jews shall be rejected because of their unbelief. The unconcerned and ignorant Gentiles shall be brought to the knowledge of God in Christ; and, amidst affliction and poverty, shall rejoice in himself and his favours; while their proud and powerful enemies, who watched for opportunities of doing mischief, and who hated reproof, and persecuted the prophets and ministers of God, and for a trifling consideration perverted justice, shall be destroyed. 22-24. And notwithstanding the distresses or rejection of the Jews, the church shall be gloriously enlarged, to the great comfort of the pious Jews and honour of God; and multitudes of the most wicked and obstinate opposers shall be converted, especially in the coming period.

Ver. 10. God pours out mercy—heedless sinners disregard and pervert it. God threatens judgments, but habitual sin, acting like an opiate on the body, has drugged their consciences into insensibility: they refuse to awake; they love to slumber and dream. Wherefore God gives them over judiciously to their own ways, and is so said to 'pour out the spirit of deep sleep' upon them. Yet he pours out the spirit, not to induce them to sleep; but he gives them up to it as a punishment, because they refuse to awake. C.

Ver. 14. As the point of the finger applied to the eye can exclude the sun and the world, so one single erroneous opinion can exclude the Sun of Righteousness and eternity. The single principle of self-righteousness blinded the Pharisees in the days of our Lord. The same principle, alas! continues to blind the unreformed churches; and beneath its baleful influence 'wisdom still perishes'—understanding is hid.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Formal hypocrites may go on long in a round of external duties; but dreadful and debasing is the judgment of God which awaits them, and which awaits the chastisers even of his provoking people. His judgments make the stoutest hearts to bow or to break. Fearful is their condition who are drunk with the love of pleasures, honours, or wealth, or with corrupt principles and prejudices; or who are so abandoned to spiritual stupidity, that the best means can neither enlighten nor awake them. Alas! how wicked, how villainous is it to approach God in outward forms of devotion while we hate him in our heart, and worship him only from regard to the authority of men! Absurd and fruitless is every scheme which is carried on independent of and in opposition to God. But thrice happy is it to have external calamities balanced with subsequent spiritual blessings; and that the casting away of the Jews has issued in the reconciling of the Gentile world to him;—and in some future period, how much more shall their fullness!

CHAPTER XXX. Ver. 1-5. Dreadful ruin shall overtake those Israelites and Jews who, without regarding my counsel, increase their wickedness, by taking unwarrantable methods for their own protection and deliverance. 6, 7. They send whole loads of presents upon asses and camels southward into Egypt, which will but hurt instead of helping them, and will soon be as miserable as themselves. But their only way to secure themselves is to stay at home, and trust in and words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

19 The² meek also shall increase³ their joy in the LORD, and "the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

20 For "the terrible one is brought to nought, and the scorner is consumed, and "all that watch for iniquity are cut off:

21 That "make a man an offender for a word,⁴ and lay a snare for him that "reproveth in the gate, "and turn aside the just for a thing of nought.

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD, who "redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, "Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.

23 But when he seeth "his children, the work of mine hands, in the midst of him, they shall sanctify⁵ my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel.

24 They⁶ also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding,⁵ and they that murmured⁶ shall learn doctrine.

12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise "this word, and trust in oppression¹ and perverseness, and stay thereon:

13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you "as a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall,² whose breaking cometh suddenly at an instant.

14 And he shall break it as the breaking of the potter's vessel³ that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: so that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water without out of the pit.

15 For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, "In returning⁴ and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength; and "ye would not.

wait upon God for his help. See ver. 15. 9-17. And since this rebellious and hypocritical people will disregard my admonitions, and require my prophets to forbear delivering my messages, unless they flatter their humours and lusts, they shall quickly find themselves, and their carnal confidences, all shattered to pieces. And since they refuse to stay at home, and turn to and trust in me, but will trust to their Egyptian allies, the Assyrians shall pursue and scatter them till only a few stragglers be left. 18-26. Nevertheless the Lord will wait for a fit season to deliver you, and will, in infinite wisdom, glorify his own perfections in working graciously for you. Notwithstanding Sennacherib's attempts, and the attempts of all your other enemies, ye shall safely dwell in Jerusalem; ye shall return thither from your Chaldean captivity; and in the latter days shall, to your inexpressible comfort and happiness, be converted to Christ and his church. And whatever adversities you may quickly suffer, you shall then have plenty of public ordinances and teachers, and be remarkably directed in all your ways. Ye shall, with the utmost detestation, relinquish your idolatries, and destroy every monument thereof. While your fields and hills produce plentiful crops of corn, grass, vines, &c., your nation shall bring forth multitudes of converts, and fruits of righteousness, to the glory of God. And while your proud enemies, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-Greeks, Antichristians, and Turks, are brought down, great and amazing shall be your refreshment, knowledge, comfort, and vigour. 27-33. For, behold, to your sudden and inexpressible joy, the Lord, in the execution of his purposes and predictions, will with great ease, but in a most terrible and sudden manner, destroy the Assyrian army in the valley of Hinnom, before Jerusalem, as a prelude of similar ruin to the rest of your adversaries.

Ver. 6. This verse should either begin a new chapter or paragraph, for there can be no reason for understanding the word burden in any sense but that of a heavy judgment denounced, as in ch. 13. 1, &c.—Beasts of the south. Not the beasts that carry southward, but the men of whom the ravenous lion and venomous reptile are the emblems. C.

Ver. 7. Their strength is to sit still. Not to sit still in idleness; but to sit still in the land of promised blessing, waiting in faith, hope, and prayer for the salvation of God. C.

Ver. 10, 11. The prophet does not mean that they used the very words of ver. 10, 11; but that their words, when rightly interpreted, had the meaning he assigns. C.

Ver. 14. Not be found. . . a sherd to take fire from the hearth. The culinary vessels in most Asiatic countries are generally of earthenware. Should the fire be extinguished, a potsherd carries a little borrowed fire: the want of even a potsherd is an emblem of the deepest poverty. C.

Ver. 18. And therefore. Yet "notwithstanding" all your self-will and neglect of his counsel, "the Lord will wait," &c. C.

Ver. 19. Thou shalt weep no more. This refers to a time not yet arrived, and synchronizes with the blessed period foretold, Re. 21. 4, when "God shall wipe away all tears," and "there shall be neither sorrow nor crying." C.

Ver. 21. Shall hear a word behind thee, &c. If ye "turn to the right or the left to do evil," and go for a moment astray, you will hear the voice of your teachers, who lately stood "before your eyes," ver. 20, now calling from "behind you," saying, "Turn ye, turn ye," this is the way, walk ye in it. C.

Ver. 24. Some ancient paintings exhibit the Egyptian method of winnowing grain, either by lifting it and letting it fall through the air in front of the winnower or throwing it over his shoulder, as is still practised in some of the northern parts of Europe. In these paintings, each winnower is attended by an assistant, with a short shovel or scoop, to lift the grain into the fan, one species of which seems a light and broad tray with a short handle.—Note. Though this prophecy may be considered literal—for godliness is profitable unto all things—yet it is chiefly to be regarded as emblematic of gospel tillage, gospel pasture, gospel labours, and abundance of grace, mercy, and peace. C.

Ver. 33. Tophet signifies a drum; which name is supposed to have been given on account of drums being used to drown the cries of the children that were there offered to Molech. It was considered a striking emblem of the place of "everlasting punishment." The commencement of this prophecy lies in the destruction of the army of Sennacherib; its conclusion in the destruction of the "man of sin"—"antichrist"—"the wilful king"—"whom the

BARRACKS AT THE CITADEL, CAIRO—THE MOST INFLUENTIAL CITY OF EGYPT, AND SUPPOSED TO STAND IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL LIVED IN EGYPT. [Isaiah, xxx: 1-3.]—"Woe to the rebellious children, saith the Lord, that take counsel, but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may add sin to sin: that walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth; to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt! Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion." We give a picture of the barracks at the citadel in Cairo. Standing upon this hill overlooking the most interesting city in Egypt, it is easy to see how true were the words of Isaiah quoted above. The strength of Egypt has always been its shame and the shame of all who have looked to her for help. The enormous wealth which from age to age has been extracted from the fertile soil of this ancient land has been used to corrupt and degrade the ruling class, and to oppress and make unendurable the lives of the laboring classes.

19 For the people shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem; thou shalt weep no more: he will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he will answer thee.

20 And though the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction,⁷ yet shall⁸ not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

21 And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.

22 Ye⁹ shall defile also the covering of thy graven images of silver,⁸ and the ornament of thy molten images of gold: thou shalt cast⁹ them away as a menstruous cloth; thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence.

23 Then⁹ shall he give the rain of thy seed, that thou shalt sow the ground withal; and bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plenteous: in that day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures.

24 The oxen likewise, and the young asses that ear the ground,¹ shall eat clean³ provender, which hath been winnowed with the shovel and with the fan.

25 And there shall be upon every high mountain, and upon every high hill, rivers and streams of waters in the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall.⁵

26 Moreover, the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the LORD bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The prophet sheweth the cursed folly of trusting in Egypt, and forsaking of God. 6 He exhorteth to conversion. 8 He sheweth the fall of Assyria.

WOE to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong: but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!

2 Yet he also is wise, and will bring evil, and will not call back¹ his words: but will arise against the house of the evil-doers, and against the help of them that work iniquity.

3 Now the Egyptians are men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he Lord will consume by the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy by the brightness of his coming,' 2 Th. 2.8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Men are too fond of trusting to human help in their distress, and too careless of that which is divine. But what is got without the Lord's leave cannot be of any real service, but hurt. The notorious wickedness of professors justifies God's severest judgments against them.—It is infinitely criminal and hazardous for men to tempt God's ministers to unfaithfulness in delivering his messages. God frequently gives them up to delusion who incline to it; and punishes such as scoff at his admonitions with fearful, certain, and unavoidable ruin. There is no way of escaping his judgments but by a believing and penitent turning to himself. And if, notwithstanding thousands of provocations and judgments, he still waits to be gracious, earnestly ought we to wait and cry for his favours. Persevering faith and prayer always issue in substantial and lasting comforts. Great is the mercy to have an open access to Jesus Christ's ministers and ordinances, and to be directed in every step by God's teaching Spirit and a tender conscience. Detestable to exercised saints are their formerly beloved lusts, and precious are spiritual blessings. The relief of God's people, and the fall of the wicked, are marvellously connected. In his anger he blasts, overflows, sifts, bridges, beats, and burns up his most proud and powerful opposers with the greatest ease! Having therefore received a kingdom that cannot be moved, let me have grace, wherewith I may serve him acceptably with reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire.

CHAPTER XXXI. Ver. 2, 3. As wise as you think yourselves, God will countermined all your subtle contrivances, and bring effectual ruin upon both you and your Egyptian helpers. 4. 5. Undismayed by all the noise, boasting, and blasphemy of the Assyrians, God shall, with almighty force, furiously encounter and devour them; but tenderly defend Jerusalem, as a bird doth its nest, or as the angel did the Israelites when he destroyed the Egyptians. 8, 9. By the immediate judgment of God shall the Assyrian army be generally destroyed; and Sennacherib himself, with the poor remains, terrified by the visible tokens of God's wrath, shall flee home to Nineveh his capital.—God had his sanctuary and altar in Jerusalem, and there he appeared, like a fire, to defend his people, and consume his enemies.

Ver. 1. Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help. To go to Egypt for help was a direct and wilful breach of the divine law. De. 28. 68, but the prophecy virtually denounces every unlawful means of seeking deliverance from danger—especially seeking the assistance of wicked men, upon the ground of any adoption of their principles or countenance of their practices. C.

Ver. 5. 'As the mother-birds fluttering over their brood, so shall JEHOVAH of hosts defend Jerusalem, protecting and delivering—springing over to her rescue.' And whoever has actually witnessed the courage of a mother-bird, whether domestic or wild, when called to the defence of her young, will not fail to admire the beauty and power of the image. C.

Ver. 9. The Lord whose fire is in Zion, &c. Whose fire of the Spirit is in Zion, the seat of ordinances—and whose furnace of judgment is in Jerusalem, the seat of government. C.

that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like¹ as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him, he will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the noise² of them: so shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for mount Zion, and for the hill thereof.

5 As⁴ birds flying, so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it, and passing over he will preserve it.

6 ¶ Turn¹ ye unto him from whom the children of Israel have "deeply revolted."

7 For in that day⁴ every man shall "cast away his idols of silver, and his idols of gold,"⁵ which your own hands have made unto you for a sin.

8 ¶ Then² shall the Assyrian fall with the sword, not of a mighty man; and the sword, not of a mean man, shall devour him: but he shall flee from⁶ the sword, and his young men shall be "discomfited."

9 And he shall pass over to his stronghold⁹ for fear,¹ and his princes shall be afraid of the ensign, saith the LORD, whose "fire is in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem."

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 The blessings of Christ's kingdom. 9 Desolation is foreshown. 15 Restoration is promised to succeed.

BEHOLD, a¹ king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

2 And² a man shall be as an hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great¹ rock in a weary land.²

3 And⁶ the eyes of them that see shall not be dim: and the ears of them that hear shall hearken.

4 The heart also of the rash³ shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly.⁴

REFLECTIONS.—Many wickedly go far for human help, and to no purpose, when they might have help from God at hand to infinite advantage. But the more we know of men we shall trust them the less; and the more we know of God we shall trust him the more. It is an atheistical disbelief of his all-sufficiency that ever makes us depart from him to depend on a creature: and when we do so, we may expect to have it ruined along with ourselves. But happy are believers whom God defends with infinite compassion and almighty power. His promises are an infallible ground of faith; his goodness ought to lead the greatest rebels against him to a kindly repentance; and every remarkable deliverance should be attended with remarkable reformation. But great is the ruin and the terror which await his implacable foes!

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 1-8. Hezekiah and his princes and officers shall govern in equity and wisdom; shall protect the oppressed, promote the instruction of the subjects in the laws of God, and treat every one according to his real character, bad or good.—Jesus shall erect and govern his church in the most righteous manner, and his apostles and ministers shall wisely dispense his ordinances. He shall protect, refresh, quicken, and comfort his people in all their tribulations. Such as have spiritual knowledge shall have it greatly increased; and even the inconsiderate shall be made to know, and the weak to declare, the things of God with great distinctness. Worthless, hypocritical, and mischievous oppressors shall be detected and debarred from offices or honours, while they who are liberal and upright shall be visibly blessed and prosper. 9-14. Terrible shall be the distress and anguish of those cities and wanton women, who, by their pride and vanity, provoked God to wrath; when, through the ravage of the enemy, neither milk, nor corn, nor wine shall be found, but the whole land be turned into, and for many years or ages continued, a desolate wilderness. 15-20. But when God shall pour forth his Spirit, mighty changes shall ensue, and great revivals in souls, in churches, and nations shall be wrought. The gospel shall be received, and righteous judgments executed everywhere. Great shall be the peace and royal prosperity of true believers, even while the unbelieving Jews, or others, shall be fearfully destroyed. And great shall be the success of ministers in the conversion of multitudes to Christ.

Ver. 1. Of no king, except Messiah, could it ever be absolutely said that 'he reigned in righteousness'; this is therefore a prophecy of his accession and government.—Princes. The apostles of our Lord, who, during their lives, ruled the churches in holy judgment, as may be seen Ac. 15. 28, 29, and who, by their doctrines, decisions, and institutions, still continue to rule in word and discipline. C.

Ver. 2. The shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Not merely a shadow to protect from the heat, but the shadow of a great rock to defend from enemies. C.

* And his (the Assyrian's) rock (his strength) from fear shall pass away, and his strength shall be afraid of a standard (or signal, as denoting the presence of an enemy), saith Jehovah, to whom there is a fire in Zion and a furnace in Jerusalem.

The true explanation of the last clause seems to be that which supposes an allusion both to the sacred fire on the altar, and to the consuming fire of God's presence, whose altar flames in Zion and whose wrath shall thence flame to destroy his enemies' (Alexander).—P.

5 The^d vile person shall be no more called liberal, nor the churl said to be bountiful.

6 For^e the vile person will speak villany, and his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD, to make empty the soul of the hungry, and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.

7 The^g instruments also of the churl are evil: he deviseth wicked devices to destroy the poor with lying words, even when the needy speaketh right.⁵

8 But^h the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.⁶

9 ¶ Rise up, ye women that are at ease; hear my voice, ye careless daughters; give ear unto my speech.

10 Many days and years⁷ shall ye^j be troubled, ye careless women: for the vintage shall fail, the gathering shall not come.

11 Tremble,^k ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones: strip you, and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins.

12 They shall lament for the teats, for the pleasant fields,⁸ for the fruitful vine.

13 Uponⁿ the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers, yea,⁹ upon all the houses of joy in the joyous city:

14 Because^p the palaces shall be forsaken; the multitude of the city shall be left; the forts and towers shall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks;

15 ¶ Until^q the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest.

16 Then^r judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field.

17 And^t the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever.

Ver. 6. This description corresponds with the picture which our Lord draws of the scribes and Pharisees, Mat. 23. 14, 23. C.

Ver. 8. The liberal deviseth liberal things. This was accurately fulfilled in our Saviour's charge to his apostles, Mat. 10. 8.

'Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.' C.

Ver. 9. Women and daughters might, no doubt, be understood as emblematic titles for cities and villages; but the words may well be understood literally. In this view the warning seems specially directed to women, seeking to recall them to thoughtfulness and repentance; because society can never be meliorated and reformed, so long as mothers are sunk in indolence, infatuated by gaiety, careless of the instruction of their children, and indifferent to the welfare of the church. C.

Ver. 11, 12. 'Upon your loins, upon your breasts, mourn ye for the pleasant field, for the fruitful vine.' C.

Ver. 13. This prophecy may be seen awfully verified in the wretched condition of houses and fields in the Holy Land. C.

Ver. 14. For ever. Not 'for ever' in its unlimited sense; but 'for ever' 'until (ver. 15) the Spirit be poured from on high.' C.

Ver. 17. There is no righteousness but what arises from the finished work of Christ. This 'work' was 'peace,' because Christ is our peace; 'the effect' is 'quietness of conscience, Ro. 5. 1; and 'assurance of acceptance with God,' Ep. 1. 6, because it is certain that Christ the righteous, our Advocate, 1 Jn. 2. 1, and Head, Ep. 1. 22, is not only always heard, Jn. 11. 42, but already accepted, He. 9. 14. C.

Ver. 19. Hail is the emblem of judgments, ch. 30. 30; forest, the emblem of the church renovated by the outpouring of the Spirit, ver. 15; the city, Ariel, ch. 29. 1, of which it is said, ch. 29. 3. 'Thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground,' &c. But after these disasters of 'hail,' and 'bringing low,' the people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in quiet resting-places. C.

power. I will render all the Assyrians' plots fruitless; and their rage against my people shall be revenged in their own sudden and fearful destruction. 13, 14. All around them shall be alarmed; and even the hypocritical Jews terrified, lest like judgments, or damnation in hell, should seize on themselves. 15-24. The righteous, who labour to avoid every evil, however gainful or pleasant, shall be safely preserved and abundantly supplied. They shall behold Hezekiah in health, prosperity, and glory, and freely travel through the whole of Canaan. Nay, they shall, by faith, behold Jesus in his glory and the heavenly felicity. They shall, with solemn awe, wonder how suddenly the Assyrian army is destroyed or fled, and how safe Jerusalem is; and how marvellously the Lord has protected his people, answerably to his relations to them; and how, while the Assyrian army is irrecoverably shattered to pieces, and their spoil gathered by the feeble Jews, Hezekiah and his subjects are delivered from their sickness and distress, and have the tokens of the Lord's favour restored to them.—N.B. It is easy to apply the above explication to the deliverance from the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, or Antichristians.

21 But *there the glorious LORD will be unto as a place of broad rivers and streams;⁴ wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant hip pass thereby.

22 For the LORD is our judge, the LORD is our lawgiver,⁵ the LORD is our king; he will save us.

23 Thy tacklings are loosed;⁶ they could not well strengthen their mast; they could not spread the sail: then is the prey of a great spoil divided; the lame take the prey.

24 And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 The judgments wherewith God revengeth his church. 11 The desolation of her enemies. 16 The certainty of the prophecy.

COME near, ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people; let the earth hear, and all that is therein:¹ the world, and all things that come forth of it.

2 For the indignation of the LORD is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter.

3 Their slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcases, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood.

4 And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig-tree.

5 For my sword shall be bathed in heaven:³ behold, it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment.

6 The sword of the LORD is filled with blood; it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah,⁴ and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.

Ver. 1. This is not an address to Sennacherib, Antiochus Epiphanes, the Romans, or Gog and Magog; but to every unprovoked spoiler of God's people. It is a mirror, not a picture—and in it, successively, every spoiler beholds his own image; and though he may 'go his way, and forget what manner of man he is,' the woe will fall wherever the guilt has been incurred. C.

Ver. 2. This is a prayer of the church, alarmed for her safety, but trusting in her Redeemer as 'mighty to save.'—Ther arm. Whose arm? The arm, the strength and defence of those 'who sow beside all waters,' ch. 32. 20: for whom, as 'labouring in the word and doctrine,' the other members of the church thus fervently intercede. C.

Ver. 4. Your spoil. The address is to the unprovoked spoiler, ver. 1, whom the prophet compares to the caterpillar, the most ravenous and destructive of all living creatures, devouring many times its own bulk and weight of food in a day. Yet as that ravenous caterpillar devours the leaf, so shall a new spoiler, more destructive than his predecessor, spoil the spoiler of the people of God.—Shall he run. That is, the new spoiler, like locust bands, shall assail his predecessors. C.

Ver. 7. Their valiant ones. Ver. 5, 6 being taken as a parenthesis, the 'valiant ones' are the former spoilers upon whom the new spoiler, ver. 4, makes his tumultuous assault.—Ambassadors of peace. The messengers of the first spoiler attempting peace with the second. C.

Ver. 8. He hath broken the covenant. The new spoiler who had made a false peace with the messengers. C.

Ver. 17. They shall behold the land that is very far off. They shall see by faith, and seek in holiness, a country far off—'that is, an heavenly,' He. 11. 13-16. C.

Ver. 20. This address is to the Lord entreating a favourable regard: the reply is from God to his church. C.

Ver. 23. The address is to the ship, ver. 21, the emblem of an invading enemy, multitudinous as waters. C.

Ver. 24. The inhabitant of Zion, ver. 20, shall no more be sick, Re. 21. 4. The great Physician has healed all their souls, Mat. 9. 12. C.

7 And the unicorns⁵ shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be soaked⁶ with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness.

8 For it is the day of the LORD's vengeance, and the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion.

9 And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch.

10 It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever.⁷

11 But the cormorant⁸ and the bittern shall possess it; the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it: and he shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion,⁹ and the stones of emptiness.

12 They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none shall be there, and all her princes shall be nothing.

13 And thorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof; and it shall be an habitation of dragons, and a court for owls.²

14 The wild beasts of the desert³ shall also meet with the wild beasts of the island,⁴ and the satyr⁵ shall cry to his fellow; the screech-owl⁶ also shall rest there, and find for herself a place of rest.

15 There shall the great owl make her nest, and lay, and hatch, and gather under her shadow; there shall the vultures also be gathered, every one with her mate.

16 ¶ Seek ye out of the book of the LORD, and read; no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate:⁷ for my mouth it hath commanded, and his spirit it hath gathered them.

shall fall a sacrifice to their own sin. 11, 12. God finds the abominably wicked as with a line and plummet; and none shall be able to govern or help them. 16, 17. In the exact fulfilment of this prophecy shall the Spirit, power, and providence of God collect together, and preserve a succession of these doleful creatures, in these perpetually desolate habitations of wickedness.

Ver. 1. This prophecy is addressed to 'the kingdoms of this world,' and predicts a fearful political revolution, in which 'all rule and authority,' that stands opposed to 'God and his Christ,' shall be utterly, and for ever, subverted. It corresponds with the vision in Re. 19. 13-21. C.

Ver. 4. This dissolving and falling of the 'host of heaven' does not refer to the visible heavens and the end of the world (as will appear from the state that is to follow, ch. 36. 5-10), but to the dissolving and falling of all the political and ecclesiastical powers usurped by 'the beast and the false prophet,' Re. 19. 20. C.

Ver. 5. My sword . . . shall come down upon Idumea. It shall come upon Idumea as a commencement of the prophecy—a specimen and notice of the judgments to come. Nor is there any land, except that of Babylon, whose destruction seems so complete, or whose renovation seems so hopeless. Like judgments were foretold against both, and alike terrible to the nations that forgot God should be their fulfilment. C.

Ver. 9. Emblems of an overthrow as complete as that of Sodom and Gomorrah: while it is not improbable that the description may have been literally realized in volcanic eruptions. C.

Ver. 10. Irby and Mangies, after the greatest difficulties, got a sight of the ancient capital, but were not able to pass through the land.—See Keith on Prophecy. C.

Ver. 17. They shall possess it. That is, the wild beasts and birds of prey and solitude shall possess the forests, rivers, and ruined cities. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is proper that sinners should listen to God's threatenings, as he can quickly make them

But the less men provoke them to do evil, the more they provoke God in doing it. And whenever they have filled up the measure of their iniquities, God will awake to punish them. There is no fear of a church or nation while a spirit of prayer continues in it. They who wait on God shall never be forsaken by him. Nay, he often in his kindness exceeds their expectations, and always exalts himself by the judgments which he executes. And where he reigns in the heart, real safety and wealth attend him! True knowledge of his grace is the great stability of the soul; and the fear of God is the Christian's best treasure. They who condemn God are often imperious and abusive to men. But the more hardened and prosperous they are, the nearer is their terrible destruction. The most secure sinners shall be alarmed at last, and made to see God's hand in his judgments. Eternal despair shall at last appear dreadful to the most scornful! But great is the mercy if God's judgments in Zion should awaken her hypocritical professors to flee from the wrath to come to the almighty, the all-saving Jesus Christ! Great pity and comfort, safety and peace, order, health, and forgiveness attend his gracious deliverances! And thrice happy they who have him for their ALL IN ALL.

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 3-6. The mountains shall run down with large streams of the blood of slain persons. Dreadful shall be the confusion, desolation, and consternation everywhere; for my purposed judgments shall be executed upon the wicked who have given themselves to sin and persons of all ranks

GENERAL VIEW OF RAMLEH — NEAR THE PLAINS OF SHARON.

[Isaiah, xxxv:2.]—"It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon." From the top of the tower of Ramleh there may be had a magnificent view of the whole plain of Sharon, from the mountains of Judea and Samaria to the sea, and from the foot of Carmel to the sandy deserts of Philistia. It must have been some such point of view as this that Solomon had of the plain of Sharon when he sang of the roses of Sharon. Ramleh is three hours' ride from Joppa, on the great commercial thoroughfare from Egypt to Damascus. Ramleh is surrounded by fruitful gardens of the finest oranges. Here is the largest Latin Convent in Palestine, founded in 1420 by Philip of Burgundy. It is used as a home for Franciscan pilgrims.

REFLECTIONS.—God can quickly make the most amazing changes on countries and nations, either in mercy or in judgment. Glorious things are said of our New Testament church, especially in her apostolical and millennial periods. And her extent, comfort, light, life, holiness, and safety inconceivably exceeds that of the old. Believing truly in Jesus Christ's person and fullness effectually quicken, fructify, and comfort the heart. And an assured faith of his approach is sufficient to silence every fear and doubt. How wise are God's bestowals of his Word and Spirit! and how effectual for the illumination, quickening, encouragement, strengthening, and sanctification of men! The grace of the gospel teaches men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts; and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in his present world. Unspeakable is the joy and transcendent the happiness of ransomed men. Certainly and quickly that holiness, which is now

REFLECTIONS.—How quickly Providence fulfils some awful predictions! And people may meet with great distress in the way of their duty, in order that their faith may be exercised, their graces brightened, and their glory increased. Let us then always look out and prepare for it, and not wonder if our most impious and treacherous enemies for a time prevail

REFLECTIONS.—Death being the common fate of mankind, every one ought seriously to prepare for it.

MOSQUE OF OMAR—STANDING ON THE SITE OF THE TEMPLE OF SOLOMON.
 [ISAIAH, xl : 9.]—"O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God."
 The Mosque of Omar stands upon the site of the Holy Temple that constituted the center of Jewish life and history and worship. It was in the temple that the Jews were taught the knowledge of one God, and by means of the rites and ceremonies and symbols of the temple they were trained into their conception of God and man's duty to obey him, that made them a peculiar people. It is a sad reflection that upon this historic place should now stand a place of worship dedicated to one God, it is true, but where there is no longer taught that man is under obligation to love as himself his brother man.

Ver. 1. The second great division of the Book of Isaiah begins with this chapter. It is supposed to have been written towards the close of the prophet's life. It constitutes by far the most important part of his writings, and in some respects the most important part of the Old Testament. Its style is sublime; its subject the highest and holiest on which the human mind can dwell; its delineation of the work and character of the Messiah clear and full almost as the gospel narrative. It is this part of his writings which gives Isaiah a just title to the name 'evangelical prophet.' Professor Alexander has given the following clear summary of sins, without which it is impossible to obtain any true comfort. God easily removes every bar out of his way in coming to us. And it is necessary that we lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, in our approaches to him. It is a happy token of deliverance when our hearts are levelled by his grace, and made to behold his glory! Human power is little to be feared when against us, or trusted to when on our side! But infinite is the power, the faithfulness, the duration of the truths of Christ. Happy tidings are those which relate to him and his salvation! and happy is the period when he comes and performs all in all in and for his church; when he manifests his activity, care, and tenderness in gathering sinners to himself, and in bearing and nourishing them up to eternal life! What empty nothings are all creatures in comparison of him! Why then should we not trust him in every difficulty, cleave to him under every discouragement, and revere him in the receipt of every favour! What image can ever truly represent the infinite JEHOVAH! What idol can deserve a comparison with the Almighty Maker of heaven and earth! It is weak and sinful to suspect that he has or can cast no slavish or desponding fears, for I am your infinite ALL IN ALL; and I will strengthen, help, and uphold you by my almighty power, manifested in the righteous destruction of mine adversaries and deliverance of my people. All your enemies shall quickly be overwhelmed with confusion and ruin; for I will guide, strengthen, and keep you from falling. And however weak, despised, and oppressed you may be, I will enable you to subdue your most lofty, proud, and powerful adversaries, and make you to rejoice in and glorify me, as the author of all your privileges. 17-20. When poor indigent sinners are reduced to the most wretched condition, I will grant them comfort and relief; and will spread the gospel, and plant the ordinances thereof, and persons eminent for gifts and graces, among both Jews and Gentiles, in such a manner as will manifest my infinite power and holiness to every observer. 25-27. I foretell that Cyrus the Medo-Persian shall subdue the Chaldean and other empires. But which of your idols can manifest their true divinity by foretelling anything? It is only I, the eternal God, who can represent things future as if they were present, and enable prophets to foretell temporal or spiritual deliverances to my church.

Ver. 2. The righteous man. Abraham, who 'believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness,' Ro. 4. 3. C.

Ver. 5. The isles. The original word does not necessarily signify places surrounded by water, but places bordering on the deliverance of his people, and judgment of idolatrous nations, as in the case of Abraham (see note on ver. 2), the exodus and possession of Canaan, &c.—The ends of the earth were afraid. They were not moved to 'the fear of the Lord,' but to the fear of the Jews, and the overthrow of their beloved idolatry. C.

Ver. 6. They helped every one his neighbour. The nations associated against the truth, and in support of idolatry. See Ps. 83. 2-8, 42. C.

Ver. 9. Thou whom I have taken, &c. The address is here to Israel, as the 'seed of Abraham'—taken from the ends of the earth—chosen, and not cast away; consequently it is prophetic of an event yet to come, not descriptive of an event that is past. That event to come is the restoration of the Jews to the possession of their land, ver. 9, political power, ver. 11, 15, and the knowledge of Jesus the Holy One of Israel, ver. 16. C.

Ver. 11. That the destruction of their Babylonian and Syro-Grecian oppressors is the commencement of a series of events by which this prophecy will be accomplished, there can be no doubt

SITE OF JOSEPH'S WORKSHOP—WHERE CHRIST IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE WORKED AS A CARPENTER. [Isaiah, xlii:1-4.]—"Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench: he shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth, and the isles shall wait for his law." Joseph's workshop is pointed out in Nazareth as standing upon the site of the ancient shop where our Savior labored as a carpenter. Through the Christian ages Nazareth has been growing in interest and importance. Antoninus Martyr visited Nazareth in A. D. 600, and speaks of the reverence with which the place was held at that time, and compares it to a paradise on earth.

they are all of them snared⁵ in holes, and they are hid in prison-houses; they are for a prey, and none delivereth; for a spoil,⁶ and none saith, Restore.

23 Who^a among you will give ear to this? who will hearken, and hear for the time to come?⁷

24 Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the LORD, he against whom we have sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law.

25 Therefore^t he hath poured upon him⁸ the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle: and it hath set him on fire round about, yet he knew not; and it burned him, yet he laid it not to heart.

CHAPTER XLIII.

1 The Lord comforteth the church with gracious promises. 8 He calleth the people to witness his omnipotency. 14 He foretelleth the destruction of Babylon, 18 and his wonderful deliverance of his people. 22 He reproveth the neglect of his service.

BUT now thus saith the LORD that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O

Israel, Fear not; for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine.

2 When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee.¹

3 For I am the LORD thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour: I gave Egypt² for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee.

4 Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy life.³

5 Fear not; for I am with thee; I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west;

6 I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth;

7 Even every one that is called by my name: for I have created him for my glory, I have formed him; yea, I have made him.

the world. The fulfilment will reach away forward still into the distant future. P.

Ver. 7. Most probably an allusion to the cruel custom of putting out the eyes of prisoners, as illustrative of the cruelty of 'the god of this world,' blinding the mind of them who believe not, 2 Co. 4, 4, C.

Ver. 10. A new song. It is new, because it is the dictation of a new spirit, Eze. 11, 19, the outpouring of a new heart, Eze. 18, 31, C.

Ver. 11. 'The wilderness,' or midbar, is a pastoral, as contradistinguished from an agricultural country. Arabia is chiefly referred to. Though most of its inhabitants were nomads, roaming about in tents from pasture to pasture, yet it had always a considerable number of towns; it has them still in the very heart of the so-called desert. To these towns reference is here made. P.—Kedar. Arabians dwelling in movable tents, Ps. 120, 5; and these are contrasted with 'the inhabitants of the rock'—the people of Petra, who had the most permanent habitations cut in the sides of the mountains. And in these places was the blessed gospel preached by Paul, Ga. 1, 17, C.—The word translated 'rock' is sela, which is the ancient name of the 'rock city' of Petra, the capital of Idumea. It is probable that the word is here used as a proper name; and if so, the concluding clause of the verse is very expressive. Petra is situated in the very heart of the mountains; and some of its rock-hewn temples and houses are high up on the sides of the wild cliffs. P.

Ver. 14. At once the Lord overwhelmed the world by a flood; at once he destroyed Sodom; at once he smote the first-born in Egypt; at once he gave up Jerusalem to plunder, the temple to fire, and the remnant of the nation to death or exile; and at once he will smite Gog and Magog, and lay spiritual Babylon in ruins. C.

Ver. 15. The meaning is, that the mountain and hill sides, now covered with terraced vineyards and orchards, would be left desolate; that the streams, whose abundant waters irrigated and fertilized vast tracts of country, would be left completely dry; that the pools or cisterns, in which water was collected during the rainy season for the wants of man and beast, would be entirely exhausted. P.

Ver. 19. Who is blind but my servant? Who is this servant? Is he the servant upheld, even Christ? ver. 1, or is he Jacob, Israel personified? ch. 43, 22, comp. with ver. 10. Jacob is expressly called the chosen servant of the Lord, 1 Ch. 16, 13; see also 18, 44, 1, 2, 45, 4; 48, 20. Wherefore, considering how difficult, if not impossible, it is to apply blind and deaf to Messiah; and how easy, natural, and consistent with fact is their application to Jacob, it follows that of Jacob the passage is to be interpreted. C.

Ver. 20. Thou observest not. Observe them not—as evidences of the being, perfections, grace, and judgment of God.—Opening the ears. Opening the outward ears of others by the preaching of the law, but shutting his own inward ear against the love and the power of it. C.

Ver. 25. A new not—considered not the real origin of his calamities; ascribed them to secondary causes and agents, and forgot to trace them to the righteous judgments of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinite is the excellency of Jesus Christ! How dear to his Father and useful to men! How glorious the nature and end of his mediation! And with tenderness, fidelity, courage, and success, he executes it. Grand and irreversible is his commission; and his character is answerable to our infinite needs. What ground of gladness is this to sinners, the wildest Arabs and most distant islanders not excepted! And infinitely offensive to JEHOVAH, and ruinous to men, must be the rejection of him. By the most fearful shaking of nations does Jesus often introduce his of his coming as King, in providential power and judgment, to smite the nations for their rebellion against his authority? Ps. 2, 9-12, C.

Ver. 28. There was no man. No man found in the image of God, in knowledge, righteousness, and holiness—the essential characteristic of a true man. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The enemies of Jesus and the gospel may do their worst, it will but issue in their own confusion. The truths of the Bible will bear the strictest scrutiny. And since it is God who founds and protects the church, and assists her helpers, it is in vain for idolaters to unite in their efforts against her. But what fightings without, and fears within, have the people of God to encounter! Nothing but almighty power and grace can enable to conquer them, or can afford comfort under them. And seasonably does Jesus relieve his people in their extremity, and plant ordinances and true converts where he pleases. Be still then, my soul, and consider the insignificance of every idol which thou hast put in JEHOVAH'S room. How late is their existence! how short-lived and uncertain their continuance! how limited their knowledge! how small their power, and unimportant their work! God forbid I should make that my god which did not make me out of nothing; and which cannot warn me of every danger, protect me from every enemy, and through eternity be my all-sufficient portion.—But let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be my ALL IN ALL: my Friend to love me at all times; my Companion to guide me to glory; my Helper to assist me in every work; my Captain of salvation to slay my foes, and make me in all things more than a conqueror; my Supplier and my Provision; my Comforter and my Consolation.—What have I to do any more with idols? Let me cast them to the moles and to the bats—cast them away as a menstruous cloth—as vanity and confusion.

CHAPTER XLII. Ver. 1-4. With wonder and love contemplate and believe on Jesus Christ, my eternal Son, whom I have appointed my Servant, as Mediator for the salvation of sinful men; whom I will assist in his work, and furnish with all gifts and graces without measure, that, in consequence of his finishing the undertaking, he may effectually spread the gospel tidings of his redemption among the Gentiles, and render them his peculiar people. Not with carnal contention or pompous ostentation, but in a meek, humble, and peaceful manner, shall he make his personal appearance, and erect his kingdom on earth. He shall not discourage the broken-hearted, nor cast off such as have but very weak grace, but shall encourage, strengthen, and deal kindly with them: and while he renders his word effectual, he shall judge every person uprightly and impartially. No difficulty shall in the least discourage him, nor hinder his finishing his work, or his spreading the gospel of men's salvation, erecting his spiritual kingdom among them, and subduing the opposers thereof. And all nations, particularly those along the coast of the Mediterranean and in the islands, shall readily embrace his truths, and become his obedient subjects.—5-9. I, the eternal JEHOVAH and almighty Creator, have called him to his work for the manifestation of my righteousness and faithfulness, and will conduct, assist, and preserve him in it. I set him forth as the Mediator, Surety, and Administrator of the promise of grace to men, that he may endue with saving knowledge, and may conduct to everlasting happiness, poor ignorant sinners of mankind, and deliver them from their spiritual thralldom to Satan and their lusts.—As I am being itself, and do give being to every creature, and fulfil every promise, I will, by him, through the gospel, abolish idolatry out of the world. I have already fulfilled multitudes of my promises, and now give you new promises of release from Babylon, and of redemption from sin, that, when they are accomplished, you may believe that I am the only true God.—13-17. After long forbearing to take judgment, I will, in the most sudden and certain manner, destroy the Chaldeans and other enemies of my church, and remove every hindrance of my glory and my people's salvation; and will enlighten, renew, and direct them as their need requires. 18-20. Attend ye careless, ignorant, and obstinate sinners: for none are so blind and obstinate as you my professed people, who reckon yourselves the only enlightened and righteous persons. Notwithstanding all my revelations given to you, and the wonderful works which I have wrought for you, ye never duly consider any. Notwithstanding all your pretences to hearken, ye never regard what is said. 21. While I, in the honourable fulfilment of my promises, have continued my favours to you, or will magnify my word in accomplishing my threatenings upon you, Jesus shall, by his complete righteousness, fulfill divine justice, and restore with advantage to the holy law whatever honour it had lost by men's sin. 22. For the obstinate disobedience of most of you, ye shall be rendered inexpressibly miserable by the Romans and others, and yet shall be so stupefied as never to search out, or repent, of the sinful causes of your trouble.

Ver. 1. Judgment. The true interpretation of the divine law, whose typical sacrifices are all realized in Christ, so that the Gentiles are admitted as fellow-heirs with the Jews, and set free from any yoke of bondage to the rites of the ceremonial law, Ac. 15, 1, 12-29; Ep. 2, 11-19; Ga. 5, 1-6, C.

Ver. 3. The heart that, by reason of sorrow for sin, is as 'a bruised reed,' he will bind up and heal. The purpose of repentance that is ready to expire, like the 'smoking flax' in the lamp, he will not, in judgment, quench because of its smoke and offensiveness, but gently guard, till it kindles into a flame of love. C.

Ver. 4. 'The isles,' i.e. distant nations—nations which lie on the shores of the sea, and beyond the sea. They shall wait for and long for the blessings and civilizing influences of his law. The prophecy was fulfilled in the spread of Christ's gospel over 8 ¶ Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears.

9 Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled: who among them can declare this, and show us former things? let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified: or let them hear, and say, It is truth.

10 Ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, and my servant whom I have chosen; that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I am he: before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me.

11 I, even I, am the LORD; and beside me there is no saviour.

12 I have declared, and have saved, and I have showed, when there was no strange god among you: therefore ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, that I am God.

13 Yea, before the day was I am he; and there is none that can deliver out of my hand: I will work, and who shall let it?

14 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, For your sake I have sent to Babylon, and have brought down all their nobles, and the Chaldeans, whose cry is in the ships.

15 I am the LORD, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King.

16 Thus saith the LORD, which maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters;

17 Which bringeth forth the chariot and horse, the army and the power; they shall lie i The acts are described as past:—"I have sent," "I have brought." It must not be concluded on this account either that the author is relating history, or that his language is incorrect.

We find a similar mode of expression in nearly all parts of the prophetic writings. The certainty of the occurrence is so great that the events are mentioned as if they had already occurred. The events, although still future to the writer, down together, they shall not rise; they are extinct, they are quenched as tow.

18 ¶ Remember ye not the former things, neither consider the things of old.

19 Behold, I will do a new thing: now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert.

20 The beast of the field shall honour me, the dragons and the owls: because I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen.

21 This people have I formed for myself; they shall show forth my praise.

22 ¶ But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.

23 Thou hast not brought me the small cattle of thy burnt-offerings; neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices: I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense.

24 Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy sacrifices; but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities.

25 I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.

26 Put me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayest be justified.

kindest favours. And with earnestness, power, and grace he convicts and calls sinners to himself. But, alas! how dreadful is it to have the god of this world blinding our minds and hardening our hearts, that the light of the gospel may not shine into them, nor the love of it captivate them to the obedience of faith! And fearful will be the issue when they who have the best means of grace, have them least blessed and profit the least by them.

CHAPTER XLIII. Ver. 1. God formed the Israelites into a church and state, redeemed them from their Egyptian and other enemies, and made them his peculiar people. 2. Whatever great troubles churches or saints endure, they are not hurt nor destroyed by them. 3, 4. God destroyed the Egyptians and others to advance the glory and happiness of the Israelites; and has and will destroy nations for the preservation of his gospel church. 5-7. God gathered the captive Jews from the different places of the Chaldean empire, and brought them to Canaan as his people; and, in like manner gathers believing sinners from all nations to Christ. 8-13. Let either the heathen idols or their votaries, who are almost as stupid and senseless, produce proofs of their foretelling such events, or else own me to be the only true God.—The several events, which I have foretold concerning you Jews and my Servant the Messiah, and which, by mighty power, I have performed, or will accomplish, are demonstrative evidences that I am the only true God. 14-17. In order to your deliverance from Babylon, I will send the Medes and Persians to destroy the Chaldean empire, and will remove all hindrances of your return. 19-21. Nay, the division of the Red Sea, and drowning of Pharaoh and his army in it, and other things which I have done for you, shall not be comparable to what I will do, in safely conducting you from Babylon, and re-establishing you into a glorious church for myself; and especially in spreading the gospel and the gospel church, and convicting multitudes of the most stupid and mischievous sinners by Christ for the manifestation of my glory. 22-24. But though I never required of you any services that were really burdensome, ye have neglected and been weary of my true worship; ye have not offered me sacrifices in obedience to my commands, or for my glory, but for some selfish respects; and have even grudged the expense of them, while ye were liberal in the service of idols; ye have abused my revelations, ordinances, and bounties of providence, to encourage you in wickedness, till I can no longer bear with you. 25. Nevertheless, merely for my own name's sake, I still offer you a full and free forgiveness of all your iniquities through the blood of my Son. 26. Let this my gracious pardon and promise be pleaded by you; or, if you think you have a righteousness of your own to plead upon, which I have not observed, point it out if you can. 27, 28. Ye cannot plead the merits of your ancestors or rulers in church or state, as all of them have been sinners, and most of them notorious transgressors. Yea, on that very account have I exposed your chief priests to contempt and ruin, and your whole nation to dreadful misery and ignominy.

Ver. 1. The fulfilment of this prophecy, in part at least, has been referred to the time of Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, or Cyrus; and it is possible the series of events included may have commenced at any of these periods, or even earlier, at the exodus; but it is evident from ver. 6, 7, that the great purpose of the prediction is still future—even the wondrous and (ver. 7) complete restoration of the Jews to their own land. C.—The main object of this chapter, says Alexander, "is the true relation of Israel to Jehovah, and its application in the way both of warning and encouragement. The doctrine taught is, that their segregation from the rest of men, as a peculiar people, was an act of sovereignty, independent of all merit in themselves, and not even intended for their benefit exclusively, but for the accomplishment of God's gracious purposes respecting men in general. The inferences drawn from this fact are, that Israel should certainly escape the dangers which environed him, however imminent, and, on the other hand, that he must suffer for his unfaithfulness to God." The last clause of the verse embodies a glorious and cheering truth. God claims Israel—Israel after the flesh as a type of the spiritual Israel, the church—he claims them as his own. He has redeemed them: they are therefore his by right of purchase. He has given them his name: he has adopted them; they are therefore his by right of sonship. F.

Ver. 10. Ye are my witnesses. Since the calling of Abraham the Jews have been the most prominent witnesses for God, and that partly by doctrine, partly by ritual worship, but chiefly by their being the principal exemplification of prophecy. And if there be any that can read the prophecies peculiar to the Jews in the Bible, and the completion of them in history, and still remain an infidel—neither would he believe, though one rose from the dead! C.

Ver. 14. Babylon proud of her walls, the Chaldeans 'boasting in their ships'—proud of their naval power and commercial wealth. —Note. Though not a prophecy concerning Britain, how much doth she need this record as a warning! How ready hath she been to boast of her 'wooden walls,' and the inexhaustible extent of her 'national resources'! And may the Lord defend her from her enemies, and increase her riches a thousand fold. But may the Lord preserve her from pride and self-confidence, and trusting in uncertain riches, to the forgetting of the living God. C.

Ver. 19. Is not the wilderness, with its inhabitants, the adverse and uncultivated Gentile world, whom, by conversion to Jesus, the Lord will render favourable to the restoration of his people? And it is a fact undoubted, that, just in proportion as the love of Jesus is revived in a church, in the same proportion is anxiety for the conversion of the Jews revived. C.

Ver. 25. For mine own sake. Every sinner hates God, Ro. 8. 7, and is therefore, as such, hateful to him, Ps. 5. 5. It follows that the salvation of a sinner cannot originate from any quality in the sinner himself; but in the mercy, compassion, love, and undeserved grace of God, Jn. 3. 16; Ro. 5. 8, 10; Ep. 2. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—O how grace much more abounds where guilt and ignominy had abounded! Thrice happy are those troubles which occasion the peculiar presence, supports, and comforts of a reconciled God! How important that relation which is the source and foundation of such divine favours! Happy are they whom God has chosen for himself! Neither opposition, guilt, nor distance shall be able to prevent their access to and enjoyment of him. But unhappy are they who stand in the way of their mercy. Incomparably better is JEHOVAH than any of his rivals, both enemies and friends being judges. And great and glorious things his people ought to attest concerning him in their profession and practice; for mighty are the things which he hath showed or done, or will do, for them! Marvellous is the change which his grace in the gospel

REFLECTIONS.—God, for the welfare of his church, often casts down the great and mighty, and raises up the weak and obscure. Uncertain are all the enjoyments of this world: it is therefore proper that they all be used for the glory of God and in kindness to his people. But let me never forget Jesus, who hath ascended up on high and led captivity captive, and hath received gifts for men, even the rebellious, that God the Lord may dwell among them. Let him order all my crosses and my comforts as he pleases. And while I look up for his abundant blessings, let me never with thanksgiving, make my requests known unto God.

Depending upon his infinite mercy, power, and faithfulness, let me expect whatever liberty, provision, honour, victory, or salvation he has promised. In the firm faith of the gospel, published to all the ends of the earth, let me, let thousands, with holy boasting, avow

6 They^a lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: they^a fall down; yea, they worship.

7 They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove: yea, ^{one} shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

8 Remember^j this, and show yourselves men:³ bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors.

9 Remember^k the former things of old: for I^a am God, and there is none else: I am God, and there is none like me,

10 Declaringⁿ the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, ^oMy counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure:

11 Calling^p a ravenous bird⁴ from the east, the man that executeth my counsel⁵ from a far country: yea, ^qI have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it.

12 ¶ Harken unto me, ye ^rstout-hearted, that are far from righteousness:

13 I^a bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel^a my glory.

CHAPTER XLVII.

1 God's judgment upon Babylon and Chaldea, 6 for their unmercifulness, ⁷pride, 10 and over-boldness, 11 shall be irresistible.

COME down,^a and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter¹ of Babylon; sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

2 Take^b the millstones, and grind meal:² uncover^c thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the ³rivers.⁴

3 Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy that in Jesus, the man who is JEHOVAH's fellow, we have righteousness and strength. But God forbid that we should incur the guilt, the shame, the ruin of such as are incensed against a divine Saviour!

CHAPTER XLVI. Ver. 1. The idols were carried away, either on account of their value as precious metals, or works of art, or trophies of victory—or with the superstitious view of transferring their tutelary favour and protection from Babylon to Persia. C.

Ver. 7. They bear him upon the shoulder. Alluding to the manner in which in heathen—and, alas! that it must be told, to the manner in which, in countries called Christian—images are borne upon men's shoulders in public processions. C.

Ver. 11. Calling a ravenous beast from the east. A golden eagle was the emblematic standard of Cyrus, under which name he is called from Persia, which lay eastward of Jerusalem where the prophecy was delivered. C.

Ver. 13. I bring near my righteousness—not by the deliverance granted by Cyrus, but as ^odeclaring the end from the beginning; by the final deliverance to be effected by Messiah. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Desolating strokes clearly manifest the vanity of idols. In every period of the Jewish church and nation God was their protector, supporter, and deliverer: in every period of life he is such to every particular saint; and his former kindness ought to make us hope for further favours. It is only necessary to make use of our reason to observe the absurdity of idol worship; and it becomes us to ponder how wickedly we have acted, if we have joined in it. It is absurd to doubt of God's existence, or to neglect revering his almighty power and Godhead, which are so manifest. Firmly fixed are his purposes, and exactly fulfilled in every dispensation of providence; the tumultuous capture of cities and overthrow of nations not excepted. But infinitely great is the mercy, that not the worst of plagues or wickedness can debar us from Jesus Christ and his offered salvation!

CHAPTER XLVII. Ver. 1-5. Glorious and unconquered kingdom of Babylon, bewail thy approaching calamities: thou shalt be reduced very low: thy dignity and authority taken from thee; thy luxury and delicacy shall be exchanged for afflicting straits and oppressing miseries; thy wretched inhabitants shall be reduced to grind at the mills, or to perform other pieces of the basest drudgery, or driven in herds of captives before their cruel conquerors; they shall be exposed to scorn and disgrace in every form. I, the Almighty God and Redeemer of Israel, by the irresistible effects of my just judgment, will render your city and country desolate and miserable. 6-8. Because ye have cruelly murdered and oppressed the Jews, and presumptuously boasted that your empire could never fall, never be equalled in power and wealth, and never want a king and people to defend it. 14, 15. No comfort shall be left you;—and your merchants and hired troops shall flee away to their respective countries.

Raise thy long flowing veil; lift up thy flowing robes; uncover thy legs, and thus a poor, helpless, weary captive, wade through the streams into the land of thy captivity. Babylon had conquered, oppressed, and enslaved Israel, now a like fate awaited herself. The contrast is drawn with great graphic power between the oppressor and the oppressed, and Babylon the oppressor, sitting for a time in queenly state, with Israel at her feet; then Israel freed and re-established in her own land, under the rule of her heavenly King, while Babylon, humbled and degraded, is driven into captivity.—P.

shame shall be seen: ^aI will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.⁵

4 As^a for our Redeemer, the LORD of hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel.

5 Sit^a thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms.

6 ¶ I^a was wroth with my people; I have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: ^athou didst show them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.

7 And thou saidst, I shall be ^aa lady for ever: so that thou didst not lay these things to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it.

8 Therefore hear now this, ^athou that art given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly; that sayest in thine heart, ^aI am, and none else beside me; I shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

9 But^a these two things shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection for ^athe multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great abundance of thine enchantments.

10 For thou hast ^atrusted in thy wickedness: thou ^ahast said, None seeth me. Thy wisdom and thy knowledge it hath perverted thee:⁶ and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me.

11 Therefore ^ashall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know from whence it ^ariseth: and mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to put it off:⁸ and desolation shall come upon thee suddenly, which thou shalt not know.

12 ¶ Stand^a now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth; if so be all nations to be proud of their capitals, and to bestow upon them great swelling titles: 'lady of kingdoms,' indicating beauty and delicacy! What a name for a heap of rubbish, the habitation of serpents and wild beasts! 'The eternal city,' the fond title of imperial Rome, indicating a certainty of unchangeable splendour! what a name for the ruins that encumber her seven hills, and typify the judgments that are ready to sweep her away! C.

Ver. 9. In a moment in one day. Babylon was of such prodigious strength, and possessed of such resources, both of provisions and men, that Belshazzar and the city and army were engaged in the revelry of a festival: in 'a moment,' and without a blow struck in self-defence, the city was taken, and the kingdom overthrown, about 540 years before the Christian era.—The loss of children. The Babylonians afterwards rebelled against the Persians, and Darius Hystaspes besieged them. For the purpose of prolonging their means of defence, they resolved that all who were incapable of aiding in the defence, including their wives and children, should be put to death. Thus fulfilling, by their own decree and hand, the terrible doom of loss of children which God had denounced against them. C.

Ver. 12. Babylon, during all its history, was the fruitful parent of idolatry, lewdness, and debauchery. These were accompanied with high pretensions to the knowledge of occult sciences, called 'sorceries and enchantments,' Da. 2. 2, by which ignorant and superstitious minds were kept in mental and bodily subjection to a wicked priesthood and tyrannical government. C.

Ver. 13. Astrologers. Judicial astrology, or the pretence of foretelling the future fortunes of children from the position of the planets at the hour of their birth, still holds its place in India; and was at one period very prevalent in Europe, from some parts of which it is scarcely yet completely banished. Such, alas! has been, and continues to be, the folly and the presumption of men! C.

REFLECTIONS.—God delights to abase the proud, and to deal justly with the unmerciful. And, thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

13 Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now the astrologers,⁹ the stargazers, the monthly prognosticators,¹ stand up and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.

14 Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves² from the power of the flame: there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, even thy merchants,³ from thy youth: they shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

1 God, to convince the people of their foreknown obstinacy, revealed his prophecies. 9 He saveth them for his own sake. 12 He exhorteth them to obedience, because of his power and providence. 16 He lamenteth their disobedience. 20 He sendeth his people out of Babylon.

HEAR ye this, O house of Jacob, which are called^a by the name of Israel, and ^bare come forth out of the waters of ¹Judah; which swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, but ^cnot in truth, nor in righteousness.²

2 For they call themselves of the ^dholy city, and stay themselves upon the God of Israel; the LORD of hosts is his name.

3 I^e have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I showed them; I did them suddenly, and they came to pass.

4 Because I knew that ^fthou art obstinate,³ and thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;

5 I^g have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I showed it thee: lest thou shouldest say, Mine idol hath done them; and my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.

6 Thou hast heard, see all this; and ^hwill not ye declare⁴ it?⁵ I have showed thee new things from this time, even ⁱhidden things, and thou didst not know them.

7 They are created now, and not from the beginning; even before the day when thou heardest them not;⁶ lest thou shouldest say, Behold, I knew them.

8 Yea,^a thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest alas! the mightiest nations soon sink under the hand of an angry but righteous God, and the weight of their manifold sins. The very sins in which they had gloried or laboured, or by which they had hoped to save themselves, become the principal causes of their ruin. Yea, the mischiefs which sinners least dreaded often come fatally upon them. And false teachers, who are the instruments in deceiving others, shall themselves feel the heaviest stroke of judgment.

CHAPTER XLVIII. Ver. 1, 2. Hear ye, who boast that you are descendants of Jacob and Judah his most honourable son, and are citizens of Jerusalem, and profess much, though feigned, confidence and dependence on God. 3-8. By foretelling and accomplishing events, I have given you the most undeniable proofs of my true Godhead, because I knew you were so stubborn and untractable. I have even so timed my predictions, as to leave you no ground to pretend that either you or your idols then foresaw the events; for I knew you were so long hardened in perverseness, that you would choose to ascribe your information to any other than to me. 9-11. From regard to the honour of my own perfections, covenant, and promises, I will not utterly destroy you. Nevertheless, in order to purge you from your sins, particularly your gross idolatries, I must try you in a furnace of moderate affliction in Chaldea, and there renew my choice of you for my peculiar people. 14, 15. God manifested his love to Cyrus by employing him in such honourable services, not; yea, from that time that thine ear was not opened: for I knew that thou wouldest ^kdeal very treacherously, and wast called ^la transgressor from the womb.

9 ¶ For^m my name's sake will I defer mine anger, and for my praise will I refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off.

10 Behold,ⁿ I have refined thee, but not with silver;⁷ I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.

11 For^o mine own sake, even for mine own sake, will I do it: for how should my name be polluted? and I will not give my glory unto another.

12 ¶ Hearken unto me, O Jacob and Israel, ^pmy called: I am he: ^qI am the first, I also am the last.

13 Mine^r hand also hath laid the foundation of the earth, and my right hand hath ^sspanned the heavens: ^twhen I call unto them, they stand up together.

14 All^u ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; which among them hath declared these things? the LORD hath loved ^vhim; he will do his pleasure on Babylon, and his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.

15 I, even I, have spoken; yea, I have called him; ^wI have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous.

16 ¶ Come ye near unto me, hear ye this; I have not spoken in secret from the beginning; from the time that it was, there am I: and now the Lord GOD and his Spirit ^xhath sent me.⁹

17 Thus saith the LORD, ^ythy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee ^zto profit, ^{aa}which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go.

18 O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a ^{ab}river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the ^{ac}sea; 19 Thy seed also had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof; his ^{ad}name³ should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me.

20 ¶ Go^{ae} ye forth of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it even to the end of the earth; say ye, ^{af}The LORD hath redeemed his servant Jacob.

21 And^{ag} they thirsted not when he led them and giving him such prosperous success in destroying the Chaldeans. 16. From the very beginning I have plainly and publicly foretold future events, and have been always ready to fulfil my predictions. And now I am appointed of God to foretell, and in due time to execute, things relative to Cyrus and Babylon, and the redemption prefigured by it. 17-19. I am your divine instructor and leader in what conduces to your peace and prosperity; and if ye had but hearkened to my commandments, your peace, and the prosperity flowing from your piety and virtue, had been abundant and lasting; your children should have been greatly increased; nor should they have been carried captive out of my land. 20, 21. Ye shall certainly be delivered from Babylon, and shall be provided for in your return,

ENTRANCE TO THE GARDEN OF THE KNIGHTS OF MALTA—A GLIMPSE OF THE MOST SPLENDID EDIFICE EVER RAISED BY FAITH IN THE CAUSE OF RELIGION. [Isaiah, xlix:6.]—"And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel; I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the ends of the earth." Through an open vista made of a tangled labyrinth of trees and flowering shrubs in the garden of the Knights of Malta we have a glimpse of St. Peter's Church at Rome. This structure, conceived in the genius of Michael Angelo, is the most splendid edifice ever lifted by faith in the cause of religion. It is an evidence of the truth of Isaiah's prophecy, and is an expression of the declaration that Christ was to be a light to the Gentiles and to be salvation to the people unto the ends of the earth. This garden stands upon the Aventine Hill, the highest of the seven in Rome.

these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?

22 Thus saith the Lord God, 'Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their arms,' and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders.⁵

23 And 'kings shall be thy nursing fathers,' and thy queens⁷ thy nursing mothers: they shall 'bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD: for 'they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.

24 'I Shall' the prey be taken from the mighty, or 'the lawful captive' delivered?

25 But thus saith the LORD, 'Even the captives' of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered: for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children.²

26 And 'I will feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh; and they shall be drunken with their own blood, as with sweet wine:³ and all flesh 'shall know that I the LORD am thy vices he will glorify all his perfections to the highest. And though my ministrations have little success in the conversion of the Jewish nation, God will honourably reward my faithful service, and give me for an Instructor and Saviour to the Gentile world. 7-13. In consequence of my great sacrifice and trouble among the Jews, JEHOVAH will highly exalt me, seasonably grant whatever assistance and protection I need for myself or members, and grant me a living body through the whole world, saved from all their misery and bondage, and richly supplied with the precious and comfortable oracles, ordinances, and blessings of the new kingdom, while both angels and men shall rejoice in their happiness. 14-23. Nor shall the Jews in Babylon, or in their long dispersion, nor the church under Antichrist, have any just reason to doubt of God's continued kindness to and care for them. Delivered from their enemies, and returned to their own country, the Jews shall greatly increase in numbers and abound in prosperity. During their infidelity and dispersion, the vast numbers of Gentiles who enter the church shall more than balance their loss: and at last both Jews and Gentiles shall, in countless multitudes all over the world, be converted to the Lord. 24-26. Nor shall the mightiest devils or persecutors be able to keep them from accepting Christ, since God, as their redeemer, will exert his almighty power in their behalf, and the tremendous overthrow of the wicked.

Ver. 2. This highly figurative passage was designed to be descriptive of the Messiah. His mouth was like a sharp sword, able to give utterance to words of convincing and powerful eloquence, which would penetrate the heart. The figure is carried on into the second member of the verse. The shadow of God's hand is there represented as covering or concealing the sword. It is preserved by divine power, hidden from the eye of the enemy, until the moment comes for action; then it is suddenly drawn forth, and wielded with skill and power. The last clause sets forth the same idea under another figure; an arrow preserved in the quiver until the moment for shooting it arrives. P.

Ver. 3. Israel signifies 'Prevaier with God'—and here is easily, and with certainty, seen to be a specific title of Messiah, and not the national designation of the Jews. The distinction lies in ver. 4. Messiah-Israel had his 'judgment and work' with God; but Israel, the people, were ever a 'stiff-necked and rebellious generation.' C.

Ver. 5. To bring (home again) Jacob, who went out an exile.—Though Israel (a name given on returning) be not gathered; that is, though during a long time Israel shall remain dispersed, 'yet shall I be glorious' in the judgment of their excision for a time, till the Gentiles be 'grafted in'—and finally, 'all Israel shall be saved.' C.

Ver. 7. To him whom man despiseth, &c. To Messiah, 'despised and rejected of men' and so abhorred of the Jewish nation, that they preferred Barabbas, a robber, and cried out, 'Away with him, away with him: crucify him, crucify him!'—To a servant of rulers. To one led before the tribunal, and condemned by the pusillanimous injustice, not of a native prince, but a foreign ruler. C.

Ver. 8. In an acceptable time, &c. This passage is quoted in Co. 6. 2. Its general meaning is, that in the days of God's power, in a day appointed by him, he would be ready and willing to extend his salvation to mankind through his Son. In the time of the gospel dispensation, under the ministry of Christ's apostles, the Lord would extend his grace and mercy to Jews and Gentiles alike. P.—A covenant. 'A purifier, or a covenant sacrifice.' Purifier seems most agreeable to the scope of the passage.—To establish the earth. Rather, 'to restore the land' to its rightful owners in the 'acceptable time' of the gospel jubilee. C.

Ver. 10. They shall not hunger nor thirst. 'The hunger and thirst' of the Lord's captives is always 'righteousness,' Mat. 5. 6, for nothing short of 'everlasting righteousness' can satisfy the cravings or sustain the strength of the soul. But now they 'hunger and thirst' no more, for the word of life is in them 'a well of water,' Jn. 4. 14, and their food 'the living bread which came down from heaven,' Jn. 6. 51. C.

Ver. 12. Sinim is said to have been the name of a strong city in Egypt; and may thus represent every city in which Israel had been imprisoned as Joseph, or enslaved as his descendants: the Vulgate translates it 'South Country,' probably in reference to Mat. 8. 11. C.

Ver. 17. 'They that ruined thee shall speedily become thy builders; and they that wasted thy substance shall (by conversion) become thy children.' C.

Ver. 23. While, like all spiritual promises to the Jews, this prophecy is fulfilled to the Christian Church: yet it is obvious from the entire context, that its first application is to the Jews. And little during their long pilgrimage has been to them the 'nursing' of kings and queens. But let not the infidel deride, let not the Christian forget, and let not the Jew despair, the word is spoken, and it will be accomplished. C.

Ver. 26. The restoration of the Jews will take place in the midst of terrible intestine commotions, not necessarily in all Gentile nations, but in all that shall oppress them, as Egypt did, and oppose their return, either from motives of jealousy or self-interest. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What important truths are notified to men by the gospel of Christ! And great is the mercy that the Gentiles have so deep concern in it, and such abundant access to know and receive it. Enlarged gifts and grace are necessary to qualify men for the ministry. And exalted ought to be their ends, earnest their care, and assiduous their labour in winning souls to Christ. Glorious and certain shall be the reward of their faithful service, even though it should not have the wished success with men. But infinite is the mercy of God, in calling his own Son to his mediatorial office, and qualifying him for it;—in freely giving him for us as a Ransom, and to us as an effectual Saviour! By it JEHOVAH's declarative glory, and the everlasting happiness of men, are wonderfully advanced. Alas! that ever he should be rejected, and his grace received in vain;—that his salvation, so extensive and suitable, should be so undervalued and refused!—In accordance with his love, God enlightens the mind, looses the bonds, supplies the wants, protects the persons, comforts the hearts, and makes plain the paths of the people. His work of redemption, his saving of men, demands our highest praise: and the assurances of his constant and everlasting kindness, and his promises to remove everything hurtful, give ground of encouragement to the most despondent. Thrice pleasant is it to behold the church extending her limits,

CHAPTER L.

1 The dereliction of the Jews to be imputed to their own sins, and not to God's inability to save. 4 Christ's commission to speak comfort to the weary: 5 his patient suffering of indignities, 7 and confidence in God's help. 10 An exhortation to trust in God, and not in human resources.

THUS saith the LORD, 'Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away.

2 Wherefore, when I came, was there 'no man? when I called, was there none to answer? 'Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver? behold, at my rebuke I 'dry up the sea, I make the rivers a wilderness: their fish stinketh, because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.

3 I 'clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering.

4 The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak and mightily increasing her members; and to discern how almighty power and grace protects and blesses it, notwithstanding all opposition!

CHAPTER L. Ver. 1. In reply to the objection that the casting off of the Israelites was a proof of want of faithfulness or caprice on the part of Jehovah, the true cause of it is here alleged. The Israelites were rejected and punished because of gross sin and open rebellion. God had dealt with them in mercy, he had spared them long, he had saved them by wondrous interpositions of supernatural power; but they had manifested the greatest ingratitude. P.—Where is the bill, &c. God's covenant with his church is often represented as a marriage-contract, see particularly Ho. 2. 9, 19, 20; and the progress of grace, together with the final glory of the church, as a marriage, Mat. 22. 1-14; Re. 21. 9.—Sold. The persons and liberties of their children were, according to the divine law, answerable for the debts of their fathers, 2 Ki. 4. 1; Mat. 19. 7. C.

Ver. 2. When I came. The Lord here speaks in continuation of the former verse—even the WORD that was with God, and was God. And he speaks of that time when, being 'made flesh,' he dwelt among us; when he 'came unto his own, and his own received him not,' Jn. 1. 11. C.

Ver. 4. The Lord God hath given me, &c. 'The LORD God' (Adonai Jehovah), THE FATHER, hath given me (his co-eternal WORD, his Son, 'God manifest in the flesh'), 'the tongue of the learned,' the 'learned' in the 'deep things of God,' his nature, his eternal purpose of grace, according to 'the counsel of his own will,' his work of redemption by substitution and sacrifice, and his victory over death by resurrection to glory. C.

Ver. 7. Set my face like a flint. As the flint endures the stroke of the steel, and yields its best service (fire) to him that smites it—even so did Messiah endure, unshrinking, the strokes of those that hated him, and yielded but tears of compassion and intercessory prayers in return for the ingratitude that cried 'Away with him! the injustice that condemned him, and the cruelty that crucified him.' C.

Ver. 10. That walketh in darkness. The only real darkness lies in ignorance of one point, 'What must I do to be saved?' Within the name of Jesus lies the only answer; from it emanates the only light, Jn. 1. 12; Ac. 16. 31. C.

Ver. 11. Walk in the light of your fire. This is neither an advice nor a permission, but a judicial sentence, and with this warning, instead of joy, 'ye shall lie down in sorrow.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—How common is it, but as absurd, for self-ruined, and even obstinate sinners, to lay the blame of their misery on God, who is infinitely able and ready to save!—Yea, infinite is the fitness of Jesus Christ to instruct, quicken, and comfort our souls. Great was the cheerfulness and boldness with which he endured the suffering, and performed the obedience, necessary in the work of our redemption. Wonderful was the pleasure of JEHOVAH in assisting, supporting, and honouring him in it: and infinite is his tenderness towards distressed and disconsolate souls, and his indignation against presumptuous sinners. Never let me pretend to teach others till God has taught myself. And embracing every opportunity of fellowship with him, let me always act in his service under the influence of a gracious good-will to it. Never let me shrink at doing or suffering for Jesus Christ, who has done and suffered so much for me. In every difficulty of work or warfare, let me firmly believe that he will

HOUSES OF DIVES AND LAZARUS—BESIDE THE ROAD CHRIST WALKED OVER TO HIS CRUCIFIXION. [Isaiah, 1:6.]—"I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting." The houses of Dives and Lazarus make up a station in the Via Dolorosa. The Via Dolorosa is the gloomy and sad way over which our Savior walked to Calvary. It begins with the Palace of Pilate, which is now the Governor's serai. Over one of the buildings on this way the Scala Santa or staircase leading to the judgment hall stood until removed by Constantine to the basilica of Saint John Lateran, in Rome. We have along this way the Church of the Flagellation, or the Church of the Crowning with Thorns, the arch of Ecce Homo, Convent of the Sisters of Zion, and at the bottom of the valley, the house of Dives. Pilgrims who visit Jerusalem during the Easter weeks make it a point to pass over and meditate along this sad way.

19.—Die in the pit. Casting into a deep pit, with a little food, was an ancient mode of punishment; thus inflicting a slow and proportionally cruel death. It may here be also an allusion to deliver you, I will make you quickly to experience the fulfilment of all my promises. And in like manner rejoice, thou gospel church, in hopes of thy extension, purification, and deliverance from every enemy, heathen, Popish, or Mahometan. 7-12. Great joy and harmony, hearty renunciation of idols, and a composed return of the Jews to their own land, shall be produced by the proclamation of Cyrus, and the Lord's powerful appearance for their relief; and much more by the publication of the gospel by Jesus Christ and his apostles, and by the effectual redemption of multitudes from heathenism, Popery, Satan, and their own lusts, by an ascended Redeemer. 13-15. The infinitely well-qualified Messiah, in consequence of his inexpressible ignominy, debasement, and suffering, shall be highly exalted as Head over all things to his church; and shall, by his Word, his Spirit, and blood, purify multitudes of sinful Gentiles from their iniquities; and even kings, and other great ones, shall with reverence hear his gospel truths, which had been hid from former generations, and shall submit to his laws.

Ver. 1. Put on thy strength. The only strength of the church is Christ, whom spiritually she puts on, as armour for defence and garments for beauty, Ro. 13. 12, 14; Ga. 3. 27; Ep. 4. 24; 6. 11. C.

Ver. 3, 4. The passage is elliptical. Its general object is to prove that God, as he had delivered his people in days past, when in imminent danger, so he would deliver them now. Barnes has given the following paraphrase, which brings out the full sense:—'We have been sold for nought, and ye shall be ransomed without price. As a proof that God can do it, and will do it, remember, says he, that my people went down formerly to Egypt, and designed to sojourn there for a little time, and that they were there reduced to slavery, and oppressed by Pharaoh, but that I ransomed them without money, and brought them forth by my own power. Remember also how often the Assyrian has oppressed them without cause. Remember the history of Sennacherib, and Tiglath-pileser, and Shalmaneser, and how they have laid the land waste; and remember, also, how the Lord has delivered it from these oppressors. With the same certainty and the same ease he can deliver the people from the captivity of Babylon.' P.

Ver. 5. My name is blasphemed. Either by the heathen exulting in their victory over Israel, as Sennacherib did in his pride, and saying, 'Where is your God?' 2 Ki. 18. 29, 30, 33-35; 19. 10; or by the irreligious conduct of the Jews, who, while professing zeal for the law, did, through breaking of that law, bring dishonour and blasphemy upon the holy name of their God, Ro. 2. 23, 24. C.

Ver. 7. This is the exclamation of the 'watchmen,' ver. 8, announcing the Prince of Peace, whose 'feet' alone they describe: those feet 'like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace,' Re. 1. 15, emblem of that furnace of affliction, ch. 48. 10, in which his church is to be melted, and by his Spirit purified from her dross. C.

Ver. 11. Go ye out from thence. Whence? From 'Egypt,' from 'the dust,' ver. 2, 4, from 'the nations, the ends of the earth,' ver. 10, into which they had been scattered. A similar exhortation is extended by St. Paul to the Gentile church, to come out from the idolatry of the world, 2 Co. 6. 17, and by St. John to come out from the mystical Babylon, Re. 18. 4—all progressive parts of the same glorious march of prophecy.—Be ye clean, &c. These are the priests, the Levites being interdicted from coming nigh the 'vessels' of the sanctuary, Nu. 18. 3. But now all believers being 'kings and priests,' Re. 1. 6, are here exhorted to cleanse the vessels in which they bear the Lord's treasure, 2 Co. 4. 7. C.

Ver. 12. The God of Israel—not of Israel the people, but of Israel 'the prevailing with God,' prevailing by sacrifice and intercession—the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. See ch. 49. 3; Ro. 15. 16; Ep. 1. 17. C.

Ver. 13. These three verses (13-15) are closely connected with ch. liii. They constitute a portion of the same grand prophecy. The sense is greatly marred by their being placed at the close of this chapter, and separated from that which follows. From the deliverance of Israel from the Babylonian captivity, the prophet passes to a greater and far more glorious deliverance—that of his people from the captivity of sin by the atoning work of the Messiah. P.

Ver. 14. There is a want of grammatical correspondence, and consequent obscurity, in the translation of this verse. 'As' requires either another 'as' to follow, or a 'so' to correspond, expressed or understood. May not this be rectified by placing the 'so' where it stands in the Hebrew, at the commencement of the second clause? And is not the meaning as follows:—'As many were astonished at thee, O Jerusalem, ver. 9, when thy visage was marred in the dust, and thy form in chains, ver. 2, 'so his (my servant's) visage was marred more than any man,' &c. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's grace and our duty, his glory and our salvation, are marvellously connected. Both saints and sinners ought to bestir themselves when he offers deliverance. And thrice happy is the church when she is duly separated from the world, which lieth in wickedness. And yet how averse are many to partake of this blessedness: how averse to accept of an offered deliverance from corrupt lusts, or from corrupt societies and synagogues of Satan! But blessed are the effects of Jesus' gospel and government in the world, powerful the influence of his offices and states, and gracious the manifestation of his person, sufferings, and glory for the conviction of the most hardened sinners.

CHAPTER LIII. Ver. 1-3. How few truly believe the gospel record concerning Jesus Christ! How few experience his gracious power, or behold his heart-captivating glory;—who, in his humbled estate, under the special care and protection of JEHOVAH, sprung from the humble family of David in the likeness of sinful flesh without any external glory or pomp—and was all along oppressed with miseries and griefs, and quiet contemned and hated by men, especially the Jewish rulers and people! 4-9. But notwithstanding our reckoning him persecuted by God as a notorious criminal, he as our Saviour, by whom it had pleased the Lord to pardon our iniquities, suffered, in the most patient manner, because of our manifold sins, that he might expiate them, and secure our eternal salvation:—to manifest which JEHOVAH not only allotted him honourable interment, but quickly released him from his grave, and made him the mediatorial Parent of all who believed in his blessed name, in that very age so remarkable for wickedness. 10-12. In consequence of bearing our iniquities, and the sufferings thereof, which our Father, in love to us, inflicted upon him in his soul and body, that he might thereby make full atonement for our sin, he is rewarded with everlasting life and honour; and has, to his infinite satisfaction, a living church of Jewish and Gentile converts, whom he instructs, and through his own sacrifice, justifies and saves. And while he is enthroned far above all principalities and powers, he erects, extends, and establishes his spiritual kingdom on earth, and his kingdom of glory in heaven.

Ver. 1. The main object of the sacred writer in this whole prophecy is to set forth the glorious person and work of the Messiah. To do this effectually, the mode in which his glory was exhibited and his work accomplished during his incarnation must be described. Hence it is necessary to exhibit the depth of his humiliation. One part of his humiliation consisted in his being despised and rejected of men. 'He came unto his own, and his own received him not.' The reality of his advent and of his mission was denied by the Jews. It is this sad fact which the prophet predicted in the opening words of this chapter. P.—Our report. The report of the 'sprinkled nations,' both Jewish and Gentile believers, ch. 42. 15, who declared what they 'both had seen and heard of the Word of Life,' 1 Jn. 1. 1-3. C.

Ver. 8. 'From imprisonment and judgment was he taken away, and who shall bear witness to his genealogy,' whereby, as 'son of David,' he is heir of the throne at Jerusalem; as 'Son of God,' heir of all things. 'Therefore (because there was none to witness the truth or judge righteously) he was cut off,' &c. C.—This is a passage of very great difficulty. The explanations given of it by commentators are widely different. Perhaps the following may be its true meaning:—He, the Messiah, was quickly taken away to execution after a short confinement and a formal, though unjust, official trial. Yet who, among those by whom he was there surrounded (his generation), considered that he was cut off from the land of the living—that he was smitten for the transgression of my people? The idea is, that neither the injustice of his sentence, nor the great object of his sufferings and his death, excited the least thought among those who saw him. With reckless indifference he was seized, beaten, tried, condemned, and crucified. P.

Ver. 10. When thou shalt make, &c. 'When thou (O Jerusalem, ch. 52. 14, that killest the prophets, Mat. 23. 37) shalt make his soul (through false witness and false judgment, ver. 8) an offering for sin.'—He (my risen servant) shall see his seed—his spiritual children. C.

Ver. 11. By his knowledge, &c. 'By the knowledge of him (or himself, i.e. the Messiah) shall he, my righteous Servant (the Messiah), justify many.' The idiom is Hebrew, and is very expressive with Christ and his saving plan. It is the same idea which the apostle Paul brings out in Phi. 3. 10. 'That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death.' Christ himself says, 'This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent,' Jn. 17. 3. P.

Ver. 12. Therefore will I divide, &c. 'Therefore will I give him the multitudes for his portion, and the mighty for his spoil'—his spiritual trophies of victory and reward: multitudes of every people converted and brought to glory; Satan and the grave vanquished and spoiled. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! that Jesus Christ and his gospel should be so little known to the hearers of it! But nothing less than almighty grace can make us either know or believe in him. God exactly verified his predictions and promises in the whole sacrifice and exaltation of our Redeemer. Though carnal apprehensions of him lead men to contemn, reject, and blaspheme him, infinite was his love in undertaking, obeying, and suffering the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God! How great was our Father's love in sending him to us, and placing our burdens on his infinitely well beloved, his only begotten Son! And sweet, full, firm, and lasting is that forgiveness, that redemption, which comes through the blood, the intercession of God in our nature, and from JEHOVAH's infinite and unchangeable love. In the ratified promises of the new kingdom, an extensive and firm foundation is laid for that faith by which we do and must receive Jesus Christ, as made of God to us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. And the rewards of our obedience of faith are all gloriously wrapped up in the blessed reward of Jesus Christ!

CHAPTER LIV. Ver. 1-5. Rejoice greatly, ye Gentiles, who have hitherto produced few converts to Christ; for now greater multitudes of you shall be born again than ever were in the Jewish church: greater multitudes shall be converted to Christ after his departure to heaven, than while his church enjoyed his bodily presence. The gospel church, that tabernacle of God, shall be greatly enlarged by the conversion of Gentile nations on every side. No more shall they be reproached, as rejected by and strangers to God: for now shall the divine Jesus and his Father call to himself a peculiar people in all places of the world. 6-10. And however destitute and wretched in themselves, despicable in their first appearances, or distressed and per-

WHEAT MARKET, NAZARETH—WHERE CHRIST GREW UP. [ISAIAH, liii.]—"Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground." The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah is by all authorities conceded to refer to the sufferings of Christ. We give a view of the wheat market in Nazareth, the town in which Christ grew up. The scene such as we witness above has been one common doubtless in all ages of the town's history. Nazareth is upon a hill overlooking the valley of Esdraelon, which has been always noted for its fertility and its abundant harvests of wheat. Every place, and scene, and street, life, is interesting. Large and rich life only can render a town significant and influential.

against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD; and their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER LV.

1 The prophet, with the promises of Christ, exhorteth to faith, 6 and to repentance. 8 The happy state of them that believe.

HO, every^a one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and ^bwithout price.

2 Wherefore^c do ye spend^d money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken ^ediligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness.

3 Incline your ear, and come unto me: ^fhear, and your soul shall live; and ^gI will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David.

4 Behold, ^hI have given him for ⁱa witness to the people, ^ja leader and commandant to the people.

5 Behold, thou ^kshalt call a nation that ^lthou knowest not; and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee, ^mbecause of the LORD thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.

6 ⁿSeek^o ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.

7 Let^p the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man^q his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.^r

8 ^sFor^t my thoughts are not your thoughts,^u neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD.

9 For^v as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

10 For as the rain cometh down, and the snow, from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater;

11 So^w shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.

12 For ^xye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills

INTERIOR OF THE HOUSE OF ANANIAS—WHERE ANANIAS LIVED, WHO WAS DIRECTED TO INQUIRE FOR SAUL IN THE HOUSE OF JUDAS. [ISAIAH, lv:5.]—“Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not; and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.” Near the east gate of Damascus there stands the traditional house of Ananias. Ananias was the disciple of Christ in Damascus who was directed to inquire for Saul in the house of Judas at the time of the apostle's conversion. This is said to stand upon the site of the house in which Ananias lived. It is fitted up now for a kind of church. We use this picture to illustrate the fifty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, because St. Paul was the great apostle to the Gentiles, through whose ministry outlying and foreign nations were to be brought to the Holy One of Israel.

12 Come ye, say they, 'I will fetch wine,' and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day, and much more abundant.

CHAPTER LVII.

1 The blessed death of the righteous. 3 God reproveth the Jews for their whorish idolatry. 13 He giveth evangelical promises to the penitent.

THE righteous^a perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart: and merciful men^b are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.²

2 He shall enter into peace:³ they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness.⁴

3 ¶ But draw near hither, ye sons of the sorceress, the seed of the adulterer and the whore.

4 Against^e whom do ye sport yourselves? against whom make ye a wide mouth, and draw out the tongue? are ye not children of transgression, a seed of falsehood;

5 Inflaming yourselves with idols^f under every green tree, slaying the children in the valleys under the cliffs of the rocks?

6 Among the smooth stones^g of the stream is thy portion; they, they are thy lot; even to them hast thou poured a drink-offering, thou hast

8 It seems probable that as the idol shrine of Molech in the valley of Hinnom is referred to and denounced in ver. 5, so the 'high place' of Baal on the summit of the Mount of Olives is here before the prophet's eye. It was one of the most ancient high-places around Jerusalem.—P.

tion. I have freely granted him to publish and attest every gospel truth to ignorant and unbelieving men, to instruct and guide them to salvation, to rule and defend them, and to restrain or overcome the wicked. And at his invitation, through the influence of the Holy Ghost, and in order to glorify him, shall multitudes of Gentiles, who had neither been acknowledged by him nor known him, receive and submit to him. 6-13. Importunately seek after and heartily embrace him as your Saviour and portion, while he earnestly offers himself to you in his Word and ordinances. Let even the greatest sinner detest and turn from his self-concocted methods of relief, as well as from his courses and purposes of wickedness, in the sure faith of the unbounded mercy and pardoning grace of God: for in riches of mercy his purposes, words, and works infinitely transcend everything similar and every conception among men; and his promises cannot be defeated, but always issue in blessings to mankind.—And as with great joy the Jews shall be divinely conducted from Babylon and their present dispersion to their own country, and shall plant, multiply, and flourish in the same, so shall multitudes, to the public and lasting honour of God, be delivered from their spiritual bondage of heathenism, Popery, Satan, or their lusts; and while themselves are converted from mischievous sinners into agreeable and useful saints, they shall be delivered from whatever is hurtful and offensive.

Ver. 1. 'Ho, every one that thirsteth' for righteousness, Mat. 5. 6, 'and he that hath no money' (nothing, though he had gained the whole world, to give in exchange for his soul, Mat. 16. 26), 'come ye to the waters.' C.

Ver. 3. David signifies Beloved, and is a prophetic (Je. 30. 9: Ho. 3. 5), a heavenly (Mat. 3. 17), and apostolic name of Christ, Ep. 1. 6. All mercies in him are made sure by 'two immutable things'—God's promise of truth and his oath of confirmation, He. 6. 17. 18. C.

Ver. 5. By following out the address in ch. 54. 1-17, it will be seen that the once barren but now prolific church is the party addressed in this promise. C.

Ver. 9. Higher. God's thoughts are higher (1) in their subject—Christ and his church, Ep. 1. 3-6. (2) In their object—salvation, Ep. 1. 10-14. (3) In their result—success, ver. 11. C.

Ver. 12. Mountains and hills—empires and kingdoms.—Trees of the field—believers everywhere throughout the world, Is. 61. 3. C.

Ver. 13. 'Thorns and briers' are the emblems of the primal curse, Ge. 3. 8: He. 6. 8.—'The fir-tree' is the mark of peaceful dwellings, Ca. 1. 17, successful commerce, Eze. 27. 5, and joyous music, 2 Sa. 6. 5.—'The myrtle,' of that co-extension of natural and spiritual husbandry, improving alike the natural and the moral wilderness, Is. 41. 19. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Think now, my soul, how all the blessings of salvation are framed to answer our need!

—The most trifling cumberers of God's vineyard, nay, the most notorious sinners, are expressly, are earnestly invited by him to receive the same without any conditions. Infinite is his grace who, at infinite expense, provides these favours for his enemies, his betrayers, and murderers, and thus offers them to his despisers. But infinitely criminal must be that unbelief which treads on such grace, and doubts the fulfilment of his infallible promises. And base is the heart, and cruel the preacher, who gives JEHOVAH the lie; and pretends that self-formed qualifications of sensibility and sincerity must render us welcome to his market of GRACE.

CHAPTER LVI. Ver. 1. The general scope of this prophecy, and its close connection with ch. liv. iv., should be kept in view. In ch. liv. the blessed results of the Messiah's work and triumph are stated:—His church or kingdom would be established on an everlasting foundation. In ch. liv. it is declared that the doors of the church would no longer be shut against the Gentiles; but that they as well as God's ancient people would have access. In this chapter the same glorious truth is set forth more clearly and fully. Every individual of the human family, wherever born, from whatever nation or tribe sprung, would be admitted on equal terms to all the blessings and privileges of Christ's people. P.—Keep ye judgment, &c. The prophet being now about to close a great series of predictions, proceeds to certain practical observances, just as, in later days, Paul was accustomed to explain and establish certain doctrines, and then to enforce moral duties; both acting upon the principle of laying the foundation, and then building the temple. C.

Ver. 2. Keepeth the Sabbath. Sabbath observance is chosen as the chief outward test of inward holiness, (1) because it is a direct remembrance and imitation of God; (2) because it is a visible testimony to God's authority; (3) because, as an act of self-denial, it affords a continued specimen of deep Christian principle; and (4) because it is a natural type of the 'rest that remaineth for the people of God.' C.

Ver. 3. Son of the stranger. Not merely a Gentile as distinct from a Jew, but one whose parents had been strangers to God, whose early education had been neglected, and whose youth had consequently been spent in folly. C.

Ver. 4. The eunuchs, &c. Many Christians are much troubled because they think they have effected good, because they have no spiritual posterity whom they can call 'their little children,' (Ga. 4. 19.) To such desponding believers this encouragement is addressed, to teach them that they are not to be judged by what they have done; but by what, through grace, they have endeavoured to accomplish, Ro. 9. 16. C.

Ver. 7. Them will I bring to my holy mountain. From Da. 2. 35 it is evident that the 'mountain of the Lord' is the emblem of the church exalted by Messiah; that the 'house of prayer' has ceased to be confined to Jerusalem, and is found wherever there is a worshipper 'in spirit and in truth,' Ja. 4. 20-24; that the 'offerings and sacrifices' are prayer, praise, and beneficence, 1 Pe. 2. 5: He. 13. 15, 16; and that 'the altar' is the spiritual and living altar and sacrifice, Christ, He. 13. 10. C.

Ver. 9. The foregoing verse has closed a glorious series of prophecies, some past, some present, but chiefly future. Here commences a series of accusations, rebukes, and exhortations, happily closing in deep national and ecclesiastical confession and repentance, ch. 59. 9-15. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's kindness powerfully binds and constrains to holiness in all manner of conversation. And if I share of his grace, it becomes me to hate evil; to love him with all my heart, soul, mind, and strength; carefully to observe all his institutions, and do to my neighbours of mankind as I would they should do to me. Always should I rest contented with my earthly lot, as now no natural defects can debar me from the congregation of the Lord: and the fulness of Jesus' promise can sufficiently balance my want of children, or anything beside. Yea, let me greatly rejoice that Gentile sinners are now not only invited, 13 ¶ When² thou criest, let thy companies deliver thee: but the wind shall carry them all away; vanity shall take them: but he that putteth his trust in me shall possess the land, and shall inherit my holy mountain;

14 And shall say,⁶ Cast^o ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people.

15 For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell^o in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

16 For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls which I have made.

17 For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote me: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly⁷ in the way of his heart.

18 I have seen his ways,⁸ and will heal him: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to his mourners.⁹

19 I create the fruit of the lips; peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the LORD; and I will heal him.

20 But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt.

21 There^a is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.

CHAPTER LVIII.

1 The prophet, being sent to reprove hypocrisy, 3 sheweth the difference between a counterfeit fast and a true. 8 He declareth what promises are due unto godliness, 13 and to the keeping of the sabbath.

CRY aloud,¹ spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.

2 Yet they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

3 Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we afflicted² our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure, and exact all your labours.⁴

4 Behold, ye fast for strife and debate,⁵ and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as ye do this day,⁶ to make your voice to be heard on high.

5 Is it such a fast that I have chosen? a day for a man to afflict his soul?⁸ is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens,⁹ and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?

7 Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?

8 ¶ Then shall thy light break forth⁴ as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee: the glory of the LORD shall be thy reward.⁵

9 Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity:

10 And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon-day:

11 And if thou open thine eyes to the poor, and lift up thy face to the afflicted, and bind the shod, and break the yoke of the heavy burden, then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee, and the glory of the LORD shall be thy reward.

12 ¶ Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee, and the glory of the LORD shall be thy reward.

ness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

3 Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we afflicted² our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure, and exact all your labours.⁴

4 Behold, ye fast for strife and debate,⁵ and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as ye do this day,⁶ to make your voice to be heard on high.

5 Is it such a fast that I have chosen? a day for a man to afflict his soul?⁸ is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens,⁹ and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?

7 Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?

8 ¶ Then shall thy light break forth⁴ as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee: the glory of the LORD shall be thy reward.⁵

9 Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity:

10 And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon-day:

11 And if thou open thine eyes to the poor, and lift up thy face to the afflicted, and bind the shod, and break the yoke of the heavy burden, then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee, and the glory of the LORD shall be thy reward.

to protect either themselves or you. 13-21. But such as believe my word, and trust in my perfections, shall return from their captivity to Canaan by my providence; and Cyrus, by his proclamation, shall remove every hindrance in their way. For however high and lofty I am as the Holy One who inhabits eternity, yet am I infinitely condescending towards persons destitute, distressed, and broken in spirit; nor will I continue my judgments till such be utterly ruined or discouraged.—For their injustice, and other abominations, I have indeed punished them by the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, and others; and yet, under their affliction, they have become worse and worse. I will therefore, by an extension of sovereign grace, forgive and reform them, lead them back to their duty and their country, and restore comforts to them; and by my prophets publish peace and prosperity to them, that their lips may be filled with my praise. But by their own lusts, guilt, and fears, and the judgments which I inflict, the wicked shall always remain in a restless, shameful, and loathsome condition.

Ver. 1. The righteous perisheth, &c. Christ the righteous is crucified; and, so far from laying it to heart as national guilt, the cry is, 'His blood be upon us and our children.'—Merciful men. Those who have desired and obtained mercy, the disciples and martyrs of our Lord, Mat. 5. 7; 1 Ti. 1. 13. C.

Ver. 2. 'He (Christ) shall enter into his peace,' walking in his uprightness; while they, the disciples and martyrs, shall rest in their graves, their beds, till the resurrection, Ac. 7. 60. C.

Ver. 3. These titles are first literal; for idolatry and lewdness are synonymous. They are then emblematic of the false doctrines, heresies, worldliness, and image-worship by which Christianity, alas! still continues to be disfigured. C.

Ver. 5. Reference is here made primarily to the gross idolatry and cruel rites practised during the reign of Manasseh. The idol Molech was set up in the bottom of the valley of Kidron, at the mouth of Hinnom, just beneath the overhanging cliffs of Olivet. Molech was heated, and the children were then placed in the open arms of the monster, and roasted alive. Of Manasseh it is said, 'He caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom,' 2 Ch. 33. 6. P.

Ver. 6. A smooth oblong stone is culled from the bed of a river, placed on end under a tree, and water is carried and poured upon it; such idolatry is still practised by the women of Hindostan. C.

Ver. 8. Behind the doors, &c. In secret also, 'behind the doors and the posts,' hast thou 'set up thy remembrance'—dedicated a memorial of thy trust in idols, and thereby incurred the terrible curse of the law, De. 27. 15. C.

Ver. 10. Though wearied with efforts of labour and expensiveness, yet no experience of failure has dissipated false hope: thou hast found a life neither by my Word nor by my Spirit, but of thine own hand (thine own power), therefore thou art not grieved either for thy failures or idolatries. C.—The general sense of this verse is:—No amount of labour in the service of your idols has sufficed to weary or discourage you. Still do you go on in idolatry. You have found in these evil practices sufficient pleasure and profit to keep you from the remembrance of me, but they are filthy rags.

Ver. 12. I will declare thy righteousness to be but filthy rags. Is. 64. 6; 'thy works, that they are not wrought in God, Jn. 3. 21. C.

Ver. 14. Stumbling-block—the offence of the cross. Teach them to look upon Him whom they have pierced, and mourn; teach them to glory in the cross at which they stumbled. C.

Ver. 17. His covetousness. Israel's, ch. 56. 8. Covetousness was one of the ingredients of the first sin. It is idolatry, and therefore specially hateful in the sight of God. But it is not confined to riches, but extends to 'everything that is in our neighbour's.' C.

Ver. 19. This is the fruit of the tree of life, transmitted in the words of 'peace to him that is far off,' the Gentile; and 'to him that is near,' the Jew. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God kindly hides his people in heaven from his terrible judgments on earth. And great is the folly and ignorance of men, that such alarming warnings are often so little regarded. Dreadful indeed must be our inward corruption, which can thus push us to the utmost wickedness in every form, notwithstanding all the laws, mercies, and judgments which God lays in our way to hinder it. And when God himself is thus contemned and insulted, his faithful ministers must not hope to escape. But he will not always suffer our sins to pass unpunished. When he is wroth, not any created helper can in the least avail us. But an abiding faith will secure a blessed portion, both in time and eternity: and God himself will undoubtedly pity and relieve us in our depths of distress. Great is the happiness of those hearts in which he dwells. No evil can approach, no good be absent.—Alas! how covetousness provokes God and ruins men! But infinite is that grace which heaps mercies on the richest deservers of hell. Delightful is the new-kingdom connection betwixt pardon, conversion, comfort, peace,

11 And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought,⁶ and make fat thy bones:⁷ and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not.⁸

12 And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in.

13 ¶ If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:

14 Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth,⁹ and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father; for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.

5 They hatch cockatrice⁴ eggs, and weave the spider's web:⁵ he that eateth of their eggs dieth, and that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper.⁶

6 Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works are works of iniquity, and the act of violence is in their hands.

CHAPTER LVIII. Ver. 1—7. Why complain ye so loudly that I do not reward your fasting, while therein you but gratify your own inclinations, oppress your poor servants, promote contention and oppression of the innocent, reproach your debtors, servants, or neighbours, or content yourselves with mere outward noise and show?—whereas the fasting which I delight in, is to repent of, and reform you from, your wickedness; particularly your usurious exactions and cruel oppressions, and to bestow necessary supplies upon your poor brethren. 8—12. If you forbear and restrain oppression of your neighbours, threatening and derisive contempt, hypocritical dissimulation, and do kindly pity and relieve the destitute and afflicted, great shall be your gracious reward; great shall be your comfort, prosperity, and glory. God shall, by his presence and providence, protect you; he shall readily accept and grant your requests; he shall direct you in all your ways, and while others are distressed with want, ye shall be plentifully provided for, and rendered the honoured instruments of re-establishing your nation, repairing your long desolate cities, and of the erection and re-establishment of the gospel church. 13, 14. And if ye carefully abstain from all carnal labour and recreations on the Sabbath, and with pleasure observe it in the spiritual exercises of my worship, ye shall enjoy unbounded comforts in me, as your God, in my ordinances; and with safety, honour, and pleasure, continue in the possession of Canaan, till at last ye be exalted to the felicities of the heavenly inheritance.

Ver. 2. Seek me daily. They loved to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they might be seen of men. Mat. 6:5.—Delight to know my ways—as Herod, who heard John gladly, Mar. 6:20; as the stony-ground hearers, who received the seed with joy. Mat. 13:20: to whom the word—as mere matter of temporary feeling and taste—is as the words of a song. Eze. 33:32.—Delight in approaching to God. Not for any love to God or his law; but from habit, love of a pompous worship (ver. 3), and the opportunity of attracting the admiration of ignorant followers. C.

Ver. 6. If 'every yoke' is to be broken in the acceptable fast of the LORD, then his Spirit demands the abolition of all that can be called slavery in every nation that names the name of Jesus. C.

Ver. 8. Thy righteousness, &c. Messiah, in whom alone is righteousness, will go before you as your leader, ch. 55:4, and the 'glory of God in the face of Jesus' (2 Cor. 4:6), will protect your reawakening, as did the Shechinah glory in the day when it protected your fathers in the passage of the Red Sea, Ex. 14:19. C.

Ver. 9. Putting forth of the finger. Being connected with the abolition of the yoke, or of slavery, it is most probably an allusion to 1 Ki. 12:10, and synonymous with oppression upon pretence of right. See ch. 59:3. C.

Ver. 12. Tadmor in the desert, which still abides in solitary and desolate grandeur, is believed to have been the work of Solomon, and affords one of the most striking examples of the ruins of many generations. What a cheering prospect is afforded in the predicted restoration of such ruined and deserted cities! C.

Ver. 13. If thou turn away thy foot from works of agriculture, De. 11:10, walks of amusement, or journeys of pleasure, upon the Sabbath. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need that ministers should deal closely with the consciences of their hearers, particularly nominal professors; and that all should seek, by a thorough self-examination, the evident marks of grace. For what alarming lengths in religious appearances do hypocrites sometimes go, and that merely to gratify their own legality and pride! Many flatter themselves that God will reward the services which, in fact, he abhors. And such are often greatly exasperated to have the vanity of their self-confidence exposed. There is much need of great brokenness of heart for and of reformation from sin, in our humiliation for it: otherwise our demure looks will but provoke God to abhor us. Nor can we have a deep sense of Jesus' grace without having our hearts and hands opened towards our poor and distressed brethren: and what is lent to the Lord, by relieving his people, he repays with usury. Let us likewise be careful that our hearts are sanctified and divinely influenced, in order to a proper sanctification of the Lord's-day. Multitudes undergo the most alarming miseries in time and eternity, as the just punishment of their profanation of it; while in keeping his commandments there is a great reward.

CHAPTER LIX. Ver. 5, 6. With the utmost labour and care they frame villainous schemes of doctrine or practice, by which their neighbours and partners are destroyed, and themselves nothing profited.—9—11. To punish our iniquity, men deny us justice, and God refuses to plead our cause. When we expect deliverance and prosperity, our miseries are increased, our spirits are overwhelmed with despair, and our anguish and grief inexpressible. 16—21. Finding that there are scarcely any left to stand up for injured honesty and truth, or even to plead for mercy, God will exert his immediate power in the righteous and faithful salvation of his people, and the destruction of their enemies, Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, Papists, or Mahometans, and thus shall the nations around be awed by, or turned to, the Lord. Whenever Satan, or his instruments, make any assault, God, by the preaching of the gospel, and by his providence, shall graciously and suddenly repress their attempts. Jesus, the almighty Redeemer, shall not only appear in his humble estate in the Jewish church and temple, but shall dwell in his gospel church, and by faith call to himself the remnant of the Hebrew nation along with the fulness of the Gentiles. And the Spirit and oracles of God, granted to him and his church, shall always, especially in the happy time to come, abide with his ministers and people, to direct and instruct them in everthing necessary.

SYNAGOGUE OF CHRIST AT NAZARETH—WHERE CHRIST PREACHED HIS FIRST SERMON. [Isaiah, lxi:1.]—The first sermon that Christ ever preached he preached in Nazareth, in the Synagogue. The Synagogue represented in the picture above is said to stand upon the exact site of the one in which Christ preached. This sermon was the only one Christ ever preached from a text, and that text he found in the 61st chapter of Isaiah: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath annointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound. To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn." It was after the delivery of this sermon that the acquaintances of our Savior led him to the brow of the hill to cast him down.

NAPLES, FROM THE HILL. [Isaiah, lxiii:1.]—"Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." We give a picture of Naples, a Christian city built upon the foundations of a heathen city, to illustrate this 63rd chapter of Isaiah. This chapter was written 2594 years ago, but Christ, to whom reference is made in this prophecy, has gradually changed the character of civilization. Where heathen temples once stood now stand Christian churches. Where men once sacrificed to idols, they now bring themselves willing sacrifices to the Lord Jesus Christ. Where once stood cities consecrated to pagan rights and given up to blindness, there now stand Christian cities regulated by humane laws, and moving in the great open ways disclosed by the life and spirit of Jesus Christ.

ness of his strength? I^a that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.

2 Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat?

3 I^b have trodden the wine-press alone; and of the people there was none with me; for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

4 For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.

5 And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me.²

6 And I^c will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth.

7 ¶ I^d will mention the loving-kindnesses of the LORD, and the praises of the LORD, according to all that the LORD hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving-kindnesses.

8 For he said, "Surely they are my people, children that will not lie:"³ so he was their Saviour.

9 In^e all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them: and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old.

10 But they rebelled, and vexed his holy Spirit: therefore he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them.

11 Then he remembered the days of old, Moses and his people, saying, Where is he that brought them up out of the sea with the shepherd⁴ of his flock? where is he that put his holy Spirit within him?

CHAPTER LXIV.

1 The church prayeth for the illustration of God's power. 4 Celebrating God's mercy, it maketh confession of their natural corruptions. 9 It complaineth of their affliction.

OH that^a thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence,

2 As when the melting fire¹ burneth,² the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name known to thine adversaries, that the nations may tremble at thy presence!

3 When thou didst terrible things which we looked not for, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence.

nam be ignorant of us in the starlike multitude of his seed—though Israel acknowledge us not in the distribution of blessings to his family. C.

Ver. 17. Why hast thou made us to err, &c. Why hast thou adjudged us to be delivered over to our own errors, and judicially hardened our hearts as was the heart of Pharaoh? see Ex. 4. 21, or 'suffered us to err from thy ways to harden our heart' (Lowth, Boothroyd). C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wonderful is Jesus Christ in the view of all that know him. And yet he indulges his servants and people in the most familiar inquiries and requests. Blessed are the periods which God hath fixed for showing mercy to believers, and distributing judgment to the wicked. And with the greatest zeal, fervent affection, and care, he accomplishes every promise or threatening. Nor can the inability or unconcern of others in the least discourage our almighty Saviour, or hinder his success: but thrice dreadful is their destruction in which his glory must be exalted!—Never ought we to remember God's mercies but with minds lost in love, in wonder, and in praise. And every blessing of providence, grace, or glory, in time or eternity, ought to be viewed as having its sole rise in his infinitely rich and gracious mercy. Alas! how base is it to lie, to deal treacherously, to rebel and vex the Holy Ghost, in opposition to that infinite pity and manifold salvation of God's dear Son! But wonderful God mingles his sharpest corrections of his people with his gracious comforts. And it is comely when recounting of mercies, confession of iniquities, and pleading of promises are rightly connected; and when supplicants complain chiefly of spiritual judgments, and fill their mouths with arguments before him.

CHAPTER LXIV. Ver. 1-5. Oh that thou wouldest, in some awful manner, appear for the ruin of thine enemies and the relief of thy people, as in the destruction of the Egyptians and Canaanites, or as at Mount Sinai! For whatever great things thou hast done, we believe that thou wilt still do greater, in the incarnation of thy Son, the spread of thy gospel, and the erection, preservation, and perfection of the New Testament church.—Thou enrichest, with thine unsearchable blessings, them who with pleasure receive thy favours, obey thy laws, and hold fellowship with thee in thy ordinances. And though our sins have long provoked thee to anger, thy ways of mercy are perpetual, and therefore we hope for thy salvation. 6-12. We are indeed wholly corrupted, and our best works abominable in thy sight. Our sins have brought on these wasting and captivating judgments. And very few, with fervent importunity, labour to prevent thy departure, or plead for the removal of thy consuming judgments. But notwithstanding our unworthy carriage towards thee, do thou, our Father and Creator, graciously remember and spare us, moderate and shorten thy corrections, since we are thy faithful people. When Jerusalem and our other cities are laid desolate, and thy temple, in which our fathers long worshipped thee, is burned, and all our pleasant palaces and structures are destroyed, let thy bowels of compassion make thee hasten to our relief.

Ver. 1. Rend the heavens. Surely not the natural and visible heavens; for to rend them were to introduce universal ruin, and could not be a prayer of faith and love; but the political heavens, the moving and directing lights of the rebellious and idolatrous kingdoms. See ch. 13. 10, 13-22; comp. Joel 2. 10. 3. 15. 16-19; Mat. 24. 29.—Mountains. The exalted potentates of the world, whether adverse or friendly to the truth and holiness. They are friendly, ch. 2. 2; adverse, but subdued, ch. 41. 15.—Flow down at thy presence. 'Flow down' as mountains are wont to do when the sun melts the winter snows, see ch. 2. 2; Joel 3. 18, when springs and rivers issue from their bosom, or flocks and herds descend from them as streams, ch. 65. 9, 10. C.

Ver. 3. Thou camest down. This cannot refer to God's coming down on Sinai; for then the people looked for the 'terrible things' that were done, Ex. 19. 3-25. Moreover, upon that awful occasion, mention is never made of 'mountains,' but of 'the mount,' Ex. 19. 11-13, 16, &c. Does it not therefore rather refer to some of those unexpected deliverances which God at different times so signally wrought for his people, as by his judgments on Pharaoh, Sennacherib, and other enemies? C.

Ver. 4. Neither hath the eye seen, &c. 'Nor hath eye seen a God besides thee, who providest such things for them that trust him.' C.

Nevertheless, I will not utterly destroy the nation, as there is among them, and in their loins, a number of believers, who in the apostolic and coming periods, shall truly accept Christ and his church, and become very useful to others. 11-16. But as for the body of that nation, since they have apostatized from my truths and service, and have, at least, in approbation of their fathers' conduct, offered sacrifices to multitudes of idols, and have obstinately rejected the Messiah, they shall terribly be destroyed by the LORD plead with all flesh: and the slain of the LORD shall be many.

17 They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens, behind one tree in the midst,¹ eating^b swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, saith the LORD.

18 ¶ For^c I know their works and their thoughts: it shall come, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and see my glory.

20 And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the LORD, out of all nations, upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts,⁵ to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel⁶ into the house of the LORD.

21 And I will also take of them for priests and for Levites,⁷ saith the LORD.

22 For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD, so shall your seed and your name remain.

23 And it shall come to pass, that from one new-moon to another, and from one sabbath to another,⁸ shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.

24 And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

obstinate Jews, Heathens, Papists, and Mahometans, shall be, in the most terrible manner, punished by the judgments of God, and set up as distinguished monuments of sin, in time or eternity, the Jewish preachers, and others, shall spread the gospel into all parts of the world, and shall become noted instruments of the enlargement, purification, and lively devotion of the gospel church.

Ver. 1. The Jews were proud of their national descent from Abraham, whose faith they knew not; of the law of Moses, whose precepts they kept not; of the temple, whose services they degraded by their profanity; and of JEHOVAH their God, whom they associated with idols. Against this false pride and the false security thence arising, the Lord here proceeds to warn them by showing that heaven is his glorious temple, and the humble man the only acceptable worshipper. C.

Ver. 3. This verse is obscured by the italics of the translators, as the object seems to be a description, not of the comparative guilt of the Jews (as if a certain crime were committed), but the actual abominations they had conjoined with the worship of Jehovah: 'He that slayeth an ox' (to offer to God) 'killeth a man' (to satisfy his own malice); 'he that sacrificeth a lamb' (to Jehovah) 'beheadeth a dog' to a heathen deity; 'he that maketh an oblation' (to the living God) offereth 'swine's flesh' (a sacrifice to the dead); 'he that burneth incense' (emblem of ascending prayer) 'blesseth an idol' that can neither hear nor answer. C.

Ver. 5. The Lord here speaks the word of comfort to his church, anticipating the time when the first Christians were 'cast out of the synagogues,' Jn. 16. 2. and the custom of total exclusion from family affection and aid, as well as church-fellowship, still practised against every Jew who is converted to the 'truth as it is in Jesus.' C.

Ver. 7. When Christ, as 'a child born, a son given,' came in the flesh, a remnant were doubtless expecting and praying for his appearing; but as a nation and church, the Jews neither expected nor desired such a Redeemer. C.

Ver. 8. For as soon as Zion travailed. 'But as soon as Zion travailed,' &c. Of which see the wonderful conversions produced by a single apostolic address, Ac. 2. 41; 4. 4. And surely what God has effected once he is able to accomplish again.—Note, Let believers pray for that outpouring of the Spirit from on high; for neither by 'might nor by power' of man shall this work be effected, 'but by my Spirit,' saith the Lord, ch. 65. 14.

Ver. 12. Like a river, a river, as distinguished from a cistern, which, however deep, is at length exhausted, while the mountain-fed river is rolling on, and, by aid of its tributaries, ever widening as it flows.—Note, This distinction is forcibly exemplified in the distinction between φειά and πηγά, Jn. 4. 11, 14. C.

Ver. 14. Your bones. The bones are the emblems of strength and the mechanical instruments of motion. They abide in the grave when the flesh is decayed, as the root of an herb abides in the ground when the flower is faded, the leaf withered, and the stem cut down. The comparison, therefore, seems to refer to the resurrection as exhibited in the vision of dry bones, Eze. 37. 11.

Ver. 17. Behind one in the midst. 'Who purify themselves at a fountain in the midst of the gardens,' according to Kimchi. But how could any be said to purify themselves behind a fountain?—After the rites of Achad (Lowth). But Achad never elsewhere appears as the name of any idol. The marginal translation, 'one after another,' the literal, 'after one betwixt,' may probably suggest the true meaning, 'successively,' or 'promiscuously.' C.

Ver. 19. I will set a sign. A sign of God's power, faithfulness, holiness, and grace, such as appeared in the incarnation (Lu. 2. 34), preaching (Jn. 7. 46), and miracles of our Lord, and in the endowments, self-denial, and miracles of his apostles, Ac. 2. 19, 22, 43; 4. 30; 14. 3; Ro. 15. 19; 2 Co. 12. 12; He. 2. 4.—My glory. The real demonstration of the 'glory of God' is 'the face of Jesus Christ,' whether marked by the look of tenderness, the tear of pity, the elevation of prayer, the bloody sweat of agony in the garden, or the hand of the smiter in the hall: above all, in his face when he rose from the dead, and brought life and immortality to light from the darkness of the grave, 2 Co. 4. 6. C.

Ver. 23. From one new-moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another (that is, perpetually), shall all flesh come to worship before me, not necessarily in Jerusalem—for that were physically impossible—but 'in spirit and in truth,' where the eye of faith seeth him in the temple of his universal presence, Jn. 4. 20-24; He. 11. 1. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Let my care be to have my heart right with God, and a meet habitation for him through the Spirit. And making Jesus my pattern, let me, with a contrite heart, tremble at his word. God forbid that I should ever value myself on account of external performances in religion, which may be so detestable to him; or that ever he should abandon me to the power and rage of my own lusts, and the fearful suffering attending the same. Hypocrites and church-rulers are frequently the most cruel persecutors. But saints may bear injuries with patience when God will so quickly overbalance them with deliverance and comfort. And the church's remarkable deliverances, enlargements, and joys, are ordinarily introduced or attended by the most tremendous judgments on hypocritical professors and open enemies. All labour and suffering are well bestowed that issue in the conversion of men to Christ. And notwithstanding all that the wicked can do, the word of the Lord hath had, and will have, free course, and be glorified. The ends of the earth shall be made to remember and turn to the Lord. And the grace of God, which bringeth salvation, shall teach men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this world. But what dreadful spectacles of divine judgment have been the Jewish and Roman, and shall be the Popish and Turkish, persecutors of the church! Let, therefore, the British nation stand in awe and tremble!

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ISAIAH.

Isaiah is placed at the head of the glorious prophetic company, not because his prophecy was first in point of time—for he was preceded by Jonah, Amos, and Hosea, and was contemporary with Joel and Micah—but because of the overwhelming importance of his subject, and his frequent references to the coming and kingdom of Christ. Upon this account Isaiah has been distinguished by the title of 'the evangelical prophet.' Concerning his family nothing certain is known, though some suppose him to have been of the blood-royal, and that his father was the son of Joash, and brother of Uzziah. There is a tradition among the Jews, and it has been adopted by many Christian writers, that Isaiah lived till the time of Manasseh, by whom he was sawn asunder. That some one of the prophets so suffered, the apostle affirms, He. ii. 37; but of the individual we are uncertain. If Isaiah lived till the time of Manasseh, he must have exercised the prophetic office during at least sixty-one years—a period by no means improbable, when compared with that during which many ministers of the gospel have continued to discharge the most laborious duties of their offices. It is however certain that he lived till after the fifteenth year of Hezekiah, which makes the continuance of his office beyond all question—calculating from the first of Uzziah—to have been not under forty-eight years.

The name of Isaiah, when interpreted, is, in some measure, descriptive of the nature of his divine message. It signifies 'the salvation of Jehovah,' and was bestowed with singular prophetic propriety upon him who was commissioned to foretell and describe, so vividly and impressively, the glorious advent of Messiah, through whom 'all flesh shall see the salvation of God.' See Is. 40. 5, comp. with Lu. 3. 6; Ac. 4. 12.

Called into office during a period of great national declension from truth, purity, and godliness, one great object of the prophet was to establish beyond controversy the divine origin of the Jewish institutions. This he effects by foretelling some events nigh at hand, 'coming home to men's own lives and bosoms,' and which the living witnesses of his own generation must have been able either to falsify or verify by their own observation. The verification of the prediction, including events most improbable at the time, fulfilled the Mosaic test of the divine commission of a prophet, and left unbelieving idolaters and apostates totally without excuse (see De. 18. 21, 22); while others of his prophecies, stretching far into futurity, have continued to receive an exact but progressive fulfilment during centuries; and others look forward still, and give assurance, by the experience of the past, that all that remain will be accomplished. THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah was a priest descended from Aaron, very early called to the prophetic office (ch. i.), and continued forty or fifty years faithfully discharging it. Living in a period of great dissimulation with God, and of notorious rebellion against him, the miseries which he foresaw, and the persecutions which he endured, rendered his condition extremely afflicted and sorrowful, ch. ix. 1; xi. 18, 19; xv. 10, 15; xvii. 14-18; xviii. 18-23; xx. 7-18; and, excepting some promises of deliverance from Babylon, or redemption through Jesus Christ, and happiness to his church, in ch. iii. xxx.-xxxiii.; xxiii. 3-8; xxiv. 4-7; xxix. 10-14; l. 4-8, 19, 20, 33, 34, he is continually engaged in charging men's sins upon them, or denouncing the judgments of God against them;—as the ruin of the Jewish nation, Egyptians, Philistines, Tyrians, Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Syrians, Arabians, and Persians, by the Chaldeans; and then of the Chaldeans themselves, ch. xxv. xxvii. xlv. li. &c. His first four sermons are generally plain, ch. ii.-xii. The following sixteen are generally introduced by some typical emblem, ch. xiii.-xxxv.

[It is the opinion of the most learned commentators that the prophecies of Jeremiah, having been written upon separate parchments, have not been placed as they were delivered, and the following, among other attempts, has been made to arrange them in chronological order:—after ch. xx., xxii. xxiii. xxv. xxvi. xxxv. xxxvi. xlv. xxiv. xxix.-xxxi. xxvii. xxviii. xxi. xxxiv. xxxvii. xxxii. xxxiii. xxxviii. xxxix. 1-14, lx.-lxvi. lxvii. (Blayney). After ch. xx., xxii. 1-24, xxvi. xlv. 1-13, xxxv. xxv. xxxvi. 1-9, xlv. xxxvi. 9 to end, xxii. 24 to end, lii. 1-4, xxiv. xxix. 1-15, xxix. 16-21, xxix. 15, xxix. 21 to end, xxx. xxxi. xxvii. xxviii. xlviii. xlix. 1-51, xxxix. 1, xxxvii. 1-51, xxxiv. 1-11, xxxii. xxxiii. xxxvii. 5-47, xxxvii. 6-11, xxxiv. 11 to end, xxxvii. 11 to end, xxi. xxxviii. xxxix. 15 to end, lii. 5, 6, xxxix. 3, lii. 7-12, xxxix. 11-15, lii. 24-28, lii. 12-15, lii. 17-24, lii. 15, 16, xxxix. 10, lii. 4, xxxix. 2-10 (Townsend).

Of the comparative value of these suggested arrangements, it is unnecessary to speak, inasmuch as they are at best conjectural; but they are important as specimens of the indefatigable pains bestowed by their respective authors in "searching the Scriptures." C.]

CHAPTER I. Ver. 10. He was appointed to declare what God would infallibly do with the nations. 11-16. The almond-tree, which flourishes very early in the spring, imported that the Jews were almost ripe for destruction, and it would speedily come upon them. And the boiling-pot, with its face toward the north, signified that the Chaldeans would come from the north-east, and burn and render miserable Jerusalem and other cities of Judah. 17-19. Be expeditious and diligent, bold, resolute, and faithful, in delivering my messages, however severe or awful; for I will protect, strengthen, and stablish thee, that none of their persecutions shall hurt thee.

Ver. 1. Anathoth. A city of Benjamin, situated, according to Jerome, about two miles and a half north of Jerusalem. It was assigned to the priests, 1 Ch. 6. 60. It was destroyed by the Chaldeans, and again rebuilt, Ne. ii. 32; but, at present, it fully verifies the denunciations of the prophet, Je. i. 21-23, for nothing remains but a few poor houses on the bleak mountain-side, surrounded by mounds of rubbish and hewn stones. C.

Ver. 2. Word of the Lord. Not a mere utterance which the prophet was commissioned to make; but the Son of God, in visible form, and with audible speech, ver. 4-14, as he also appeared and spoke to Abraham, Ge. 15. 1-18; 17. 1-22. See also Is. 6. 1; Jos. 5. 13; Eze. 1. 26; Da. 8. 15-18; 10. 6-10. C.

Ver. 17. Be not dismayed. Moral courage, arising from a sense of obedience to God, a love for the souls of sinners, a 'conscience sprinkled from dead works,' with deep self-denial that 'Christ may be all in all,' is an indispensable qualification of every one who would seek to convert sinners and build up believers to salvation. Like all other good qualities, it is the gift of God. He that has it should bless God; and he that has it not should pray for it; for without it it is impossible to 'do the work of an evangelist.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great are the pains and patience that God exercises to prevent the destruction of his professed people. And it is honourable to be early chosen, sanctified, and prepared for the ministerial service of God. How real are his purposes relative to men's persons and offices! He can easily qualify men for his service, and enable them to speak intelligibly and powerfully, notwithstanding all weakness or opposition, and though their message issue in the ruin of some and deliverance of others. And with great care doth God render his mind plain to his servants and people, and condescendingly vouchsafes them his presence in their work. In what different forms he warns men before he inflicts his remarkable judgments! And ministers had need to consider the infinite importance

TOMB OF THE HORATII, ON THE APPIAN WAY—PASSED BY ST. PAUL IN CHAINS. [Jeremiah, i:1.]—"The words of Jeremiah, the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin." Jeremiah began to prophesy in the reign of Josiah. Josiah reigned in Jerusalem from 609 to 640 B. C. Near to the time when Josiah was reigning over the Israelites, there was a war between Rome and Alba, which was settled by a contest of the Horatii and the Curatii. These brothers and cousins fought in sight of the Roman and Alban armies with a bravery such as made their names famous in all after ages. The terrible tragedy between the brothers and cousins terminated the independent existence of the Alban power, and gave to the Roman cause complete victory. This tomb is distant about six miles from Rome on the Appian way. Along by this tomb came St. Paul in chains, a prisoner to Rome.

15 For, lo, I will call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the LORD; and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne^s at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 2, 3. I remember the kindness which I showed to your nation when it was but forming, and when in the Arabian wilderness, by solemn covenant, I espoused you first of all the nations of the world to be my holy and peculiar people, and the affectionate regard which your fathers professed for me. And then I severely punished the Egyptians and others who attempted to do them wrong. 13-18. They have rejected me in my oracles, ordinances, and fulness, who am the freely bestowed, everlasting, and unbounded source of all grace, consolations, and blessings; and have, with inexpressible fatigue, procured to themselves idols which cannot give them the smallest relief. No wonder that they are basely enslaved and cruelly spoiled. The Assyrians, like outrageous lions, have wasted the country of the ten tribes, and murdered and carried captive the inhabitants. And the Egyptians have treacherously disappointed you, or shall murder Josiah, depose Jehoahaz, and impose a tribute. And will you, nevertheless, still send messengers to Egypt or Assyria, to form new alliances, or to borrow new idols? 20-28. When I formerly delivered you from the Egyptians, and other oppressors, ye engaged to keep my commandments, yet ye commit idolatry everywhere. I originally formed your nation of pious patriarchs, and established among you my pure oracles, ordinances, and worship; how then are ye become superstitious, idolatrous, and every way corrupt, in both church and state? Nor can all your excuses, evasions, or pretences to reformation, conceal the manifest tokens of your wickedness from me. How can ye deny it, when the valley of Hinnom, where ye have burned your children to Molech, and other valleys where ye have worshipped your idols, manifest it? Ye have, even with madness and fury, run after idols empty as wind, one after another; and till fearful distress restrain you, ye appear quite irreclaimable. I have warned you to repent of your lewd idolatrous, and foolish courses, and of hunting after alliances with heathens, which will bring you to captivity and misery; but ye desperately cleave to your strange gods. Yet all of you at last shall be ashamed of your idols, when ye find that, notwithstanding their multitudes, they can do nothing to save you from disgrace or punishment. 29-37. No excuse can be offered for your conduct; and all of you are guilty. Warnings and judgments have not in the least reclaimed you:

that¹ led us through the wilderness, through a land of deserts and of pits; through a land of drought, and of the shadow of death; through a land that no man passed through, and where no man dwelt?

7 And I brought you into a plentiful country, to eat the fruit thereof and the goodness thereof: but when ye entered, ye defiled² my land, and made mine heritage an abomination.

8 The³ priests said not, Where is the LORD? and they that handle the law knew me not: the pastors also transgressed against me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that do not profit.

9 Wherefore I will yet plead⁴ with you, saith the LORD, and with your children's children will I plead.

10 For pass over⁵ the isles of Chittim,¹ and see; and send unto Kedar, and consider diligently, and see if there be such a thing:

11 Hath⁶ a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? but my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit.

12 Be⁷ astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid, be ye very desolate, saith the LORD.

13 For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.

14 ¶ Is⁸ Israel a servant? is he a home-born slave? why is he spoiled?²

15 The young lions³ roared upon him and yelled,⁴ and they made his land waste: his cities are burned without inhabitant.

16 Also⁵ the children of Noph and Tahapanes have broken the crown⁵ of thy head.

17 Hast⁶ thou not procured this unto thyself, in that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, when he led thee by the way?

18 ¶ And now what hast thou to do in the way of Egypt, to drink the waters of Sihor? or what hast thou to do in the way of Assyria, to drink the waters of the river?⁷

19 Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know, therefore, and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of hosts.

20 For¹ of old time I have broken thy yoke, and burst thy bands; and thou saidst, I will not transgress;² when upon every high hill, and under every green tree, thou wanderest, playing the harlot.

21 Yet I had³ planted thee a noble vine, wholly a right seed; how then art thou turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine unto me?

22 For⁴ though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God.

23 How⁵ canst thou say, I am not polluted, I have not gone after Baalim? See thy way in the valley, know what thou hast done; thou art a swift dromedary⁶ traversing her ways;

24 A¹ wild ass used² to the wilderness, that snuffeth up the wind at her pleasure;³ in her occasion who can turn her away?⁴ all they that seek her will not weary themselves; in her month they shall find her.

25 Withhold⁵ thy foot from being unshod, and thy throat from thirst: but thou saidst, There is no hope:⁶ no; for I have loved strangers, and after them will I go.

26 As⁷ the thief is ashamed⁷ when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests, and their prophets, 27 Saying to a stock, Thou art my father; and to a stone, Thou hast brought me forth; for they have turned their back⁹ unto me, and not their face: but in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise, and save us.

28 But where are thy gods that thou hast made thee? let them arise, if they can save thee in the time of thy trouble:¹ for according to the number of thy cities are thy gods, O Judah.²

29 Wherefore³ will ye plead with me? ye all have transgressed against me, saith the LORD.

30 In vain have I smitten your children: they received no correction: your own sword hath devoured your prophets, like a destroying lion.

31 O generation, see ye the word of the golden calf, Ex. 32. 1-6, throughout all their history, till the Babylonish captivity. Since that period, the tenacity with which they have adhered to their law and traditions, forms an interesting contrast with their former versatility. And no doubt the present decision and tenacity of profession into which Providence has trained them will, when their heart turneth to the Lord, whom they rejected and crucified, render them admirably fitted for that blessed work among the Gentiles, Is. 66. 19, unto which God has destined them in the latter day. C.

Ver. 12. Be astonished, O ye heavens! The heavenly powers who desire to look into the mystery of man's redemption, and with whom there is joy over one sinner that repenteth.—Query, As the sins of professed believers are said even to grieve the Holy Spirit, and crucify the Lord afresh, does not this expression intimate that, even among angels, in heavenly places, there may be a holy sorrow over the sins and apostasies of the church? See Ge. 6. 6; Ps. 95. 10; Ep. 4. 30; He. 6. 6. C.

Ver. 14. Is Israel a servant? God redeemed him from servitude, and made him a son, Ex. 4. 22, wherefore his present enslaved condition must be the punishment of his sins, Is. 50. 1; 52. 3. C.

Ver. 16. Noph was the Hebrew name of Memphis, the capital of Egypt. It stood just at the southern angle of the Delta, where the Nile branched.—Tahapanes, or Daphne, was also an Egyptian city, situated on the border of the country, on the Pelusiac arm of the Nile. These two cities are mentioned as representatives of all Egypt. P.—Broken the crown. By the defeat and death of the good king Josiah, the kingdom was reduced to a tributary province, 2 Ki. 23. 29, 33. C.

Ver. 22. Nitre. Natron, or carbonate of soda, which is found in many parts of Asia and Africa, and when dissolved in hard (acidulous) waters, renders it fit for washing. Mixed with oil, it forms one species of soap. C.

Ver. 23. In the valley. The valley of the sons of Hinnom, where they had built the high places of Tophet. See ch. 7. 31; Is. 57. 5.—A swift dromedary. As swift as the dromedary, which, though subjugated, traverses (rather twists) her ways to pass by her master who would impede or stop her from seeking her mate. C.

Ver. 24. A wild ass. As wild as the onager, which, bred in the desert, and unaccustomed to restraint, snuffeth up the wind, and thereby discovering her companions, hastes to them as matter of right.—In her month they shall find her. Her mate will find her without difficulty, because she seeks as earnestly as she is sought; so Israel sought after idolaters as earnestly as idolaters sought after them. C.

Ver. 25. 'Withhold thy foot from being unshod,' as the wilful dromedary or untamable wild ass; 'and thy throat from thirst,' such as they experience in the wilderness—that is, eschew thy wilfulness and wildness, and let thy feet be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace,

LORD: ¹Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness? wherefore say my people, We ²are lords; ⁴we will come no more unto thee?

32 Can a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire? yet my people have forgotten me days without number.

33 Why trimmest thou thy way to seek love? ⁵therefore hast thou also taught the wicked ones thy ways.

34 Also in thy skirts is found the blood of the souls of the poor innocents: ⁷I have not found it by secret search, ⁸but upon all these.

35 ¶ Yet thou sayest, Because I am innocent, surely his anger shall turn from me: behold, ²I will plead with thee, because thou sayest, I have not sinned.

36 Why gaddest thou about so much to change thy way? thou also shalt be ashamed of Egypt, as thou wast ashamed of Assyria.

37 Yea, thou shalt go forth from him, and thine hands upon thine head: for the LORD hath rejected thy confidences, and thou shalt not prosper in them.

THEY say, ¹If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and become another man's, shall he return unto her again? shall not that land be greatly polluted? but thou hast played the harlot with many lovers; yet return again to me, saith the LORD.

2 Lift up thine eyes unto the high places, and see where thou hast not been lien with: in the ways hast thou sat for them, as the Arabian in the wilderness; and thou hast polluted the land with thy whoredoms and with thy wickedness.

3 Therefore the showers have been withholden, and there hath been no latter rain; and thou hadst a whore's forehead, thou refusedst to be ashamed.

4 Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, My father, thou art the guide of my youth?

5 Will he reserve his anger for ever? will he keep it to the end? Behold, thou hast spoken and done evil things as thou couldest.

of Josiah the king, ⁵Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? she is gone up upon every high mountain and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot.

7 And I said, after she had done all these things, Turn thou unto me; but she returned not. And her treacherous sister Judah saw it.

8 And I saw, when for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery, I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also.

9 And it came to pass through the lightness of her whoredom, that she defiled the land, and committed adultery with stones and with stocks.

10 And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah hath not turned unto me with her whole heart, but feignedly, saith the LORD.

11 And the LORD said unto me, The backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah.

12 ¶ Go, and proclaim these words toward the north, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the LORD, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: for I am merciful, saith the LORD, and I will not keep anger for ever.

13 Only acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the LORD thy God, and hast scattered thy ways to the strangers under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the LORD.

14 Turn, O backsliding children, saith the LORD; for I am married unto you; and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion:

15 And I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding.

16 And it shall come to pass, when ye be multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the LORD, they shall say no more, The ark of the covenant of the LORD; neither shall it come to mind, neither shall they remember it, neither shall they visit it, neither shall that be done any more.

17 At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the LORD: and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the REFLECTIONS.—It is honourable for nations, families, and persons to be early beloved by God, and addicted to his service; and safe to be followers of him through every difficulty. But very absurd is it for those who have shared his distinguished favours to apostatize from him to idols, and render him hatred for love; for church-officers to be ringleaders in guilt; and for men at once to belie their profession, affront their God, and cheat themselves out of happiness. Alas! in what slavery, poverty, and disappointment, and endless wandering after idols, do unbelief and forsaking of God issue! With denial of guilt, eagerness, obstinacy, and impudence, do men, abandoned by God, proceed from evil to worse. And it is common for sinners to supplicate relief from God when their idols cannot help them. But dreadful is their case who, under his word, rod, or favours, grow insolent and imperious in wickedness; and when, forgetting God, notwithstanding checks unnumbered, they abound in impiety.

CHAPTER III. As the Jewish nation were espoused to God by special covenant, apostasy and idolatry, or dependence on heathen allies instead of God, are often represented as whoredom, adultery, or fornication, by the prophets. 1-5. Notwithstanding ye have, under the judgments of famine, &c., multiplied your idols and idolatry, and eagerly hunted after companions in it, and opportunities of committing it, in all the corners of your land, and have impudently gone to your very uttermost in speaking and acting the most horrid abominations; yet, without a moment's delay, return unto me as your infinitely gracious Husband and Father. 11. The sins of the ten tribes, who had been long ruined or in a miserable captivity, were far less aggravated than those of Judah, being committed against fewer warnings, mercies, judgments, vows, &c. 12-25. These predictions began to be accomplished in and after the deliverance from Babylon; 101

18 In those days the house of Judah shall walk with⁹ the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.¹

19 But I said, 'How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee a pleasant land, a goodly heritage² of the hosts of nations?' and I said, 'Thou shalt call me, 'My father; and shalt not turn away from³ me.

20 'Surely, as a wife treacherously departeth from her husband,⁴ so have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the LORD.

fusion covereth us: 'for we have sinned against the LORD our God, we and our fathers, from our youth even unto this day, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God.

CHAPTER IV.

1 God calleth Israel by his promises. 3 He exhorteth Judah to repentance by fearful judgments. 19 A grievous lamentation for the miseries of Judah.

IF thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the LORD, I return^b unto me; and if thou wilt put away thine 'abominations out of my sight, then shalt thou not 'remove.

2 And 'thou shalt swear, The LORD liveth, 'in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; and 'the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory.

3 ¶ For thus saith the LORD to the men of Judah and Jerusalem, 'Break up your fallow ground, and sow not among thorns.

4 Circumcise^j yourselves to the LORD, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem; 'lest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare^j ye in Judah, and publish in Jeru- salem; and say, Blow ye the trumpet in the land: cry, gather together, and say, Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defended cities.

6 Set up the standard toward Zion: 'retire, stay not; for 'I will bring evil from the 'north, and a great destruction.³

7 The 'lion⁴ is come up from his thicket, and but will be much more fully accomplished in the future return of the twelve tribes to Canaan, and in the glories of the Christian church; especially in the coming age, when converts shall be numerous, ministers and magistrates faithful, ceremonies laid aside, and peace, harmony, faith, and godly sorrow prevail.

Ver. 3. The showers have been withheld, &c. At no time are men more disposed to repine and murmur against Providence than during the time of drought; God therefore again and again directs men's thoughts above the clouds to him who sits in heaven, as the only giver of 'rain and dew and fruitful seasons.'—C.

Ver. 12. Here commences a prophecy looking far into the future. It opens with calling Israel from the north—that is, from Media, Persia, the borders of the Caspian, Poland, Lithuania, and other regions lying northerly from Judea; and closes with a period when by conversion to Jesus, commencing with 'one of a city and two of a family,' they shall neither name, remember, nor visit 'the ark of the covenant of the LORD,' ver. 16; and Judah and Israel shall come together out of the land of the north, and shall no more turn from following after the LORD, ver. 17, 18. C.

Ver. 17. That Jerusalem is a name of the church of Christ cannot be questioned. See Ga. 4. 26; He. 12. 22; Re. 21. 2, 3. But that here it signifies the literal Jerusalem can scarcely be doubted by any who considers the literal reality of the sins charged, the judgments inflicted, and, connected with the repentance of Israel, ver. 14, the promise of restoration to 'the land given for an inheritance to their fathers,' ver. 18. See Ro. 11. 26. C.

Ver. 24. Shame. The noted idol Baal was called 'shame,' ch. 11. 13; Ho. 9. 10, from the shameful nature of his worship; and this and similar idolatrous worship devoured Israel's labour continually. This was effected (1) naturally by the habits of dissipation that idolatry fosters; and (2) by the direct and consuming judgments wherewith it is constantly punished. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How base, eager, active, abundant, and impudent in wickedness, apostates from God become! And if we would seriously repent, we must take a particular view of our sins and their aggravations. Unbounded is the mercy of that God of grace with whom we have to do. He is averse to punish with severity; and opens his arms and heart to receive the most enormous transgressors who attempt returning to him by faith. But sad is the case when God's judgments upon our neighbours do not awaken us to detest and avoid their sins; and that, when God bestows reforming magistrates and ministers, many who join in reformation do but dissemble with him. Few backsliders from God are ever recovered. And obstinacy in sin lays bars in the way of our mercies, that nothing less than uncommon stretches of mercy can remove. Earnest are JEHOVAH's calls to faith and repentance; and strong and moving his gracious encouragements; and it is the assured faith of his special mercy that will most truly produce a true and gracious repentance. Peaceful, harmonious, well governed, conspicuous, and pure is the gospel church when everything in her is according to God's Word. And when his Spirit draws men to himself, deep is their sense of their guilt and folly in departing from and rebelling against him; and cordial their dependence on him, and justification of his judgments.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1-4. If you truly return to me by faith and repentance, and reform from your idolatries, and in a candid and upright manner devote yourselves to and serve me, in whom even the Gentile nations shall in a little time be blessed and glory, your captivity may be prevented. Yet not a mere outward reformation, but deep convictions of conscience, and a thorough renovation of your hearts, and purgation from the sinful corruptions thereof, are necessary to the preventing of my approaching and justly deserved judgments.—30, 31. No devices which ye can use shall avail you: the Egyptians and Chaldeans, whose friendship ye have courted, will forsake or murder you, which will occasion terrible anguish and despair all over the country, but especially at Jerusalem.

Ver. 2. Every one who has studied the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments, and carefully noted the history of nations, must have seen how wonderfully the fate of nations is interwoven with the condition of the Jews. Here the repentance of Israel would not only have suspended or superseded their own captivity and exile, but would have expedited and secured the conversion and happiness of the Gentiles. They did not repent—they were scattered—and but a few of the Gentiles have yet 'blessed themselves in him.'—Note. After a man's own personal salvation, few things should more occupy his thoughts than the present and eternal influence his conduct may exercise over others either for good or evil, happiness or misery. 'A word in season' may be instrumental to convert and 'save a soul alive'—a word may poison the heart of the hearer, and be followed by death and misery. C.

Ver. 10. The prophet neither says nor means that God had 'deceived' the people by telling them any flattering untruth—the ordinary meaning of deception—such an imputation would be insulting to the truth and holiness of God, and unworthy of the divine wisdom of the prophet. But the meaning is, 'that while God had promised peace to a penitent people forsaking their idolatry and returning to the Lord,' the Jews, appropriating the promise without realizing the character, have been deceived; and, in this sense only, were deceived by the Lord. In another view God is said to have 'deceived the people,' that is, false prophets prophesied, saying, 'Peace, peace!' when there was no peace; but the people loved and preferred these false prophesies, and detested the truth, wherefore God 'gave them up to strong delusions,' and is therefore said to have done that which he judicially condemned an unbelieving, impenitent, and self-willed people to underlie. C.

Ver. 15. Dan. The north-eastern extremity of Palestine, at which the Babylonians, coming from Damascus, entered the Holy Land. See ver. 6. C.

Ver. 16. Watchers, besiegers. An army, not of temporary marauders, but fully instructed in all the arts of war and endurance of watchfulness. C.

Ver. 17. Grain fields, early ripe, require, in most countries, protection against birds, which, when affrighted from one part of the field, fly to another, and so require the guards to go 'round about' it. In Arabia the ripening grain requires to be strongly guarded against robbers, and as the fields are unfenced, the guards must surround them on all sides.—See Sir J. Chardin. C.

Ver. 19. Is this the exclamation of Israel, of the prophet, or of the LORD himself? Israel could not say, 'I have heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet!' for this was that sound which they sootishly refused to hear. Neither can it be the prophet; for he speaks of 'my tents' and 'my people' who 'have not known me.' This last phrase unquestionably designates Messiah. And as the speaker, throughout the whole discourse, ver. 19-25, is one, speaking uniformly in the first person, the whole must be understood of Messiah himself speaking prophetically as in 'the days of his flesh,' even as when he came near the city, looked upon it, and wept. C.

Ver. 25. No man. At the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, no Jew was left in it, unless such as hid themselves in subterranean passages. The expression 'no man' may, however, be justly interpreted—'no man' was seen who stood up for order and defence. C.

Ver. 26. All the cities. Jerusalem, Acre, and Jaffa alone remain, the mere skeletons of their former glory. All the other cities of Judea have sunk either into mere villages or absolute ruins; so complete is the desolation, that of many the sites cannot be ascertained.—See Wylie's Modern Judea, p. 318-359. C.

Ver. 28. For this shall the earth mourn, &c. This expression alludes to a well-known fact in human nature—that is, that everything, yea, the very sunshine, looks gloomy and dismal to the man whose heart is darkened by hopeless distress—that feels the rod of punishment without the consolations of faith, humiliation, and repentance. C.

Ver. 30. Though thou rendest thy face with painting. 'Though thou distend thine eyes with paint' (Boothroyd). The allusion is to the eastern practice of painting the brows and edges of the eyelids black, which gives the white an enlarged and distended

STREET IN TIBERIAS—ONE OF THE CENTERS OF JEWISH CULTURE AND WORSHIP SINCE THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM. [Jeremiah, iv:1.]—"If thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the Lord, return unto me; and if thou wilt put away thine abominations out of my sight, then thou shalt not remove." We give a street scene in Tiberias because of the view it enables us to get of modern Israelities. After the destruction of Jerusalem, Tiberias became the chief seat of the Jews. In the second century the Sanhedrin was removed here, and here was a great rabbinical school. There are now about three thousand people in this city, nearly two thousand of whom are Jews. They are easily recognized. Many of them have their hair in ringlets and nearly all look pale and effeminate. Most of them, like the Jews in Jerusalem, live on charity. There is something pathetic about the way these ancient people of God hang about Jerusalem and Tiberias.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The enemies sent against Judah encourage themselves. 6 God setteth them on work because of their sins. 9 The prophet lamenteth the judgments of God because of their sins. 18 He proclaimeth God's wrath. 26 He calleth the people to mourn for the judgment on their sins.

O YE^a children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, and blow the trumpet in Tekoa, and set up a sign of fire¹ in Beth-hacerem;² for^a evil appeareth out of the north, and great destruction.

2 I have likened the daughter of Zion³ to a comely^a and delicate woman.⁵

3 The shepherds⁶ with their flocks shall come unto her: they shall pitch their tents against her round about; they shall feed every one in his place.

4 Prepare⁹ ye war against her; arise, and let us go up at noon. ^aWoe unto us! for the day goeth away, for the shadows of the evening are stretched out.

5 Arise, and let us go by night, and let us destroy her palaces.

6 ¶ For thus hath the LORD of hosts said, Hew^a ye down trees,⁷ and cast a mount⁸ against Jerusalem: this is the city to be visited; she is wholly¹ oppression in the midst of her.

7 As^a a fountain casteth out her waters, so she casteth out her wickedness: violence and spoil is heard in her; before me continually is grief and wounds.

8 Be⁹ thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest my soul depart¹ from thee; lest I make thee desolate, a land not inhabited.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand as a grape-gatherer into the baskets.²

10 To^a whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? behold, their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it.³

11 Therefore I am full of the fury of the LORD; I am weary with holding in: I will pour it out upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together: for even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is full of days.

12 And their houses shall be turned unto others, with their fields and wives together: for I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Jeremiah is sent to call for true repentance, to prevent the Jews' captivity. 8 God rejecteth their vain confidence, 12 by the example of Shiloh. 17 He threateneth them for their idolatry. 21 He rejecteth the sacrifices of the disobedient. 29 He exhorteth to mourn for their abominations in Tophet, 32 and the judgments for the same.

THE 'word' that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Stand in the ^bgate of the LORD's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, 'Hear the word of the LORD, all ye of Judah, that enter in at these gates to worship the LORD.

3 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, ^aAmend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

4 Trust^e ye not in lying words, saying, 'The helpless, weak, and terrified, the enemies shall surround the city, and encourage one another, day and night, to give the assault, and destroy it. 9-11. By repeated murders and captivities they shall desolate the country. But to what purpose shall I warn this careless, ignorant, and hardened generation, who detest every message that comes from God, and reckon reproofs slanderous reproaches? Therefore my mind is so full of prophetic threatenings, and of zeal to utter them, that I cannot any longer forbear, but I must denounce destruction to persons of all ages, ranks, and relations. 14. The priests and prophets, instead of faithful reproofs for sin, and denunciation of approaching judgments, do, by their flattering and false predictions of peace, lull the people into a fatal security. 16, 17. Inquire after, and walk in, the good old way of faith and holiness prescribed in paradise, and walked in by your pious ancestors; and thus shall you find both temporal and eternal happiness.—Hearken to the voice of God's ministers, charging you with your sins, and warning you of approaching judgments. 18. Let therefore the heathen nations around observe to what height of wickedness and ripeness for judgments they are arrived! 27-30. I have therefore, under my own infallible protection, set up Jeremiah to observe and reprove their conduct. But they are obstinately wicked, abandoned to lying, slander, and every other base and abominable thing, corrupting themselves and one another. The instructions and admonitions of prophets, and the rebukes of Providence, are of no avail to reform them. Therefore they must be utterly rejected of God and men, as useless and abominable.

Ver. 1. Children of Benjamin. Jerusalem was situated partly in the lot of Benjamin, partly in that of Judah. The exhortation seems directed to Benjamin, either because the supreme power and consequent misrule lay in the hands of Judah, or perhaps they were less depraved than their brethren, and therefore more likely to listen to advice: or, by selecting the tribe among whom he dwelt, the prophet may have hoped to stir up the other to a holy jealousy. See Ro. 10. 19; 11. 11. C.

Ver. 2. Several of the predatory nations of the East are still, not partially, but universally, both soldiers and shepherds. And even at this day the Arabs with their flocks occupy the best of the land of Judea, combining the fearful characters of robber and murderer with that of shepherd. C.

Ver. 4, 5. The first clause conveys God's commission of judgment; the second, the alacrity of the summoned host to 'go up at noon'—the usual time of repose; the third declares their grief that they have not arrived in time to see to do the work of destruction; while ver. 5 declares their impatience for a night attack—the ordinary time for the assault of fortresses. C.

Ver. 6. Cast a mount against Jerusalem. The original is not a raised mound to overlook the walls, but any missile cast against them. The ballista, the catapult, and the scorpion were, in point of fact, enormous bows, variously contrived, by means of springs, ropes, and levers, for shooting arrows or stones against besieged places. C.

Ver. 14. The Jewish priests held the office of physician, as may be seen in the law of the leper, where the symptoms of the disease are most accurately described, and the completeness of the cure most imperatively required. But as the soul is more precious than the body, so is the effectual cure of its diseases proportionally important. To this neither prophet nor priest had attended; but contented themselves with inculcating a narrow and superficial morality, without insisting upon the bodies being presented 'living sacrifices,' and their hearts 'transformed' by 'the renewing' of the Holy Spirit, Ro. 12. 1, 2. C.

Ver. 16. Antiquity, as such, is entitled to no veneration in things civil or religious; for if it were, then were violence and oppression venerable institutions. Ge. 6. 3; Jos. 24. 2. Antiquity is venerable and authoritative just so far as its records and practices are 'good,' that is, authorized of God; and so far as they give 'rest to the soul,' that is, lead men to Jesus, his righteousness and service, Mat. 11. 28. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Sinners must often be alarmed before they will awaken. But fixed is the connection between national sins and national judgments. And the more luxurious and delicate people have lived, their calamity is the more insupportable. When an angry God is the leader, eager and alert to follow are the instruments of his wrath. But, O! how he multiplies his kind, though severe, admonitions before he strikes the fatal blow that desolates the country! Yet no direction, no warning, no good pattern, will prevail with hardened despisers of Christ—the way, the truth, and the life. His judgments on such must therefore appear righteous to every rational beholder. Nor can any pretences to devotion or reformation avail while men continue abandoned to wickedness. Yea, dreadful and desperate must be the issue with those upon whom not all the repeated pains of prophets and providences make any suitable impression.

5 The nature and necessity of true piety and genuine practical godliness, are as fully set forth, and as strongly enjoined by the prophets as by the apostles. The writings of Jeremiah are especially rich in practical exhortations. In no part of the Bible is the folly of mere religious formalism more clearly shown. Christian nations may learn most important lessons from this book; and the cold ritualist may well tremble as he reads.—P.

temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, are these.

5 For ^aif ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings; if ye thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbour;

6 If^a ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt;

7 Then^a will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever.²

8 ¶ Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit.

9 Will^a ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not;

10 And^a come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name,³ and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations?

11 Is^a this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? behold, even I have seen it, saith the LORD.

12 But go ye now unto my place which was in Shiloh,⁴ where I set my name at the first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel.

13 And now, because ye have done all these works, saith the LORD, and I spake unto you, presumptuously appear in my courts, as if ceremonial services could atone for your guilt, and procure you a new indulgence in sin? Is my temple become a refuge for such notorious criminals? 21. You may eat or do what you please with all your offerings, for I detest them.

Ver. 4. Either these courts, and buildings, and apartments, or these worshippers, are the temple of the LORD. In the one view the Jews trusted in the temple as their protection, ver. 14, supposing it had preserved Judah when the ten tribes were carried away; in the other view, they trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and would be preserved on account of the covenant with Abraham, or their own ceremonial observances. C.

Ver. 10. We are delivered, &c. As if they had said, We have been delivered from Egypt, from the perils of the wilderness, from the Philistines, from Sennacherib, and all other enemies, that we might enjoy this freedom of worshipping the gods of our own choice, and practising these rites that the over-scrupulous prophets call 'abominations,' but which we consider rational worship of the 'gods that brought us up out of the land of Egypt,' Ex. 32. 4. C.

Ver. 21. The burnt-offerings were wholly consumed, Le. 1. 9, but only the fat of the peace-offerings. The rest belonged to the priest, and was spent in a religious festival, Le. 7. 29-34; De. 12. 11, 12. God here authorizes them to eat of both; as, being the offerings of hypocrisy and pollution, both were equally unacceptable to him. C.

Ver. 22. This statement draws no contrast between 'ceremonial observances and spiritual duties,' nor asserts any comparative superiority of the one over the other. It merely relates a simple fact—that God neither 'spoke nor commanded' anything concerning burnt-offerings or sacrifice in 'the day' that he brought Israel out of the land of Egypt. That 'day' was the day of passing the Red Sea—the last of Egypt, the first of freedom. See Ex. 15. 26. Neither was there, in the moral law, anything spoken or commanded concerning burnt-offering or sacrifice, see Ex. 20. 1-17; nor was it until the people had, through fear, 'removed and stood afar off,' and prayed that God should speak to Moses, and not to them, that any mention was made of sacrifice, Ex. 20. 24. C.

Ver. 25. Rising up early. As every word of God is fraught with plenitude of meaning, the frequent mention of 'rising up early' is not to be regarded as a casual expression, but as a divine lesson, delivered by example, in favour of early rising—a practice alike conducive to health of body, soundness of intellect, and growth in grace. C.

Ver. 27. Since God knew they would not answer, why did he send? Many evident reasons might be assigned, but the most obvious is sufficient:—though they might not answer, others might take warning by their sin of neglect and severity of punishment. C.

Ver. 33. Tophet was situated at, or close to, the junction of the glens of Hinnom and Kidron, just outside the walls of the ancient city of Jerusalem, and in full view of the temple on Moriah. It is encompassed by high rocks and naked cliffs, and every rock and cliff is honey-combed with tombs. It is a literal fact that

RUINS OF SHILOH—WHERE ABIJAH THE PROPHET LIVED. [JEREMIAH, vii:12.]— “But go ye now into my place which was in Shiloh, where I set my name at the first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people in Israel.” It is said in Joshua, xviii:1, that “the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together at Shiloh, and set up the tabernacle of the congregation there;” but because of Israel’s wickedness the Philistines were permitted to smite and slay them in Shiloh, so that there fell in Israel 30,000 footmen, and the ark of God was taken here, and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain. Here we have the ruins of this city where the ark of the covenant remained so long. It is about 20 miles north of Jerusalem, on the way to Nazareth. There is nothing here but broken ruins.

rising up early⁵ and speaking, but ye heard not; and I called you, but ye answered not;

14 Therefore will I do unto this house, which is called by my name, wherein ye trust, and unto the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, as I have done to Shiloh.⁶

15 And I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim.⁷

16 Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.

17 Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

18 The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen⁹ of heaven,¹ and to pour out drink-offerings unto other gods, that they⁴ may provoke me² to anger.

19 Do they provoke me to anger? saith the LORD: do they not provoke themselves,³ to the confusion of their own faces?

20 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.

21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Put your burnt-offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.

22 For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning burnt-offerings or sacrifices:

23 But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.

24 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination⁵ of their evil heart, and went backward,¹ and not forward.

25 Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day, I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early, and sending them:

26 Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck: they did worse than their fathers.

38 Ashtoreth or Astarte, a goddess of the Phoenicians, is here referred to. Her worship was introduced into Israel at a very early period, and was often accompanied by most immoral and lascivious rites. Her sanctuaries were generally shady groves where the votaries could practise their revelries without subjecting themselves to the

They are chambers hewn in the solid rock; some large and richly sculptured; some constructed with every device that could secure concealment and undisturbed repose for the ashes of the illustrious dead; but almost without exception they have been found empty. The sacrilegious plunderer has visited them, and the words of the prophet in this verse have been fulfilled to the letter.—P.

27 Therefore thou shalt speak all these words unto them, but they will not hearken to thee: thou shalt also call unto them; but they will not answer thee.

28 But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the LORD their God, nor receiveth correction: truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

29 Cut off thine hair, O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on high places; for the LORD hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath.

30 For the children of Judah have done evil in my sight, saith the LORD: they have set their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to pollute it.

31 And they have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart.

32 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor, The valley of the son of Hinnom, but, The valley of slaughter: for they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place.

33 And the carcasses of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away.

34 Then will I cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; for the land shall be desolate.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The calamity of the Jews, both dead and alive. 4 The prophet upbraideth their foolish and shameless impenitency. 13 He sheweth their grievous judgment, 18 and bewaileth their desperate estate.

AT that time, saith the LORD, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves:

2 And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped: they shall not be gathered, nor be buried; they shall be for dung upon the face of the earth.²

3 And death shall be chosen rather than they have buried in Tophet until there is no place. As I returned from a visit to this spot to my temporary abode on Olivet, in the gray twilight of a summer evening, I saw what appeared to me to be a terrible illustration of the fulfilment of this strange prophecy. I saw hyenas, jackals, and vultures tearing the corpses from the shallow graves in the modern Jewish cemetery on the side of the Kidron. With what harrowing vividness did the prophet's dire prediction then flash upon my mind! P.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers have need of great boldness in facing multitudes of obstinate sinners. And it is common for the most profligate hypocrites to hope that their external privileges will recommend them to the favour of God, and even to use them as encouragements to the most horrid impieties. One public judgment of God is ordinarily a presage of another, as well as a warning to avoid the causes of it. But, alas! hopeless is their case for whom God's people must not pray! And yet how readily children confirm the denunciations of God against their parents, by following their evil courses! Ceremonies and forms of devotion do but provoke God more and more against men, who prefer them to the standing duties of morality. Slow and gradual, but at last most certain, are his judgments upon obstinate transgressors. And hardened and barbarous sinners have their crimes fearfully marked in their punishment, and are made to change their sinful mirth into everlasting anguish.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 4-9. Though they are called life by all the residue of them that remain of this evil family, which remain in all the places whither I have driven them, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 ¶ Moreover, thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD; 'Shall they fall, and not arise? shall he turn away, and not return?

5 Why then is this people of Jerusalem slidden¹ back by a perpetual backsliding? they hold fast deceit, they refuse to return.

6 I² hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright: 'no man repented him of his wickedness, saying, What have I done? every one turned to his course, 'as the horse rusheth into the battle.

7 Yea, 'the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; 'and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow, observe the time of their coming: but my people know not the judgment of the LORD.³

8 How⁴ do ye say, We are wise, and the law of the LORD is with us? Lo, certainly 'in vain⁵ made he it; the pen of the scribes is in vain.⁶

9 The⁷ wise men are ashamed,⁸ they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD; and what 'wisdom⁹ is in them?

10 Therefore 'will I give their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall inherit¹⁰ them: 'for every one, from the least even unto the greatest, is given to covetousness; from the prophet even unto the priest, every one dealeth falsely.

11 For¹¹ they have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

mited abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore shall they fall among them that fall; 'in the time of their visitation they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

13 ¶ I will surely consume⁹ them, saith the LORD: 'there shall be no grapes on the vine, nor figs on the fig-tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.¹

14 Why do we sit still? 'assemble yourselves, and let us enter into the defenced cities, and let us 'be silent there; for the LORD our God hath 'put us to silence, and given us 'water of 'gall to drink, because we have sinned against the LORD.

15 We 'looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble!

16 The² snorting of his horses was heard from Dan;³ the⁴ whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones; for they are come,⁴ and have devoured the land, and all that is in it;⁵ the city, and those that dwell therein.

17 For, behold, I will send 'serpents,⁶ cockatrices, among you, which will not be charmed, and they shall bite you, saith the LORD.

18 ¶ When I would comfort myself against sorrow, 'my heart is faint in⁷ me.⁸

19 Behold, 'the voice of the cry of the daughter of my people, 'because of them that dwell in a far country.⁹ Is¹⁰ not the LORD in Zion? 'is not her king in her? why have they provoked me¹ to anger with their graven images, and with strange vanities?

into grievous calamities, they will hearken to no counsel that will tend to their recovery; but persevering in their wickedness, they continue firmly trusting to the flattering delusions of their false prophets. Scarcely one of them seriously thinks what he has done; but in general they rush forward into abominable practices, quite thoughtless and regardless of danger. More brutish than the fowls of heaven, they have no proper discernment either of God's mercies or judgments.—Though God has given them his law, and it has been copied out and expounded to them, and they even boast of it, yet they make no good use of it. Their politicians can advise nothing for their relief, and indeed show themselves arrant fools by their rejection of God's word. 18-20. I am almost overcome with grief to hear the cries of the people, occasioned by the ravage of the Chaldeans. How comes it that we, who are God's people, and have his temple among us, are thus destroyed by profane heathens? It is because of our idolatries; and after all our looking for assistance from the Egyptians or others, the season is past, and no help is come. 22. All means of help fail, because we continue obstinate in our sin.

Ver. 2. It seems natural to the living man to be anxious about his dead body. This natural feeling seems heightened by the hope and assurance of a resurrection. Whatever therefore interferes with the repose of the grave, seems equally to violate the feelings of nature and religion. Such violation, however, may arise (1). From rude, irreverent, and savage neglect or contempt. (2) In condemnation of some sin of the dead, and as a lesson to the living; thus Josiah burned the bones of the idolaters on the altar at Bethel, 2 Ki. 23. 16, 20. (3) As matter of idle curiosity or science; thus the mummies of Egypt form an ordinary article of European commerce among the learned. (4) They have not unrequently been dragged from their resting-places as manure for the earth. (5) Less frequently, and less extensively, for the purpose of superstitious and unholy rites. (6) For the purpose of clearing the sepulchral vaults as dwelling-places for a wretched and houseless population; of which fact examples are often found in various parts of Western Asia. C.

Ver. 3. Death shall be chosen rather than life. Examples of the voluntary choice of death have frequently occurred among the Jews when cruelly persecuted under pretence of religion, but really on account of their wealth and usury. Thus, during the reign of king John, in the city of York in England, a large party, having first put their wives and children to death, set fire to the place in which they were assailed, and, with all their riches, perished miserably by their own hands. C.

Ver. 16. The snorting of his horses. Many eastern armies are altogether composed of horsemen; all others, and they are often very numerous, are mere camp-followers, and never engaged in battle. C.

Ver. 21. I am black. A phrase signifying the deepest melancholy and distress—an allusion to the precasting of the sky with black clouds before a storm, ch. 14. 2; Joel 2. 6; Na. 2. 10. C.

Ver. 22. Balm in Gilead. The Balsamum judaicum has been celebrated by Pliny, Tacitus, &c., for its costliness, its medicinal virtues, and as the product of Judea alone, and of one particular spot in that country which Josephus assigns to Jericho. Bochart, however, considers the Gilead balm to be the resin of the terebinth, which grows abundantly in that district; and as it and similar products are often used in dressing wounds at particular stages, this opinion seems the most probable. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Barbarous is the outrage of bloody conquerors in sporting with the remains of the dead. But it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of an angry God, who can stretch out his hand to death and damnation to devour us. Just is his judgment in exposing idolaters, even when dead, before the idols which they had loved and worshipped in life; and fearful is the state when life becomes a burden, and men prefer to it a random leap into eternity. How obstinate against God, how attached to apostasy and how regardless of God's Word, do most men live! But none are more distinguished plagues to nations than evil, flattering, and impudent clergy. Nor shall any in hell have a deeper share of damnation. To their running unsest of God, preaching another gospel, and slight dealing with the consciences of sinners, is owing the ruin of nations and churches, and the everlasting misery of millions. But when God arms himself to judgment against a people, what multitudes of calamities beset them! what deprivation of comforts! what disappointments, terrors, and despair! And it is greatly affecting to faithful ministers to see ruin, inevitable ruin, coming on their congregation, church, or nation.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 2. Princes in Asia frequently erect in the desert parts of their dominions rest-houses, or choultries, where travellers may reside for a night, a solitary and uncomfortable dwelling, but preferable to a palace amidst profligate and abandoned society. C.

Ver. 13. And the Lord saith—that is, Messiah saith—'God manifest in the flesh,' the only 'wise man,' 'the wisdom of God'—he declares the origin of natural to be moral evil; and traces up the stream of judgment to the fountainhead of sin. C.

Ver. 15. Wormwood. This is, most probably, the plant commonly so named.—Gall. What plant is meant is not known, but there can be no doubt that it signifies something very bitter—the emblem of sorrow and distress. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Manifold causes of weeping have faithful ministers in this world. And it is a fearful token of approaching judgments when they are so vexed with their people's abominations as to become weary of dwelling among them. Alas! sinful lusts transform even professors into very devils in crimes. Many are at great pains to secure their own damnation; and one sin opens the door for another. But terrible are the judgments of God upon obstinate sinners. And in a wonderful manner, by the same fire which consumes the wicked, he refines his own people. But every step of departure from him tends only to misery. And let sinners flee where they will, his curse attends them. Death closely follows sin. And very foolish are they who lament losses and death, but never lament sin as the cause of them, nor stand in awe of damnation. But it is very difficult to wean hardened sinners, especially gospel despisers, from every false confidence. Line must be upon line, and precept upon precept, and perhaps after all they will cleave thereto, and perish with heathens.

FALLEN COLUMNS OF THE PARTHENON—DORIC COLUMNS OF THE STYLE OF ARCHITECTURE WHICH FLOURISHED IN ATHENS DURING THE TIME THAT JEREMIAH WROTE. [Jeremiah, x:10.]—"But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting king; at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation." Jeremiah is supposed to have written the words referred to above about B. C. 600. In this very year Pherecydes, the philosopher, was born, and this was a flourishing period of the dangerous for those who have been taught of God to learn the ways of heathens. God's eternal power and Godhead are so manifest as to leave the most stupid idolaters without excuse; and the more we contemplate his unsearchable greatness and glory, the more we shall be filled with reverence and godly fear, and lost in admiration. If he be our King, let us show ourselves faithful subjects, dependent on his protection, and devoted to his service. If he be our Portion, we can wish nothing beyond him. But often men remain ignorant of his excellency, and of the vanity of idols, till it be too late, and till his word be verified in their irrevocable and tremendous destruction. Terrible is the prospect when both rulers and ruled are plunged in ignorance, and abandoned to atheistical neglect of prayer. Neglect of God's worship in families ranks is not in himself: *it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.*³

Doric and Ionic orders of architecture in Athens. The Parthenon, fallen columns of which are shown in the above picture, was the most beautiful specimen of Doric architecture ever seen. Looking upon these pieces of broken marble as they lie scattered on the Acropolis, we can not help feeling the force of the words of Jeremiah: "The nations of the earth shall not be able to abide his indignation." In no other nation has architecture come to such high and exquisite perfection as in Greece. but it was all consecrated to idolatry.

An exhortation to flee from calamity.

CHAPTER XI.

¹ Jeremiah proclaimeth God's covenant, ⁸ rebuketh the Jews' disobeying thereof, ¹¹ prophesieth evils to come upon them, ¹⁸ and upon the men of Anathoth, for conspiring to kill Jeremiah.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Hear^a ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem;

3 And say thou unto them, ^bThus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^cCursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this ^dcovenant,

5 That I may perform the ^goath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day.¹ Then answered I, and said, So be it,² O LORD.

6 Then the LORD said unto me, ³Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and ⁴do them.

7 For ⁵I earnestly protested unto your fathers, in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 15, 16. What have the Jewish nation, whom I once so dearly loved and cherished, now to do in my temple, when they are so abandoned to idolatries, and when their sacrifices, which were once holy, are rendered detestable because of their obstinacy and joy in wickedness? I once made them outwardly flourishing and prosperous, and put them into a capacity to do much good, but now they shall be destroyed by the furious Chaldeans.

3 This appears to be the sad and humiliating inference which the prophet draws from his thoughtful survey of the state of Israel. Total depravity, utter helplessness, is the natural condition of fallen humanity. No power but the power of God can raise it up: no life save that which the Divine Spirit imparts can quicken it.

The Lord bore with the sins of the people during many centuries; but the time had at length come when mercy must give place to justice. wonderful relics of their labour and skill will show that the Egyptians must have been well supplied with iron tools. And the allusion here, and in De. 4. 20, renders it highly probable that they were acquainted with the preparation of iron from the ore, and that the Israelites were condemned to work at their furnaces. C.

Ver. 6. The prophet, it appears, was commanded to itinerate as a preacher of righteousness from city to city, and as is customary in milder climates, to preach in the public streets. C.

Ver. 13. The Israelites had adopted the custom of Egypt, where every city had its own peculiar tutelary deities, besides the national gods that were worshipped in common: a system of which it is melancholy to behold the exact reflected image in the tutelary saints assigned by the Church of Rome to countries, cities, families, or individuals. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God greatly loves true holiness; and abundant, but gracious, are his rewards of it. The saints of God delightfully consent to his transactions of grace, but especially to the better promise made with men in Christ, and established upon better promises than the national covenant which God made with Israel. But it is hard to make unregenerate men have so much as a semblance of holiness; on the contrary, they are ready deliberately and obstinately to combine against the Lord their God. But if they will not be ruled by his law, they must be destroyed by his curse. And dreadful is their case for whom prayer cannot avail: God will not, and idols cannot, help. Neither present devotions nor the past favours of God can profit them. Faithful ministers are often barbarously rewarded by those who should be their protectors. And none have been more malicious persecutors than profane clergymen. But if God preserve and vindicate his servants, they may possess their souls in patience, and continue their faithfulness. And, alas! wretched will be the condition of those who have injured them when God rises up to punish.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Under the type of a linen girdle, hidden at Euphrates, God prefigureth the destruction of his people. 12 Under the parable of bottles filled with wine, he foretelleth their excess of misery. 15 He exhorteth them to prevent their future judgments. 22 He sheweth their abominations are the cause of these evils.

THUS saith the LORD unto me, Go and get thee a 'linen girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it 'not in water.

2 So I got a girdle, 'according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins.

3 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying,

4 Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to 'Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

5 So I went and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it: and, behold, the girdle was marred, it was 'profitable for nothing.¹

8 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Thus saith the LORD, 'After this manner will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

10 This¹ evil people which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the imagination² of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, 'shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.

11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that they might be unto me for a people, and 'for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: 'but they would not hear.³

12 ¶ Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every⁴ bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, 'Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?⁴

13 Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the in-

REFLECTIONS.—The prosperity of wicked men has often been a stumbling-block to the godly. But let God do as he will, it is certain he will never do what is unrighteous. His providences may be dark, but never unjust; nay, nor unkind to the upright. We may sit easy under men's revilings, if we be conscious of God's approbation of us. Yea, there is no reason to covet that prosperity which fattens men, particularly hypocritical professors, for the fearful loss of God's favour. Atheistical and prophet-murdering sinners are a great plague to their country. And yet, if ministers will be faithful, they must expect more and more opposition, especially from evil brethren. And very justly the Lord metes out heavier trials to such as rage and fret at lesser ones, even when the lesser kindly prepare for the greater. Dreadful are those sins which make God desert and detest those ordinances and persons for which he has professed the greatest regard. But men's furious rage against him and his ways must be punished with fearful judgments. And yet no judgments fail to harden and exasperate sinners when God has withdrawn his Spirit from them. They who have tempted us to sin, ordinarily become our tormentors in punishing us. And if judgment begin at the house of God, the wicked corrupters and abusers of it need not thy soul loathed Zion? why hast thou smitten us, and there is no healing for us? we looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble!

20 We^a acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers; for we have sinned against thee.

21 Do^a not abhor us, for thy name's sake; do not disgrace the throne of thy glory:³ remember, break not thy covenant with us.

CHAPTER XV.

¹ The utter rejection and manifold judgments of the Jews. 10 Jeremiah, complaining of their spite, receiveth a promise for himself, 12 and a threatening for them. 15 He prayeth, 19 and receiveth a gracious promise.

THEN said the LORD unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people; cast^b them out of my sight, and let them go forth.¹

2 And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the LORD, Such as are for ²death,³ to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity.

3 And I will ^aappoint over them four kinds,⁴ saith the LORD; the sword to slay, and the dogs to tear, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy.

12 Shall^a iron break the northern iron and the steel?²

13 Thy^a substance and thy treasures will I give to the spoil without price, and that for all thy sins, even in all thy borders.

14 And^a I will make thee to pass with thine enemies into a land which thou knowest not; for a fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.

15 O LORD, thou knowest: remember me, and visit me, and revenge me of my persecutors: take me not away in thy long-suffering: know that for thy sake I have suffered rebuke.

16 Thy words were found, and I did eat them;³ and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for I am called by thy name,⁵ O LORD God of hosts.

17 I^a sat not in the assembly of the mockers,⁶ nor rejoiced; I sat alone, because of thy hand: for thou hast killed me with indignation.

18 Why is my pain perpetual, and my wound incurable, which refuseth to be healed? wilt thou be altogether unto me as a liar, and as waters that fail?⁷

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD, If thou return,⁸ then will I bring thee again, and thou shalt stand before me: and if thou take forth the precious⁸ from the vile,⁹ thou shalt be as my mouth: let them return unto thee; but return not thou unto them.¹

20 And^a I will make thee unto this people a fenced brazen wall; and they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee to save thee, and to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

21 And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

CHAPTER XVI.

¹ The prophet, under the types of abstaining from marriage, and from houses of mourning and feasting, foreshoweth the utter ruin of the Jews, 10 because they were even worse than their fathers. 14 Their return from captivity shall be more memorable than their deliverance out of Egypt. 16 God will doubly recompense their idolatry.

THE word^a of the LORD came also unto me, saying,

2 Thou^b shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place.

Ver. 18. 'As the lying waters' (of the Serab) that appear to the traveller in the desert as a lake in the distance, but 'fail' and disappoint on his approach.—'Wilt thou be to me as a failing spring—as waters that are never sure?' (Boothroyd).
Ver. 19. If thou return to my word as the 'well of living (and not of failing) waters,' making it your joy in all this sorrow, ver. 16, 17. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of nations when chargeable with sins which God will not pardon, and when the prayers of the choicest saints avail nothing for their relief. For in diversified and dreadful forms God can, even on earth, avenge himself on his enemies. Ministers, if faithful, must expect the most ungrateful returns from the world. And however earnestly they should follow after peace with all men, it must never be purchased by base and flattering compliances in sin; nor ought they to entangle themselves with the affairs of this world. But it is hard for the best to keep their temper in an evil day. It is astonishing that God should be so condescending and kind to his peevish saints. And they who distinguish themselves in piety, faithfulness, and diligence, may expect his distinguished favours and protections. If hypocrites will persecute them, heathens shall show them kindness. And however our frames change, we ought never to doubt of his faithfulness and fulfilment of all his promises.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 6. Nor cut themselves. The custom of cutting the flesh in mourning was practised in several ancient nations. Among the Athenians it prevailed, and was forbidden by Solon. The Spartans were accustomed, in mourning for their great men, to tear their flesh (Harwood's Grecian Antiquities, and was found amongst the modern South Sea Islanders. Though prohibited by Mahomet, it still maintains its ground in Moslem countries. In the annual mourning in Persia for Hassen the son of the Caliph Ali, many run about uttering doleful cries, and cutting themselves with knives and lancets till completely covered with blood. This barbarous practice was forbidden, by the divine law, Le. 19. 28; notwithstanding which it still appears to have prevailed among the disobedient Hebrews. C.

2 'The northern iron' was doubtless of a superior quality, most probably prepared and hardened in some peculiar manner, like the steel obtained from the Chalybes of Pontus. A method of hardening iron was known in Pontus at a very early period. Nor, therefore, was somewhat like our steel. The word rendered 'steel' in this verse means copper, and ought to be so translated. In ancient times copper was mixed with other metals which rendered it hard and durable.—P.

Some special forms of the practice was, however, forbidden by the divine law, De. 14. 1, and to the priests it was altogether interdicted, ver. 5. It prevailed among the Greeks (see Harwood's Antiquities, p. 363), and is still found in Abyssinia.

In England, during the plague, 1559, one of the precautions against the spread of the disease was, that the bodies of funeral dinners (Maitland's London, vol. 1. p. 266). The allusion here, however, seems to be, not to a funeral, but to a marriage feast. See ver. 9.

14 A foolish defence, founded upon their total ignorance or disregard of the law of God, is often looked upon by Christians with surprise. Alas! how many examples of equal ignorance, disregard, and justification, or, at least, palliation of sin, may Christians readily discover among themselves! The Sabbath is violated upon human authority, in opposition to divine law; and what is the answer? 'What is our iniquity? what our sin against the Lord our God?'—Now, Sin, and the defence of sin, are the same in all ages, and among all people.—C.

3 For thus saith the LORD concerning the sons and concerning the daughters that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begat them in this land;

4 They^c shall die of grievous deaths: they shall not be lamented, neither shall they be buried; but they shall be as dung upon the face of the earth; and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their carcases shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

5 For thus saith the LORD, Enter not into the house of mourning,¹ neither go to lament nor bemoan them: for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD, even loving-kindness and mercies.

6 Both the great and the small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, neither shall men lament for them, nor cut themselves, nor make themselves bald² for them.

7 Neither shall men tear³ themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead; neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to drink for their father or for their mother.

8 Thou^d shalt not also go into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink.⁵

9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

10 And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt show this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, Wherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?

11 Then shalt thou say unto them, Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law:

12 And ye have done worse than your fathers; for, behold, ye walk every one after the

Ver. 7. Cup of consolation. This was a refreshment sent to mourners by their friends. In ancient times the Jews were accustomed to send bread, fruits, and wine; in modern times they send eggs, salt, and a small loaf (Allen's Modern Judaism, p. 439), which is sometimes called 'the bread of bitterness,' and seems to be alluded to in 2 Sa. 3. 35; Eze. 34. 16, 17; Ho. 9. 4. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In evil days, a concern for our church and nation ought to swallow up our care for natural relations; for then our families, and other created comforts, become occasional additions to our trouble. Carnal feasting and mirth are very unseasonable when God's destructive judgments are hanging over and ravaging around us. God is exact in marking men's iniquities, and unavoidable is his punishment of them; but it is very hard to convince obdurate sinners of their guilt, or of the equity of God's judgments. And yet how infinite is his mercy in connecting the most awful judgments with the most gracious deliverances, and in making his strokes of wrath to prepare men for the reception of his favours! And marvellous imagination⁷ of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me;

13 Therefore⁸ will I cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night, where I will not show you favour.

14 ¶ Therefore,⁸ behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be said, The LORD liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

15 But, The LORD liveth that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

16 ¶ Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the LORD, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 For mine eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes.

18 And first⁹ I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double;¹ because they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcasses of their detestable and abominable things.

19 O LORD, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit.

20 Shall a man make gods unto himself, and they are no gods?

21 Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know² mine hand and my might; and they shall know that my name is the LORD.⁴

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The captivity of Judah for her sin. 5 Trust in man is cursed, in God is blessed. 9 The deceitful heart cannot impose upon God. 12 The salvation of God. 15 The prophet complaineth of the mockers of his prophecy. 19 He is sent to renew the covenant in hallowing the sabbath.

THE sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond;² it is graven upon the table of their heart, and upon the horns of your altars;

2 Whilst³ their children remember their altars and their groves⁴ by the green trees upon the high hills.

3 O my mountain⁵ in the field, I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, and thy high places for sin,⁷ throughout all thy borders.

4 And thou, even thyself,⁸ shalt discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee; and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not: for ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm,⁹ and whose heart departeth from the LORD.

6 For he shall be like the heath in the desert,¹ and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited.

7 Blessed² is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is:

8 For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh; but her leaf shall be green, and shall not be careful in the year of drought,² neither shall cease from yielding fruit.

REFLECTIONS.—Sinful corruptions are deeply rooted in men's hearts, and fixed in their practice, though sin effectually robs us of everything valuable. There is great malignity and hurt in trusting to creatures. It draws our heart from God, the blessed ALL and IN ALL. But much satisfaction and success attend a solid dependence upon him alone as our God. Alas! what an unsearchable fund of all manner of deceiving and desperate wickedness is an unrenowned heart! But all is naked and open before the righteous Judge of all, and punisher of the wicked. And dreadful is the curse annexed to ill-gotten riches, as well as to resting on self-righteousness. Great is the esteem which saints have for the temple, the ordinances, the Christ of God. And while he is the hope, the praise, the healer, and the saviour of his people, he is the awful, but just, punisher of his and their enemies. A fearful portion of debasement, terror, and ruin shall earthly men, and apostates from God, receive at the last. When they become incorrigible, their damnation slumbereth not. And O the strength of indwelling corruption, that makes even precious prophets sinfully fret when they meet with much opposition in the execution of their office! Great is the mercy that God does not always employ them in the unpleasing messages of wrath. Alas! the folly and wickedness of nations—of Britain—in disregarding God's Sabbaths, when such important blessings to are all his ways: he makes both the miseries and the deliverances of the Jewish nation to promote the gathering of the Gentiles to Christ.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 1, 2. Their proneness to idolatry is deeply rooted in their hearts, and marked on the multitudes of their altars; and they continue in it from generation to generation. 5-8. They who, instead of depending upon God, depend upon human powers for help, shall not only be disappointed of that safety and prosperity which they expected, but shall bring upon themselves the lasting miseries which they thought to have escaped; but they who trust in the LORD shall prosper in their undertakings, and be safe and happy when all around them are in distress. 12-18. O Lord, who hast long dwelt with us in thy tabernacle and temple, and in whom we hope for all necessary blessings, they that apostatize from thee, the infinite source of pure and lasting consolations, shall be disgraced, contemned, and destroyed. But do thou, the object of all my praises, deliver me from the injuries which I suffer from this malicious people, and effectually grant me comfort. They insolently deride me, as if the threatenings which I denounce would never be fulfilled. But I have patiently persevered in delivering thy messages to them, without ever desiring to bear one message of destruction, or to see it executed; and I have never spoken but as directed by thee. Do thou therefore acknowledge, protect, and comfort me, while they malign, terrify, and persecute me. And let these my persecutors be disgraced, perplexed, terrified, and fearfully destroyed.

Ver. 1. The key to this difficult passage seems to be ch. 10. 5, where the Jews are charged with sacrificing their children to Baal. May it not, accordingly, be paraphrased thus:—'The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron (in blood), and with the point of a diamond (or flint, some hard species of stone formed into a sacrificial knife, as was common with the heathen); it is graven upon the table of their (the people's hard) hearts (from which natural affection has been obliterated), and upon the horns (ye priests of your altars to which horns the helpless victims are bound) when they (the people) commemorate their (sacrificed) children at their altars and their groves,' &c. &c.?

Ver. 6. A salt land. Equivalent to barren land: for though several, perhaps all, kinds of salt, act as a stimulant manure when applied in small quantity, yet, when largely mixed with earth, they destroy the vegetation of all except a few marine plants. The neighbourhood of the Dead Sea, some parts of Arabia Petrea, large districts of the African deserts, and of South America, are so full of salt as to be totally barren. C.

Ver. 18. This is not an imprecation of wrathful revenge, prompted by passion, but an appeal from man's injustice and cruelty to God's justice, mercy, and protection. See notes on Ps. 5. 10; 35. 8. C.

Ver. 23. Their necks stiff. Jews and Christians have strangely assimilated in 'making their necks stiff' against the light and easy yoke of the Sabbath: (1) By degrading the fourth commandment from a moral to a mere ceremonial institution. (2) By pleading the absolute necessity of many public works being continued on God's prohibition of labour. (3) By a view of the gain derivable from Sabbath traffic, under a pretended regard for public accommodation, convenience, and health. Doctrines, pleadings, and excuses to 'make void the law,' against which this prophecy directs alike the authority, ver. 20, the promises, ver. 24, and 9 ¶ The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked:³ who can know it?

10 I the LORD search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.

11 As the partridge⁴ sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not;⁵ so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool.

12 ¶ A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.

13 O LORD, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be written⁷ in the earth,⁸ because they have forsaken the LORD, the fountain of living waters.

14 Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise.

15 ¶ Behold, they say unto me, Where is the word of the LORD? let it come now.

16 As for me, I have not hastened⁹ from being a pastor to follow¹ thee; neither have I desired the woful day, thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was right before thee.

17 Be not a terror unto me: thou art my hope in the day of evil.

18 Let them be confounded that persecute me, but let not me be confounded; let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed: bring upon them the day of evil, and destroy them with double destruction.²

19 ¶ Thus said the LORD unto me, Go, and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem;

20 And say unto them, Hear ye the word of the LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates:

21 Thus saith the LORD, Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath-day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem.

22 Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath-day, neither do ye any work; but hallow ye the sabbath-day, as I commanded your fathers.

23 But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath-day, but hallow the sabbath-day, to do no work therein;

25 Then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever.³

26 And they shall come from the cities of Judah, and from the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south,⁴ bringing burnt-offerings, and sacrifices, and meat-offerings, and incense, and bringing sacrifices of praise, unto the house of the LORD.

27 But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath-day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath-day; then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Under the type of a potter is showed God's absolute power in disposing of nations. 11 Judgments threatened to Judah for her unexampled revolt. 18 Jeremiah prayeth against his conspirators.

THE word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Arise,^b and go down to the potter's house, and there will I cause thee to hear my words.

3 Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought a work on the wheels.²

4 And the vessel that he made of clay was marred³ in the hand of the potter; so he made courts, kingdoms, and churches attend the careful sanctification, and such fearful miseries attend the profanation, of it!

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 14-18. Though no man will prefer the waters of a dirty puddle to those that come from the rocks of Lebanon, my people Israel have preferred to me the most filthy and useless idols, which, by their worship and votaries, seduce them into abominable courses, neither used by the saints of old, nor fit for them; and which will certainly issue in the dreadful desolation of their country, and the dispersion and rejection of their nation. Yet when Jeremiah delivers these messages of wrath, they contrive how to silence, reproach, disregard, or murder him: and boast that, in defiance of all his threatenings, they shall prosper, since they have the priests, statesmen, and prophets on their side.

Ver. 8. I will repent. Repenting, in man, includes a turning from sin, with grief and hatred of it: wherefore many are surprised to find repenting attributed to God: forgetting they are expressly told that 'God is not a man that he should lie; neither the son of man that he should repent.' Repenting, in God, implies not a change of mind—for in God 'there is no variableness'—it implies merely a change of relation between God and man, and a consequent change of God's dispensation towards him. To the sinful man or nation God's relation, as moral governor and judge, demands condemnation; to the penitent man or nation it as necessarily extends mercy and pardon. See note on Ex. 32. 14. C.

Ver. 21-23. Scott, than whom there is seldom a safer guide, observes upon this trying occasion, especially as we must allow this to have been the case in other instances, comp. ch. 15. 15-18: 20. 10-18. Now this, from such an authority, is an exceedingly dangerous supposition. Could the author have forgotten that as a prayer it must have been either of faith or of sense? If of sense, then of the will of man; if of faith, then of the Spirit of God? Could he have forgotten that the prayer was heard and the judgment poured out? Had he forgotten that the prophet, speaking by the Spirit and in the name of the Lord, merely delivers, in the form of a prayer, the sentence which God had commissioned him to pronounce upon an impenitent and abandoned generation? C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is proper that God should exercise an absolute care over men: and highly presumptuous is it in them to complain of his providence. Yet notwithstanding he is careful to show them the equity as well as the wisdom of his procedure; and he will at last make his glory to appear, and show that all our miseries, public and private, may be traced from our sins. How absurd and dangerous is apostasy from God to idols! and if men will persevere in their sins, they must expect no mercy at last. The wicked maliciously persecute, slander, and condemn the faithful servants of Christ. But fearfully shall God resent the injuries done to them as done to himself: and he that despises them must be held as one that hates and despises him that sent them.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 2. Valley of Hinnom, . . . east gate. The valley of Hinnom lay to the south, Jos. 15. 8. How then could the east gate be found there? This circumstance has given rise to many conjectures, new translations, and proposed emendations of the text. May not the difficulty be solved by attending to the following facts? (1) The ancient Hebrews and modern Orientals call every wind that blows between north and south from the eastward 'an east wind' not attending to the subdivisions of the compass, as maritime nations must. (2) The valley of Hinnom lying towards the south, Jerusalem might consequently contain the 'east gate' within any of its eastern points. C. Ver. 5. To burn their sons, &c. From this it appears that 'causing their children to pass through the fire,' in honour of their idols, was not, as some have supposed, merely passing through so as to escape death, but an actual sacrifice of them as burnt-offerings to their horrid deities. The engravings on the ancient Etruscan tombs of Campanian exhibit the victims as exceedingly reluctant, and dragged by force to the altars. Lord! what is man, when he forsakes thee, and begins to worship and serve the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed for ever! C.

Ver. 9. This awful prediction was begun to be fulfilled at the ST. STEPHEN'S GATE—WHERE ST. STEPHEN WAS STONED TO DEATH. [Jeremiah, xvii:19.]—"Thus said the Lord unto me: Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by that which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem." St. Stephen's Gate is known by the Christians of Jerusalem as the Gate of My Lady Mary, and by the Arabs as the Gate of the Tribes. It is on the east side of Jerusalem, and opens into the road leading across the valley of Kedron, and thence up the Mount of Olives to Bethany and Jericho. There are lions sculptured over it. One of the points which lends interest to Saint Stephen's Gate is the fact that near here in the Kedron valley Saint Stephen was martyred. Stephen was the first Christian martyr. In connection with his death, Saul of Tarsus first comes to view, who in after years was to be the great apostle of the Gentiles.

fiverance from sin, would often gladly take it for escaping from trouble. But it is vain to hope that God will do that for us in our sin which he did for others in their integrity; or that anything will help us when he is our determined adversary; or that men will pity us when we have forfeited his compassion. An ignominious slavery, or a miserable death, is but a dreadful alternative. But it is best to give up the defence of our country when we can do nothing for its relief. It is but a disgrace for men to be descended of godly ancestors when they indulge themselves in impiety. When nations are in danger, princes ought without delay to reform themselves and their subjects: and ministers who faithfully admonish them to it, had need to be well furnished with faith and courage.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 11. Shallum. This is another name for Jehoahaz, who succeeded Josiah, 2 Ki. 23. 30; 2 Ch. 36. 1; but who was deposed in three months, and carried into Egypt, where he died, 2 Ki. 23. 34. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers must be faithful and bold, and tell kings and courtiers of their sins, dangers, and duties, as well as others. It is only in keeping God's commandments that we can expect a great reward. He has always instruments duly prepared for destructive work as well as for building up. And men's sins are sometimes so plainly marked in their judgments, that even heathens can justify his procedure; for he never casts them off till they first cast off him. Dying saints may be justly envied, whilst living sinners are to be pitied. No education or example can change men's hearts; but it is a terrible aggravation of men's wickedness that it is contrary to their pious education. Proud and mischievous rebellion against God entails upon multitudes the most lasting shame and disgrace: nay, distinguished pride is generally followed by distinguished dishonour and misery, either in life or in death. It is extremely foolish to set our hearts upon that which can be easily taken from us, or made a curse to us. And none are more apt to appear mean, or to pretend piety under adversity, than those who boast highly amidst prosperity. It were well if what we suffer would bring us to a serious repentance. Sometimes

INTERIOR OF OUR TENT AT NAZARETH—THE TENT IS STANDING NEAR THE GREEK CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, IN NAZARETH, THE TOWN WHERE OUR LORD SPENT MOST OF HIS LIFE. [Jeremiah, xxiii:5-6.]—"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." We give as an illustration of this Scripture the interior of the tent used in Palestine by the parties who secured the pictures of the places of Bible events for this Self-Interpreting Bible. We give this picture here because it was taken in Nazareth where our tent was pitched. It is situated near the Virgin's Fountain, and is not far from the Greek Church of Annunciation. Here in this neighborhood grew up the righteous Branch which Jeremiah declared God would raise to David.

27 But to the land whereunto they desire¹ to return, 'thither shall they not return.

28 Is this man Coniah² a despised broken idol? is he a vessel wherein is no pleasure? wherefore are they cast out, ³he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not?

29 O earth,² earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD:

30 Thus saith the LORD, 'Write ye this man childless,³ a man that shall not prosper in his days: for ⁴'no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Jeremiah prophesieth a restoration of the scattered flock. 5 Christ shall rule and save them. 9 God's fearful judgments against false prophets, 33 and mockers of the true ones.

WOE be^a unto the pastors¹ that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD.

2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people, Ye^b have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited² them: behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD.

3 And 'I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase.

4 And 'I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD.

5 'Behold, 'the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 In^c his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.³

7 Therefore, behold, the days come,⁴ saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

8 But, 'The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all ⁵countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land.⁶

9 'Mine⁷ heart within me is broken because of the prophets; all my bones shake: I am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine hath overcome, ⁸because of the LORD, and because of the words of his holiness.

10 For⁹ the land is full of adulterers; for because of ⁷swearing⁸ the land mourneth; 'the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their course⁹ is evil, and their force is not right.

11 For¹⁰ both prophet and priest are profane; yea, 'in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the LORD.

12 Wherefore 'their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness; they shall be driven on, and fall therein: for 'I will bring evil upon them, even the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

13 And I have seen folly¹ in the prophets of Samaria; 'they prophesied in Baal, and caused my people Israel to err.

14 I have seen 'also in the prophets of Jerusalem an horrible ²thing: 'they commit adultery, and walk in lies: they strengthen also the hands of evil-doers,³ that none doth return from his wickedness: they are all of them unto me as 'Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts concerning the prophets, Behold, 'I will feed them with wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall: for from the prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness⁴ gone forth into all the land.

16 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, 'Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you; 'they make you vain:⁵ they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD.

17 They say still unto them that despise me, persons are exalted even to thrones that God may pour the more public and lasting disgrace upon them and theirs. Nor need the greatest to be confident, since they know not what debasement and misery await them and their seed. But it is hard to awaken sinners lost in sensuality and earthly-mindedness. And how sovereign is God in making men fruitful or childless, honoured or dishonoured, as he thinks fit!

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 5, 6. Behold, in the fulness of time the Son of God shall appear in a holy but debased human nature; who, as God's King set up in his church, shall, with astonishing success, reform the world, and destroy the wicked out of it. By him shall his spiritual Israel be delivered from their sin and misery, and blessed with all spiritual and eternal blessings. In his holiness of nature, obedience of life, and satisfactory sufferings, he shall fulfil for us a complete and everlasting righteousness; by the impartation of which to us for our justification, he shall render us perfectly righteous in law before God as our Judge, and thus secure the gradual sanctification of our nature and practice. 9, 10. I am grieved to see the false prophets deluding the people into wickedness; and I tremble at the fearful judgments which God, in his infinite holiness, hath denounced against them. For though the wrath of God has already begun to destroy the country, for the abounding wickedness of its inhabitants, they continue to employ their whole power and labour in promoting and encouraging it. 17-20. They encourage the wicked and profane to hope that the Lord will prosper and protect them in their sins; and pretend that themselves alone know his mind, and that no message of reproof or threatening deserves any credit. But a sudden and dreadful storm of judgment shall overtake and ruin them, which shall force them to regard and believe such threatenings. 30. Either they mimicked the true prophets in their language, to render their own predictions the more easily believed, or they laboured to prejudice the people against their messages. 35, 36. Ye shall hereafter speak with great reverence and regard concerning the Lord's Word; but now your irreverent speeches shall pull down judgments on your own heads; for ye have derided and misinterpreted the words of your own God, who lives and reigns over all.

Ver. 3, 4. This prophecy began to be fulfilled under Zerubbabel, Nehemiah, Ezra, &c., the commencement being the type of the completion. The gathering of 'the remnant out of all countries, and the time when 'they shall fear no more, are events still future, which the experience of the past renders probable; the Word of God, certain, C.

Ver. 6. Righteousness is exactly equivalent to obedience, Ro. 5. 17-19. This obedience (that is, obedience to the law of God, Ro. 5. 20, unreserved and complete; and there is, and there can be, no other) never was rendered unless by Christ, Ro. 3. 10; comp. with 2 Co. 5. 21; Phi. 2. 8. But he being the Word of JEHOVAH, Ge. 1. 1-7, 18, 'God manifest in the flesh,' 'as many as (by faith) receive him,' can truly say, he is 'JEHOVAH OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.'—Note, It is not unimportant to observe, that the best Jewish expositors unite JEHOVAH with RIGHTEOUSNESS; and the most learned Christians so translate the passage. C.

Ver. 33. 'A burden,' signifies a calamitous prophecy. The question here is put by the speakers lightly, and in contempt of the often repeated and heavy denunciations against sin and sinners. As if they had said, What next? What new judgment that will never come?—Note, Lightness of speech, turning serious things into a jest, may amuse the thoughtless for an hour; but it nation. That sinners dishonour God and ruin themselves are very grievous considerations to gracious souls. But no guilt is so aggravated as that of profane clergymen. And nothing so emboldens and hardens sinners as when teachers, by their example or doctrine, encourage them in wickedness. No plague is more dangerous than clergymen who intrude into their office by the influence of patrons or church rulers, without any commission from Christ, or who preach another gospel, as if men's own works, however insignificant, could recommend them to the favour of God. It tends to render men quite irreligious and atheistical. And no preachers are so confident of their own abilities as evil and erroneous ones. If God call men to the ministry.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Greatly mysterious are the ways of God's providence. The most afflictive are often the most useful. The same dispensation is to some a blessing and to others a ruinous plague. And all ought to be taken as out of God's own hand. Exact is his knowledge of and care for of power generally become troublers and destroyers to the world around. But great earthly pomp and power are of very uncertain, and often of very short, continuance. And no sinners can either withstand or outwage the judgments of God. When wars are once kindled, the higher men are the more is their danger; and even

THE KING'S CHAMBER—WHERE ONE OF THE EGYPTIAN PHAROHS WAS BURIED. [Jeremiah, xxv:19.]—"Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people." The Pharaoh to whom Jeremiah refers is not Cheops who built the Great Pyramid for his tomb. Ezekiel's Pharaoh was the successor in after ages of Cheops. "Pharaoh" is a general term used by the ancient Egyptians to denote their ruler. The King's Chamber is near the heart of the Great Pyramid, the largest that was ever built. Cheops was the second king of the fourth dynasty, and according to Wallis Budge, reigned 3733 B. C. The name of this Pharaoh was found written in red ink upon blocks of stone inside the pyramid. The King's Chamber is lined with granite, and measures about thirty-five by seventeen by nineteen feet. The floor of the King's Chamber is about one hundred and forty feet from the level of the base of the pyramid.

REFLECTIONS.—The whole earth is the Lord's, and he may dispose of it as he pleases. And since he puts little value upon it, he often gives most of it to the wicked; and soon he will call them to account for their use of his gifts. Civil dominion is far from being founded on either the reality or the appearance of saving grace. And they who have no shadow of a right to eternal life, may have a justifiable right to seasonable comfort or advice are a service to God and his church. Though God correct his people, he never breaks his promise with them. And the view of God as our God, and the appointer of our troubles, tends greatly to render us patient under them. In every condition we ought to make the best of what we have, though we should be far from having all we wish. They who behave meekly and quietly often meet with better treatment from strangers than they expected. And whatever hardships we have to endure in a country, we should pray for its welfare. When people love to be deceived, they readily find flatterers to their ruin. But they who trust the promises of God shall never be disappointed. No difficulties can hinder the execution of his purposes, or fulfilment of his promises.

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

22 And ye shall be ^{my} people, and I will be ^{your} God.

23 Behold, the ^{whirlwind} of the LORD goeth forth with fury, a continuing ^{whirlwind}; it shall fall ^{with pain} upon the head of ^{the} wicked.

24 The ^{fierce} anger of the LORD shall not return, until he have done ^{it}, and until he have performed the intents of his heart: ⁱⁿ the latter days ye shall consider it.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The restoration of Israel. 10 The publication thereof. 15 Rachel, mourning, is comforted. 18 Ephraim, repenting, is brought home again. 22 Christ is promised. 27 God's care over the church. 31 His new covenant. 35 The stability, 38 and amplitude of the church.

AT the ^{same time}, saith the LORD, will I be ^{the} God ^{of} all the families of Israel, and they ^{shall} be my people.

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^{The} people ^{which} were left of the ^{sword} ^{found} grace in the wilderness; ^{even} Israel, when ^I went to cause him to rest.

3 The LORD hath appeared of old ^{unto} me, ^{saying}, Yea, ^I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee.

4 Again ^I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy ^{tabrets}, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.

5 Thou shalt yet plant vines upon ^{the} mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and shall eat ^{them} as common things.

6 For there shall be ^a day, ^{that} ^{the} watchmen ^{pupon} the mount Ephraim shall cry, ^{Arise} ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.

7 For thus saith the LORD, ^{Sing} with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, ^O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, ^I will bring them from the north country, ^{and} gather them from the coasts of the earth, ^{and} with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child ^{and} her that travaileth with child together: ^a great company shall return thither.

9 They shall come ^{with} weeping, ^{and} with supplications ^{will} I lead them: ^I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters ⁱⁿ a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for ^I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim ^{is} my first-born.

10 Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare ^{it} ⁱⁿ the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will ^{gather} him, and keep him, as a shepherd ^{doth} his flock.

house of David was accompanied with a revolt from God; and Jeroboam set up the Egyptian ox-worship at Bethel and Dan, expressly to hinder the people from going up to the LORD'S feast at Jerusalem. 1 Ki. 13. 26. 29. When Samaria became the capital of the ten tribes it also became the chief seat of idolatry. Ho. 8. 5. 6; and, though afterwards partially converted to the true God, 2 Ki. 17. 28-41, there still remained a grievous antipathy between the Jews and Samaritans, John 4. 9, of which the prophet now foretells the happy end.—C.

o This prediction is interpreted by the evangelist of the massacre of the children at Bethlehem by Herod, Mat. 2. 17. 18, at which time it was literally fulfilled. For the prediction does not figuratively represent Rachel, the wife of Jacob, as arising from her grave to lament, but every bereaved mother as a Rachel, that is, as a 'sheep' (for so the word signifies) bleating after her lamb when seized by the ravenous and relentless wolf. No doubt the prediction had been previously fulfilled by Nebuzardan (Je. 40. 1), but the prediction did not relate to one event, but embraced a whole series of events, in every one of which it is equally exemplified and fulfilled.—C.

land of Judah and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity, The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice, and mountain of holiness.

24 And there shall dwell in Judah itself, and in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.

25 For I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul.

27 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will sow the house of Israel, and the house of Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them, to build, and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

31 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah;

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand, to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them,⁸ saith the LORD;

* This is a wonderful promise. It is, as it were, the consummation of the grand prophecy preceding. For the immutability of the purpose of Jehovah to preserve the people of the Jews in order to invest them with the privileges and blessings of the new covenant, he appeals to his almighty power as evinced in the laws and constitution of the natural world. However long may be their dispersion, and however great the number of the blinded, yet they shall eventually be restored to the enjoyment of new-covenant blessings.—P.

6 Several points should be kept clearly before the mind in the interpretation of this remarkable and cheering prophecy—

1. The covenant spoken of is the covenant of grace under Christ the Messiah, and revealed in the gospel.

2. The persons with whom this covenant, as here mentioned by Jeremiah, was to be made, are the Jews; not the spiritual seed of Abraham, but his natural seed.

3. This is evident from ver. 31, 32. The blessings of this new covenant are to be given them as a nation.

4. A nation, i.e. the great body of them—they are to be God's people, and he is to be their God.

5. It follows that the time when this is yet to come.—P.

33 But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

34 And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.

35 Thus saith the LORD, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; the LORD of hosts is his name:

36 If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

37 Thus saith the LORD, If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel, for all that they have done, saith the LORD.²

38 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that the city shall be built to the LORD, from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner.

39 And the measuring-line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath.

40 And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields, unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse-

Arabian desert, on the way to Canaan, when first I espoused the Israelites to myself as my peculiar people, and bestowed on them my ordinances and miraculous favours, after I had delivered them from the murderous cruelty of Pharaoh and of the Amalekites; for that ancient love manifested to them is neither ceased nor weakened. I will yet establish your government in both church and state; and ye shall have great ground of rejoicing, on account of both temporal and spiritual benefits. And ministers and others shall stir up their companions to join the church and attend the ordinances of God. 7-9. For, to the infinite joy and comfort of all the friends of the Jews, or of the gospel church, I will marvellously deliver them, and conduct them, however unfit in themselves, to their own land, or to the new-covenant state; render them penitent and prayerful, and in the most affectionate manner supply them with everything necessary. 10-14. All the nations around shall know and be affected with the marvellous salvation, temporal and spiritual, which I will work for them; they themselves shall, with great joy, repair to the temple and the ordinances of the gospel, in order to praise me for my diversified kindness. Universal shall be the joy and prosperity of all ranks; ministers and people shall be plentifully supplied, and be mutual blessings one to another. 15-17. The terrible mourning occasioned by the captivity in Babylon, the slaughter of the infants at Bethlehem, or rejection of the Jewish nation, shall be turned into joy, by the restoration of the Benjamites and other Jews, and by the accession of multitudes to the gospel church. 18-20. Deeply penitent for their sins, and earnestly desirous of spiritual blessings, shall the Jews return from Babylon, and especially from their present dispersion; and graciously will I receive them into favour, and abundantly bless them. 21-26. Return with the utmost care and despatch to your country, and erect marks by the way to direct such as may follow you: yea, though for your sinful apostasies ye have been long tossed to and fro, prepare for a return to your country, where the Messiah shall be born; and after your return, great shall be your reformation in righteousness and holiness; numerous shall be your flocks of cattle, and as numerous your worshippers of God; for I will refresh and supply you with every good thing.—Upon this Jeremiah awaked, and was delighted with the comfortable revelations which had been made to him in his dream or vision. 27-30. I will exceedingly multiply themselves and their cattle; and will manifest myself as eager to restore and bless them as ever I seemed to destroy them. Nor shall they have any more reason to complain that they are punished for their fathers' iniquities, but every one shall suffer for his own. 31-34. And I will renew my covenant with them in a more abundantly gracious form than I did at Sinai, and which they have so often transgressed by their idolatry and other wickedness, notwithstanding my kindness to them. But freely bestowing myself upon them as their God, adopting them as my people, and forgiving all their iniquities, I will clearly enlighten the minds of multitudes in the knowledge of the gospel, and renew their hearts, and dispose them to a holy and cheerful obedience to all my commandments.

Ver. 22. A woman shall compass a man. Pearson, Gill, and other learned expositors, interpret this expression of the miraculous conception of Christ. Boothroyd translates it 'a woman shall put to flight the mighty man;' and, with Willet, Gataker, and others, considers it an expressive mode of saying, that 'the weak and timid woman shall terrify and conquer the strong and courageous man.' See ver. 11. C.

Ver. 27. When, in peacefulness, peace, and prosperity, both men and cattle shall multiply as the corn. This promise acquires peculiar emphasis when it is remembered that, at present, many districts of Judea are nearly uninhabited. See Wylie's Modern Judea, p. 306. C.

Ver. 34. Since a time will come when they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, saying, Know the Lord; and that because 'all shall have come to know him,' it follows that it is the right and duty of 'every man' to teach his neighbour; and that the right never ceases, and the duty never relaxes, but in proportion as the necessity ceases by the universal diffusion of religious knowledge in principle and practice. C.

Ver. 37. Until man can measure infinity in heaven above, or penetrate to the centre of the earth beneath, I will still, notwithstanding their ingratitude and rebellion, preserve a remnant of Israel, a seed for the revival of the whole, 'according to the election of grace.' C.

Ver. 38. The prophecy includes the restoration of Jerusalem on earth to her former dimensions and glory, as the emblem of the 'heavenly Jerusalem,' the 'city that hath foundations,' and 'the kingdom that cannot be moved.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy are the families which have God for their God! Remembrance of our own and the church's former deliverances is of great use to prevent despondency under long and sore troubles. But all our comfort and holiness must flow from God's everlasting love, fixed on and exercised towards us. It is pleasant when those that were chief rebels against God become his most zealous subjects and servants. But if he build up his church, and restore to us the ordinances of his grace, all must issue to the praise of his glory. And praises to him for mercies bestowed must be attended with supplications for what he has promised. When he intends to deliver, no distance, no weakness, no paucity, no grief, no perilous passage, can stop or even retard his designs. If he calls us to follow him, he will either find or make us a plain way; nor will he allow us to want any necessary supply. Great is the goodness of God observable in common providences, but especially in new-covenant blessings. Thrice happy are they whose souls are richly supplied by the Holy Ghost from the all-containing fulness of God, and who taste his goodness in everything they receive. It is not the death, but the justly apprehended loss, of our relations, that should disquiet us; and solid hopes of the happy issue of troubles will gate toward the east, shall be holy unto the LORD; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down, any more for ever.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Jeremiah, being imprisoned by Zedekiah for his prophecy, 6 buyeth Hanameel's field. 13 Baruch must preserve the evidences, as tokens of the people's return. 16 Jeremiah in his prayer complaineth to God. 26 God confirmeth the captivity of Judah for their sins, 36 and promiseth a gracious return.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And Zedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the LORD: though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel, the son of Shallum thine uncle, shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth; for the right of redemption is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel, mine uncle's son, came to me in the court of the prison, according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel, my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open.

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open, and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days:

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

16 ¶ Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah, Lord God! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee:

18 Thou showest loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: the great, the mighty God, the LORD of hosts, is his name,

19 Great in counsel, and mighty in work: for thine eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men; to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings:

20 Which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men: and hast made thee a name, as at this day;

21 And hast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror;

22 And hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey:

23 And they came in, and possessed it; but they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law: they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst them to do; therefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them.

24 Behold the mountains, they are come unto the city to take it; and the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans that fight against it, because of the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken is come to pass; and, behold, thou seest it.

make us bear them patiently. True repentance is a deep and thorough work; and renders a sinner very loathsome and wicked in his own view. Nor do sins of youth appear small under its influence. But all turning to God must be produced by his own Spirit in us; who introduces his grace, by making us to perceive gospel truths. And God is ever ready to give his most rebellious children a kind reception when penitent. His mercy cannot forbear working for them while he frowns; and at last it must break forth in unnumbered and everlasting blessings. But what an encouragement to faith and repentance is the incarnation and work of our Redeemer!—Thrice happy are societies and souls where righteousness towards men, and piety towards God, are closely connected. Refreshing is that sleep in which men are entertained with comfortable promises from God. And no prospect is more pleasant to gracious souls than the spiritual 25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord God, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; for⁴ the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 ¶ Then⁵ came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, 27 Behold, I am the LORD, the 'God of all flesh: 'Is there any thing too hard for me?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD, 'Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it.

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come 'and set fire on this city, and burn it, with the houses upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings unto other gods, to provoke me⁵ to anger.

30 For⁶ the children of Israel, and the children of Judah, have only done evil before me from their youth:⁶ for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD.

31 For⁷ this city hath been to me as a provocation of mine anger,⁷ and of my fury, from the day that they built it, even unto this day, that I should 'remove it from before my face;

32 Because⁸ of all the evil of the children of Israel, and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, 'they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

33 And they have turned unto me 'the 'back⁹ and not the face: 'though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they 'set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it.¹

35 And 'they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech, which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.²

36 ¶ And now therefore³ thus saith the LORD, flourishing of God's church.—How delightful is it to have JEHOVAH rejoicing over us to do us good! And no wonder sin against him be bitterness in its latter end. But infinitely gracious is his covenant, and suited in form, in matter, in order, and in firmness, to our every need. And while all things in nature are pregnant with important instructions and comforts, it is holiness, connected with outward privileges, that renders them truly steadfast and durable.

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 3. Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up. Zedekiah presents a melancholy, but common, example of anger against the messenger of unwelcome news, or the offerer of good advice. If, instead of treating him with harshness and cruelty, Zedekiah had asked for an evidence of his divine commission, Jeremiah could have easily satisfied him by referring to his prophecy against Pashur and his friends, ch. 20. 6, and that against Hananiah, ch. 28. 16, 17; both of which had received such evident fulfilment as to put the commission of the prophet beyond all dispute. C.

Ver. 10. One kind of money was in uncoined gold or silver ingots, another in thin rolls that could be easily cut, and both all Jewish money was, at this period, uncoined; for the arts had long ago made great progress in the East. The weighing is rather watchfulness against minute deductions from the value of the coin. C.

Ver. 27. Is there any event beyond my power? Did I not give this land to Israel? Can I not convey it to the Chaldeans? And, when the fullness of the time is come, can I not restore it again to my renewed people? C.

Ver. 32. Jerusalem. Jerusalem, though belonging partly to the tribe of Judah, and partly to the tribe of Benjamin, was a city common to all the tribes, and might therefore represent the common character of the whole people, particularly those classes by whom the nation was governed—the rulers, the prophets, priests, lawyers, and merchants. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How obstinately men persist in persecution, and other wickedness, even when the Lord is punishing them for it! No afflictions can drag men from their lusts. By what strange tokens God confirms

MOREOVER, the^a word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the second time, while he was yet 'shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

2 Thus saith 'the LORD, the Maker¹ thereof, his own oracles! An exact honesty, prudent discretion, and a firm dependence on the promise and providence of God, ought to meet together in all our civil transactions.—The more honourable views we have of God and his mercies, the more humble and penitent will be our views of our own and others' rebellion against him. And the former experiences of God's people ought to encourage us, even when his providence seems to contradict his promises. When we have God's orders, we have nothing to do but obey, and trust him with the issue. And if we are in the dark concerning his dispensations, we may humbly beg his instructions. No crimes are too horrid for apostate professors to commit, and no judgments too severe to punish them. Deep carnal security ordinarily ends in deep despair; but blessed mornings of deliverance, conversion, and reformation frequently succeed long and dark nights of trouble. And unchangeable is their

HOUSE OF ANANIAS, DAMASCUS—SITE OF THE HOUSE OF ANANIAS, WHO WAS DIRECTED TO INQUIRE FOR SAUL AT THE HOUSE OF JUDAS IN DAMASCUS. [Jeremiah, xxxiii:17, 18.]—"For thus saith the Lord, David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually." Reference is made to these verses by St. Paul in Romans, xii:1, and Romans, xv:16, and by Peter in I. Peter, ii:5, and by St

John in Revelations, i:6. Jesus Christ was the man who was to set forever upon the throne of the house of Israel, and the ministers were to be the priests who were to offer burnt offerings and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. We give a picture of the house of Ananias in Damascus, said to stand upon the site of the house of Ananias, related to St. Paul at the time of his conversion. St. Paul was the leader of the living, everlasting Christain priesthood.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Jeremiah prophesieth the captivity of Zedekiah and the city. 8 The princes and the people having dismissed their bond-servants, contrary to the covenant of God, afterward re-assume them. 12 Jeremiah, for their disobedience, giveth them and Zedekiah into the hands of their enemies.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, "when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the earth of his dominion,¹ and all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD, "Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

3 And "thou shalt not escape² out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes³ shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth,⁴ and thou shalt go to Babylon.

4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword;

5 But thou shalt die in peace: and "with the burnings⁵ of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, so shall they burn odours for thee; and "they will lament thee, saying, Ah, lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet "spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem,

7 When the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against "Lachish, and against Azekah: for "these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

8 ¶ This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim "liberty unto them;

9 That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; that none should "serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother.

10 Now, when all the "princes, and all the people which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant, and every one his maid-servant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed,⁶ and let them go.

11 But "afterward⁷ they turned, and caused

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 2. This prediction was historically fulfilled according to the narrative, 2 Ki. 25. 9; 2 Ch. 26. 19. C. Ver. 20. Them that seek their life. The Scripture history gives no direct account of the origin of this deadly antipathy of the Babylonians against the Jews. But when it is recollected that Babylon and Egypt were rival kingdoms—commercial rivals in the trade to the E. Indies, as well as military rivals in power, and that Israel was under the protection and in political alliance with Egypt, the cause of the murderous rancour of Babylon becomes plain: for similar causes still continue to produce similar national collisions. CHAPTER XXXV.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, ²in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,¹ ² Go unto the house of the ^bRechabites,² and speak unto them, and bring them ³into the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

³ Then ⁴I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

⁵ And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, ⁶'Drink ye wine.⁴

⁷ Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have ⁸any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; ⁹'that ye may live many days in the land where ye ¹⁰be ¹¹'strangers.⁵

⁸ Thus have we ⁹'obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters;

⁹ Nor to build houses for us to dwell in; neither ¹⁰have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

¹⁰ But we have ¹¹'dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.⁶

¹¹ But it came to pass, when ¹²'Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, ¹³'Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

¹² ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

¹⁵ I have sent also unto you all my servants the ¹⁶'prophets, rising up early ¹⁷'and sending them, saying, ¹⁸'Return ye now every man ¹⁹'from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers; but ye ²⁰'have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

¹ Jeremiah causeth Baruch to write his prophecies, 5 and publicly to read them. ¹¹ The princes, having intelligence thereof by Michaiiah, send Jehudi to fetch the roll, and read it. They counsel Baruch to hide himself and Jeremiah. ²⁰ The king, being certified thereof, heareth part of it, and burneth the roll. ²⁷ Jeremiah denounceth his judgment. ³² Baruch writeth a new copy.

AND it came to pass, ²'in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

² Take ³'thee a roll ⁴'of a book, and write therein ⁵'all the words that I have spoken unto thee ⁶'against Israel, and against Judah, ⁷'and

REFLECTIONS.—God mixes his judgments here with mercy, even to the wicked. It is a great advantage for kings and others to have faithful ministers to tell them the fatal consequences of their sins, that they may repent and live. And it is well if captivity and imprisonment lead to true reformation. God's compassion towards us ought to influence our compassion towards our inferiors and neighbours. But reformations occasioned by fear and danger are seldom sincere and lasting. The most solemn vows will not long restrain them whose hearts are not right with God. But if his reprieves from judgment be abused, he will quickly proceed to execution. None ever hardened their hearts against him and prospered. And broken vows especially hasten his fearful judgments. If men will not subject themselves to his law, he must subject them to his wrath and curse. If judgments depart from us before we are humbled, they will return with redoubled force. And promising beginnings, to which the end does not correspond, only produce more aggravated guilt and surer destruction.

CHAPTER XXXV. Ver. 19. 'To stand before me' denotes attendance on the person and service of a prince, 1 Ki. 10. 8. And as it appears that some of the Rechabites, or Kenites, returned from the captivity, 1 Ch. 2. 55, it has been inferred that they were admitted into some office about the temple. All, however, that is necessarily implied in the phrase is the perpetuation of the family of Rechab. And of this fact there seems the most unquestionable evidence. Benjamin of Tudela professes to have found them in Arabia in great prosperity. Niebuhr obtained information of the Beni Kheiber inhabiting the mountains on the north-east of Medina, and holding no intercourse with the other Jews. And Joseph Wolf learned from Rabbi Mose Secot at Jerusalem, that, in his opinion, the Beni Kheiber were the Rechabites, who firmly adhere to the precepts of the son of Jonadab, have neither house, nor field, nor vineyard, and observe the law of Moses by tradition (Missionary Journal, 1824, p. 257, 261). C.

REFLECTIONS.—Never let us be ashamed of the honest employment of our ancestors, however mean.

against^a all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of Josiah,³ even unto this day.⁴

3 It⁵ may be⁵ that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may return every man from his evil way, that I may⁶ forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah called Baruch, the son of Neriah: and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up:⁶ I cannot go into the house of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD, in the ears of the people, in the LORD's house upon the fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities.

7 It may be⁷ they will present their supplication⁸ before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for great is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

9 And it came to pass, in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber⁹ of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe,¹ in the higher court, at the entry² of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.³

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's⁴ chamber; and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Sha-

This command proves that the prophecies of Jeremiah were all, not merely revealed, but written by divine inspiration. 11 The Jews, no doubt, engraved many of their records upon tablets of various kinds. But it is also evident that 'ink' was familiar to them even in the days of Moses. See Nu. 5. 23. And it is not less wonderful that any one acquainted with the remains of ancient Egypt could have supposed the Israelites ignorant of ink and writing. Ezekiel mentions the ink-horn as familiar in his time, ch. 9. 2, 3, 17. Winckelman and others have shown that the ink of the ancients was a species of paint, differing little if anything from what is still employed by many Orientals. It is usually composed of lampblack, or powdered charcoal, gum, and water; its consistency is nearly the same as modern printers' ink; and the pen is usually a pointed reed.—C.

4 Lu. 22. 55 will exhibit the ordinary method of warming an eastern apartment. Fireplaces and chimneys are unknown in many of the warmer regions of Asia; and when fire is required in winter a chafin-dish or brazier of wood, brass, coal, or other combustible is introduced into the fire.

The original Hebrew does not intimate that the king sat before the fire, but that the fire was brought before the king.—C.

5 There was set before him a hearth with burning coals (Blayney).—Note. To what a sad use does a sinful heart pervert the comforts God bestows! It is grievous to endure cold; God bestows the warmth of a fire, and man employs it to burn the message of mercy of many of Almighty God!—C.

phan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words⁵ that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid⁶ both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, how didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink⁷ in the book.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah, and let no man know where ye be.

20 ¶ And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber: and Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in the winter-house, in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.⁸

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves,⁹ he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless, Elnathan, and Delaiah, and Gemariah, had made intercession to the king

And let us prudently accommodate ourselves to our place, rank, and condition; but never live above it. Humility and contentment in obscurity are often the best policy and surest protection. If we be strangers in this world, we should abstain from fleshly lusts, and treat the objects of sense with a gracious and generous disdain. The more we are confirmed in so doing, temptation will have the less force. The more mortified we are to this world, the more meet we are for the next, and the more willing shall we be to go to it; nay, we are the more meet for suffering here. But no rules of external discipline ought to exclude a dispensation when necessity requires. To neglect proper means of safety is to tempt God. It is superlatively absurd and wicked to refuse doing as much in obedience to God as we would be ready to do in obedience to a progenitor who is long since dead, and can never remind us of our obligation; and such as are guilty may expect judgment, sure, however slow. But while sinners are ruined, the temperate and obedient are often preserved in this world. And often such as live soberly on small estates have the most numerous and flourishing families. Nay, temperance, and mortification to this world, do much befriending the exercises of piety, and help to transmit the observance thereof to posterity, as their principal honour.

CHAPTER XXXVI. REFLECTIONS.—A serious and believing consideration of the certain and fatal consequences of our sin promotes a cordial repentance; and in all their work ministers ought to endeavour at the conversion of sinners from their evil ways. For this the writing of God's Word is designed; and all the writing or repeating of sermons must be directed to the same. Such as truly discern the need of repentance will supplicate God for it. But there may be great pretences, even to extraordinary devotion, while men continue enemies to the power of it. And national fasts, without national reformation, will never turn away national judgments. When we profess to be supplicating for mercy, it is very useful to be faithfully told of our sins and our duty; and we ought to com-that he would not burn the roll; but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech,² and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe, and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.³

27 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying,

28 Take⁴ thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD, Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah, He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.⁴

31 And I will punish⁵ him, and his seed, and his servants, for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: but they hearkened not.

32 ¶ Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein, from the mouth of Jeremiah, all the words of the book⁶ which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides unto them many like words.⁷

25 A call for intercessory prayer is no proof either of the faith or repentance of him that calls for it. It is possible to have just such confidence in prayer as the ignorant and superstitious often have in amulets and charms. Such was evidently the case with Zedekiah, for neither he nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, and yet they expected that God will hear Jeremiah for them, while they refuse to hear God.—Note. Intercessory prayer for the sick is undoubtedly a gift of God (Ja. 5. 14. 15), both for healing and forgiveness; but it is carefully to be observed, that the apostle places the personal prayer of the sick himself before the intercessory, ver. 13. 'Is any among you afflicted in any manner, sick, or in grief, let him call for the elders, and let them pray over him.' In dealing with the sick this is a matter that requires much tenderness, but much faithfulness; for the heart is deceitful and souls are precious.—C.

people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake by the prophet Jeremiah.

3 And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Pray now unto the LORD our God for us.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people; for they had not put him into prison.

5 Then Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt: and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

6 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, that sent you unto me to inquire of me; Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return⁴ to Egypt into their own land.

8 And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

9 Thus saith the LORD, Deceive not yourselves,⁵ saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us: for they shall not depart.

10 For, though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but wounded⁶ men among them, yet should they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.⁷

11 ¶ And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was broken⁸ up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, 12 Then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, to separate himself⁹ thence in the midst of the people.

13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah: and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is false,² I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

15 Wherefore the princes were wroth with municate to others those divine truths which have been peculiarly affecting to ourselves. God's ministers should lay hold on every opportunity, private or public, for teaching and warning their hearers. And there is need of very close dealing, as, by delay or otherwise, sinners will do all they can to evade convictions, or to shake them off. Nay, hardened sinners, especially in high stations, stick at nothing to disgrace the oracles of God, to destroy his messengers, and discover their own determinate resolution to continue in sin. And while they, who for God's cause boldly put their life in their hands, are wonderfully protected, they who contend with God, and obstinately resist his counsels, do only treasure up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath. By contending with his curses, they but prepare heavier ones for themselves; and silent accomplices in guilt may look for a share in the punishment.

CHAPTER XXXVII. Ver. 15. Eastern prisons are not public buildings, but a part of the house of the criminal judge. And such confinement in private houses was common in great Britain down to a period comparatively modern. The city of Aberdeen still contains the private dwelling in which Rutherford was imprisoned; and many continue to look upon it with great 'searchings of heart,' and deep musings both on the past and the present. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Hard are their hearts who can both see and feel the judgments of God without being humbled. And often they who in health and prosperity despised Christ's ministers, entreat their counsels and prayers in a day of distress. Many would gladly be rid of their sufferings who have no heart to part with their sins. And often they use the intermissions, or slow progress, of God's judgments to harden themselves, while they easily credit the flatteries and lies which their corrupt inclinations wish to be true. Even Satan could not deceive men if they deceived not themselves. No created help can avail but as God pleases; and no created power can withstand the weakest instruments in his hand. When we have no call from God to stay, it is prudent to retire into privacy, and shun the evils which we foresee. But the purest characters and conduct may be blackened with the vilest aspersions; and every lie, however improbable, is easily believed against a man obnoxious for his piety and reproofs. And if passion and prejudice ascend the chair of the magistrate, we need not expect any justice

Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe; for they had made that the prison.

16 ¶ When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the ³cabins,⁴ and Jeremiah had remained there many days;

17 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out; and the king asked him secretly⁵ in his house, and said, 'Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, 'thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

18 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, 'What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison?

19 Where⁶ are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon ⁷shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted⁸ before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there.⁷

21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into 'the court of the prison, and that they ⁹should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, 'until all the bread in the city were spent. 'Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

THEN Shephatiah^a the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, ^bheard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,¹

2 Thus saith the LORD, 'He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

2 In forming an estimate of the unbelieving disregard shown by the princes and people to the word of the Lord by Jeremiah, it is necessary to observe the argument from patriotism which they were able to allege against his advice to submit to the Chaldeans—the high, and not undeserved reliance they placed upon their military courage—and, to say, the dependence they placed upon the miraculous protection of that God whose laws they disregarded. See, for illustration, Josephus, Antiq.—C.

6 The description of this prison is sufficiently horrible, and it wonderfully contrasts with modern Christian efforts to secure comparative comfort to prisoners, in food, health, and sleep; and, as far as possible, to convert every prison into a school of reformation, instead of a seat of cruelty. That it is necessary, for the sake of truth, to call these efforts modern, is cause of humiliation; that these efforts have been so far from successful, is cause of deep thankfulness to God. them; for this man seeketh not the welfare² of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, 'Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the ³dungeon³ of Malchiah the son of Hammelech,⁴ that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire; so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.⁵

7 ¶ Now when Ebed-melech 'the 'Ethiopian, one of the 'eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon, the king then ⁶sitting⁷ in the gate of Benjamin,

8 Ebed-melech¹ went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men ²have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and he is like to³ die for hunger in the place where he is; ⁴for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then⁵ the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence ⁶thirty men with thee,¹ and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts, and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, 'Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine arm-holes under the cords.² And Jeremiah did so.

13 So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and 'Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

14 ¶ Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the ³third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, 'I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, 'wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?⁴

16 So Zedekiah the king swore secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, 'As the LORD liveth, 'that made us this soul,⁵ I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of 'these men that seek thy life.

It is the best of men that have to suffer most for conscience' sake. But God can provide them relief from whence they little expected it. If men will cheerfully, but prudently, expose their life for God, he will take care that they shall be no losers, but their very affliction be the mean of substantial blessing. But they who will not regard God's calls to repentance, need not expect messages of peace. And they who have wilfully shut their eyes to their danger, deserve to be upbraided with their folly.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is better to submit to the rebukes of Providence than to contend with them. If we cannot have our liberties, let us never throw away our lives. And let God's ministers act faithfully and friendly, though impenitent sinners should reward them with hatred and murder. It forebodes ill when magistrates are daily growing worse [compare ch. xxvi. xxxiv. xxxvi.]; when great men weakly yield to their inferiors in the cause of God and truth; and when they who have a friendship for 1 Jerusalem is taken. 4 Zedekiah is made blind, and sent to Babylon. 8 The city laid in ruins, 9 and the people carried captive. 11 Nebuchadnezzar's charge for the good usage of Jeremiah. 15 God's promise to Ebed-melech.

IN the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the eleventh year¹ of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.²

3 And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls; and he went out the way of the plain.³

5 But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath, where he gave judgment upon him.⁵

6 Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover, he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with chains,⁶ to carry him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 Then Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard,⁷ carried away captive into Babylon the remnant⁸ of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time.⁹

11 ¶ Now Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying, 12 Take him, and look well to him,² and do him no harm, but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

13 So Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, 'If thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house:

18 But if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, 'I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me.'

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, 'I beseech thee, the voice of the LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou refuse to go forth, 'this is the word that the LORD hath showed me:

22 And, behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house, shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes; and those women shall say, Thy friends have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back.

23 So they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans; and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon: and thou shalt cause this city to be burned with fire.

24 ¶ Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death: also what the king said unto thee:

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded.³ So they left off speaking with him: for the matter was not perceived.

28 So Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

14 Even they sent, and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home:³ so he dwelt among the people.⁴

15 ¶ Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

16 Go and speak to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee.

17 But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD; and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee: because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people; or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, to Mizpah;⁶ and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ¶ Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields,⁷ even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Serniah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, sware unto them, and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve the Chaldeans⁹ which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise, when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan;

12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

13 ¶ Moreover, Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, selves and their subjects. To avoid shame, they will not avow before men the regard which their conscience obliges them to have for the faithful servants of God; nay, to preserve their reputation before wicked men, they will risk their eternal salvation. We had need then to be wise as serpents, as well as harmless as doves. And though we must never tell a lie, yet we must not tell all that we know to every impertinent inquirer.

CHAPTER XXXIX. Ver. 2. The city was broken up. The walls being breached by battering-rams, the city sacked, and the inhabitants driven away or made prisoners.—Note. By a barbarous common consent, called 'a law of nations,' certainly, however, not a law of God, a city whose garrison has bravely held out till it is taken by storm, is delivered up to plunder. In such cases the infuriated soldiery are let loose from all restraint, their officers lose all control, and the city is literally 'broken up' by the hands of merciless destroyers. Lord, hasten the time when they shall 'beat their swords into ploughshares, and men shall learn war no more!' C.

Ver. 4. Betwixt the two walls. The Chaldeans had taken the city, but the citadel of Zion, in the south-west, was still, most probably, in the hands of Zedekiah. Betwixt the two walls may accordingly mean that part of Zion to the north where the walls of the city and citadel approached; and the passage was, most likely, the way to the royal gardens in the vale of Gihon. The Jews have a tradition that the escape was by a subterraneous passage reaching to Jericho; and that the king would have escaped but that a hind, hunted by the Chaldeans, took refuge in the cave where the passage ended just as the king was emerging, and that he was thus miraculously made prisoner by the exulting Chaldeans. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how the families of the north sit in the gates of Jerusalem, and the lords of the heathen where their gods had been worshipped! God's judgments fearfully convince such as would not believe his threatenings. And fruitless are all attempts to flee from his judgment. But it will be awfully piercing to see our children murdered or lost through our obstinacy in sinning; and shut up at last in spiritual and eternal darkness through our obstinate ignorance of God's will! Marvellous, but just, are the changes and retributions of Providence; and the ruin of oppressors is the rise of the oppressed. God comforts his people, while the wicked are tormented; and heathens deliver them when hypocrites persecute them: yea, even prisons protect and mark them out for particular favours. Nor shall a cordial kindness to God's servants in trouble ever pass without distinguished honour and reward; and he will suit his comforts to the tears and griefs of his people. None that trust in him shall ever perish or be confounded.

CHAPTER XL. REFLECTIONS.—Heathens sometimes honour God and his ministers more than many

14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.³

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

CHAPTER XLI.

¹ Ishmael, having treacherously killed Gedaliah and others, pursoeth with the rest to flee unto the Ammonites. ¹¹ Johanan recovereth the captives, and mindeth to flee into Egypt.

NOW it came to pass in the seventh¹ month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten² men, with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread³ together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass, the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,⁴

5 That there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to the house of the LORD.

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, weeping⁹ all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

3 This unbelief was just what was to be expected in a man of Gedaliah's character. Himself unconscious of malice or deceit, he can not imagine it possible in another. The most virtuous are always the least suspicious: and though they may occasionally suffer from misplaced confidence, they enjoy a peace of mind to which conscious guilt and a suspicious temper must always be strangers. The man of a "sprinkled conscience," and a "pure heart," is untroubled by fear, and dies but once; the guilty and the suspicious are always in dread and death.—C.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain because of⁴ Gedaliah, was it which Asa⁵ the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to the Ammonites.⁶

11 ¶ But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done,

12 Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by the great waters⁷ that are in Gibeon.⁸

18 Because of³ the Chaldeans: for they were professors. It will at last appear that God is faithful, and sin ruinous. And all loss sustained for God will be made up in the end. If his servants have hardships when sinners have liberty, they will obtain liberty when sinners shall be in misery.—What honour God puts on the son of Jeremiah's late protector, ch. 26. 24! But short glimmerings of prosperity often introduce fearful strokes of adversity. It is only the deputies and servants of heaven's great Monarch who are secured in complete and lasting protection. O what baseness and barbarity can human minds contrive and perpetrate! Great men have need to be cautious of their own preservation, as well as charitable concerning their neighbours. But of little worth are earthly honours, which but tempt miscreants to murder us.

CHAPTER XLI. REFLECTIONS.—By the most unexpected and unnatural means God can punish men who have ripened themselves in wickedness. And a righteous God can make the malice, the baseness, and the barbarity of the most hardened monsters in iniquity to glorify himself and ruin his enemies. Misery, death, and despair often meet men when, where, and whence, they least expected. And not the laws of God or men, but covetousness, frequently makes sinners to abstain from crimes. The most unnatural criminals may for a time escape punishment from men. And groundless fear, real or pretended, often leads men into ruinous guilt.

CHAPTER XLII. REFLECTIONS.—Ministers have need to be men of fervent prayer, faithfulness, and intimacy with God. And if people would profit by their ministers' prayers, they should seriously attend to their preaching. We can never be sincere with God if we do not obey his will so far as it is known to us.

THE SPHINX—A MONUMENT WHICH HAS BEEN STANDING THROUGHOUT THE WHOLE OF OLD TESTAMENT TIMES, AND IS THUS A SILENT WITNESS OF ALL THAT IS RECORDED IN THE BIBLE. [JEREMIAH, xlii: 13, 14.]—"But if ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the Lord your God, saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there will we dwell." By words like these Jeremiah was seeking to keep the remnant of Judah from going into Egypt out of fear of the king of Babylon. But the words of the prophet fell on unwilling ears, and in spite of all his efforts they went down into Egypt. But this remnant of Judah found to their cost that Jeremiah was right. The king of Babylon invaded Egypt also, and the remnant of Judah that fled from Babylon's king into the land of Egypt were consumed there by the sword and famine. We give as an illustration of this Scripture, the Sphinx which was the silent witness of the events here recorded.

thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the LORD, to dwell in the land of Judah.

5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah;

6 Even men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD. Thus came they even to Tahpanhes.

8 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid: and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.

11 And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.

12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives; and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 He shall break also the images of Bethshemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

z Beth-shemesh signifies 'house' or 'temple of the sun', and this is probably its true signification here, as seems to be indicated by the second clause of the verse, which speaks of the houses (or temples) of the gods of the Egyptians. The sun was a (if not the) chief god of the Egyptians, and the principal seat of his worship was at On (which signifies 'light' or 'sun'), a celebrated city of Lower Egypt, called by the Greeks Helopolis. The priest of On was one of the greatest personages in the country, and to his daughter Joseph was married. The site of Beth-shemesh or Helopolis is about ten miles north-east of Cairo, and beside it is a fountain still called Ain esh-Shems, 'fountain of the sun.'—P.

It was first ravaged by Nechochadrezzar, afterwards completely ruined by Cambyyses. It was afterwards rebuilt by the Grecian kings; and, at the commencement of the Christian era, was next in importance to Alexandria. 1 Jeremiah expresseth the desolation of Judah for their idolatry.
11 He prophesieth their destruction, who commit idolatry in Egypt.
15 The obstinacy of the Jews. 20 Jeremiah threateneth them for the same, 29 and for a sign foretelleth the ruin of the king of Egypt.

THE word^a that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at Migdol,¹ and at Tahpanhes,² and at Noph,³ and in the country of Pathros,⁴ saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein;⁷

3 Because^c of their wickedness which they have committed, to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early, and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem: and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, Wherefore commit ye this great evil against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

8 In that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They are not humbled even unto this day, neither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you, and before your fathers.

REFLECTIONS.—Pride is among the most awful sins—a root of infidelity, and a sure road to ruin. They who are full of ill designs themselves, ordinarily reproach the true friends of their church and nation as traitors. They who hate to conform themselves to the Scripture, are ready to deny the divinity of it. And they who wish to contradict the ends of a gospel ministry, study to put it under an ill name. Proud men hate contradiction; and if they cannot obtain consent, they will force compliance, and even drag those who fear God along with them. But a sinful flight from God's judgments only hastens them upon us, and renders them heavier; and even draws down his wrath upon such as receive us into their friendship. And, very contrary to their intentions, he makes one nation a scourge to another.

CHAPTER XLIV. Ver. 6. There are those who object against the ascription of 'fury and anger' to God. The objections would disappear if they were not viewed as human passions, but as sources of the divine judgments. The ruin and desolation of idolatrous lands are visible facts; the justice that his blessing. But it is madness to dissemble with a God of truth, who searches our hearts; or to quit our station, especially in his holy land, because we find trouble in it. If we think to escape suffering by sinning, we only rush upon the thick bosses of his buckler. If we make him our enemy, we shall find him a consuming fire wherever we go; and that upon which we most set our hearts will prove most fatal to us. If we make ourselves vile by our sins, he will make us viler by his judgments.

CHAPTER XLIII. Ver. 7. Tahpanhes. An ancient city of

H EAD OF THE PROCESSION OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH 'MAL.
 [Jeremiah, xlv:8.]—"In that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell." It has been characteristic of Egypt in all ages to burn incense unto other gods than the true God. The festival of the Mah 'Mal is perhaps the best illustration we could have of the recent form of idolatry in this land so intimately connected with the Israelites, and from whom God's peculiar people seemed to have learned most of the erroneous forms of religion which brought upon them the judgments of Jehovah. The Mah 'Mal is a litter, built of wood in pyramidal form, and is hung by embroidered fabrics. These hangings or coverings accompany the litter in the annual pilgrimage to Mecca, and are intended for the interior sanctuary of the Mosque at that holy Moslem city.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed,² and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine; and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For I will punish³ them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire⁴ to return to dwell there; for none shall return but such as shall escape.⁵

15 ¶ Then all the men which knew that their wives⁶ had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, we will not hearken unto thee.

17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen⁷ of heaven, and to pour out⁸ drink-offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of victuals,⁹ and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 And when we¹ burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink-offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink-offerings unto her,² without our men?⁴

20 ¶ Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus^b saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch;

3 Thou didst say, 'Woe is me now! for the LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I faint in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus, 'Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things² for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD; but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

CHAPTER XLVI.

1 Jeremiah prophesieth the overthrow of Pharaoh's army at Euphrates, 13 and the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadrezzar. 27 He comforteth Jacob in his captivity.

THE word of the LORD which came to Jeremiah the prophet against the 'Gentiles,'²

2 Against^b Egypt, against the army of Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates in Carchemish, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon smote in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah.

3 Order³ ye the buckler and shield, and draw near to battle.

4 Harness the horses; and get up, ye horsemen, and stand forth with your helmets; furnish the spears, and put on the brigandines.⁴

5 Wherefore⁵ have I seen them dismayed and turned away back? and their mighty ones are beaten down,⁶ and are fled apace,⁷ and look not back: for fear was round about, saith the LORD.

6 Let^{*} not the swift flee away, nor the mighty man escape; they shall stumble, and fall toward the north by the river Euphrates.

7 Who⁸ is this that cometh up as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers?

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the malignity of sin; infinitely God hates it, and earnestly should his ministers warn against it. It is a dreadful token of a reprobate mind when, with judgments upon us or around us, we harden ourselves in sin, and a certain sign that almighty judgment is at hand to destroy us. They who will not be ruled by God's word, must be broken by his rod. And if men will prefer their own projects to God's promises and providence, it is just that they should meet with disappointments. No antiquity, authority, custom, or prosperity, can ever warrant what God forbids. And it is dreadful when the means which God uses to draw or drive us from our sins are perverted to harden us in them; or when those who should assist one another in the way to heaven are mutual tempters to and hardeners in sin. But God will effectually refute his obstinate opponents by the ruinous strokes of his wrath. Nor can a greater curse light upon sinners than to be given up to the devices of their own heart. Quickly will God ruin the created comforts and confidences which we put in his room. And indeed nothing is to us what we fancy it, but what he makes it.

CHAPTER XLV. REFLECTIONS.—Alas, how unwilling our hearts are to take up our cross and follow Christ! Very small difficulties are apt to discourage young beginners in the service of God. And often it is more their unbelieving fears than their real dangers that make them to complain. If we had less desire after and less expectation from creatures, and more faith in Christ's word and views of the spiritual nature of his kingdom, external events would trouble us less. While therefore God so exactly observes me, let me never seek my own more than the public welfare. Let me never seek great things here, where everything is less than nothing and vanity, and as uncertain as a shadow or a vapour. If God preserve and protect me in evil times, it is more than I deserve, or perhaps could expect.

CHAPTER XLVI. Ver. 1. There are here two prophecies. The first before a battle between the Egyptians and Babylonians near Carchemish, in which the Egyptians were defeated. The second begins at ver. 13, and the desolation foretold took place in the 27th year of Jehoiakim's captivity, and the year after the destruction of Jerusalem, as may be collected from Eze. 20, 17, where Nebuchadrezzar's army receives a promise of the spoils of Egypt as wages for their fruitless toils and dangers in the siege of Tyre, which promise was fulfilled the same year. See Josephus' Antiq. b. x. c. 9; and Rollin's An. Hist. vol. i. b. i. c.

8 Egypt riseth up like a flood, and his waters are moved like the rivers; and he saith, I will go up, and will cover the earth; I will destroy the city and the inhabitants thereof.

9 Come up, ye horses; and rage, ye chariots; and let the mighty men come forth; the Ethiopians⁹ and the Libyans,¹ that handle the shield; and the Lydians, that handle and bend the bow.

10 For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries: and the sword shall devour, and it shall be satiate and made drunk with their blood; for the Lord God of hosts hath a sacrifice² in the north country by the river Euphrates.

11 Go¹ up into Gilead, and take balm, O virgin;³ the daughter of Egypt: in vain shalt thou use many medicines; for thou shalt not be cured.⁴

12 The nations have heard of thy shame, and thy cry hath filled the land: for the mighty man hath stumbled against the mighty, and they are fallen both together.

13 ¶ The word that the LORD spake to Jeremiah the prophet, how Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon should come and smite the land of Egypt.⁵

14 Declare^{*} ye in Egypt, and publish in Migdol, and publish in Noph,⁶ and in Tahpanhes:⁷ say ye, Stand fast, and prepare thee; for the sword shall devour round about thee.

15 Why^{*} are thy valiant men swept away? they stood not, because the LORD did drive them.

16 He made many to fall,⁸ yea, one fell upon another; and they⁹ said, Arise,¹ and let us go again to our own people, and to the land of our nativity, from the oppressing sword.²

17 They did cry there, Pharaoh king of Egypt is but a noise,³ he hath passed the time appointed.

some adjoining district in Africa, situated higher on the Nile; see Is. 18, 1. The second, Libyans, west of Egypt. The third, the descendants of Lud, the son of Misraim, who settled in Egypt, Ge. 10, 13. These Lydians are to be distinguished from the Lydians of Asia Minor, familiar to history on account of the riches of Croesus, their king, and who are supposed to be the descendants of Lud, the son of Shem, Ge. 10, 22, C.

Ver. 25. Multitude of No. No, or 'Amon No,' generally supposed to be the Egyptian Thebes. It stood on both sides of the Nile, about 300 miles from the sea. In time of war it could furnish 20,000 men and 200 chariots. It was taken and destroyed by the Assyrians, Na. 3, 8-10. It afterwards arose to still greater splendour, and is said to have extended to 52 miles in circumference. It was again reduced to ruins by Cyaxares of Persia, Eze. 30, 15, 16. It was partially rebuilt again, and finally destroyed by C. Gallus. Four villages now rise upon its ruins—perhaps the most magnificent in the world. Ruins that compel the traveller to gaze and wonder how man could become so brutal as to devastate such miracles of architecture and splendour—ruins which the believer points out to the infidel as evidences of divine revelation and abiding monuments of God's judgments upon idolatry. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God will reckon with sinners at last. And, alas, at what expense, and with what parade, they rush forward into their own destruction! When they think to magnify themselves by their wicked enterprises, he glorifies himself in blasting their designs and cutting them off. At infinite hazard do kings, in their pride, march multitudes into sudden death and damnation. And the more confident they are, the nearer is their ruin. No numbers, no armour, no

STATUE OF RAMESSES II.—LYING IN THE CITY WHICH JEREMIAH SAID SHOULD BE WITHOUT INHABITANT. [JEREMIAH, xlii:19.]—"O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish thyself to go into captivity: for Noph (Memphis) shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant." Rameses II. was the "king who knew not Joseph." We see him now in limestone lying prostrate amid the ruins of the city he enriched and oppressed. The first in her glory, he is the last in her desolation. The prophecy is literally true, "Memphis shall be without an inhabitant." The companions of the once proud Rameses the Second now are the jackals, whose wierd howl lends a melancholy interest to the solemn moan of the palms, the only sentinels left to guard the proud Egyptian king. Tall, rank weeds grow about his mighty form, and lean their dying heads upon his cold and bloodless bosom. He is so quiet and harmless in his limestone form that the lizards play hide and seek on the surface of his vast face.

19 O thou ^ddaughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish^e thyself to go ^finto captivity: for Noph⁶ shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant.

20 Egypt is like ^ga very fair heifer,⁷ but destruction cometh; it cometh ^hout of the north.

21 Also her hired men⁸ are in the midst of her like ⁱfatted bullocks,¹ for they also are turned back, and are fled away together: they did not stand, because ^kthe day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation.

22 The voice thereof shall go like² a serpent;³ for they shall march with an army, and come against her with axes, as hewers of wood.

23 They shall cut down her forest,⁴ saith the LORD, though it cannot be searched;⁵ because they are more ^lthan the grasshoppers, and are innumerable.

24 The ^mdaughter of Egypt shall be confounded; ⁿshe shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north.

25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith, Behold, I will punish the multitude⁶ of No,⁷ and Pharaoh, and Egypt, ^owith their gods, and their kings; even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him:

26 And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of his servants; and ^pafterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the LORD.⁸

27 ¶ But⁹ fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make ^qhim afraid.

28 Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the LORD; for I ^ram with thee: for ^sI will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; ^tbut I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure; ^uyet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished.⁹

courage, no strength, no cunning, no wealth, no flight avails when God is the assailant and pursuer. Mighty armies make but a pitiful figure when he musters the host of their enemies to the battle. And noisy blusters do least in a time of need. They who disappointed others are at last disappointed themselves. Alas! what desola-¹⁰ms sin makes in the most populous and wealthy countries! Quickly is Egypt too hot for the Jews, who fled thither, and all her thousands of cities turned into ruinous heaps. Amidst external preparations it is necessary to prepare chiefly for trouble, captivity, death, and eternity. But great is his grace who seeks the salvation of the church and people in the worst of times, and even grants partial deliverances to the wicked.

^{ap} The inhabitants too were descended from one common stock. Caphtor was the country from which the Philistines migrated before setting on the coast of Palestine. ^c The reader will observe a close resemblance in both structure and language between this prophecy and that in Isaiah xv. and xvi. There is no reason to believe that Jeremiah copied from the older prophet. The fact seems to be, that as the Moabites now joined the Chal-

vasion of Judah, Jer-

commissioned to re-

The destruction of the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote Gaza.¹

2 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, waters² rise up out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and all that is therein;³ the city, and them that dwell therein: then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

3 At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his ^dstrong horses, at ^ethe rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall ^fnot look back to their children for feebleness of hands;

4 Because of ^hthe day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off ⁱfrom Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth; for the LORD will spoil the Philistines, ^jthe remnant of the country⁴ of ^kCaphtor.

5 Baldness⁵ is come upon Gaza; Ashkelon is cut off ^lwith the remnant of their valley: how long ^mwilt thou cut thyself?

6 Oⁿ thou sword of the LORD, how long ^owill it be ere thou be quiet? put up⁶ thyself into thy scabbard; rest, and be still.

Pharaoh-necho, or Pharaoh-hophra, is uncertain. It is equally uncertain at what time; the fact alone is known, and all mere conjecture is useless.—Gaza was a very ancient city, Ge. 10. 10, and being the frontier town of Palestine towards Egypt, was strongly fortified. By Joshua it was assigned to the tribe of Judah, who gained possession of it soon after his death, Ju. 1. 18. The Philistines regained the possession, during which it became the scene of some of the most memorable acts of Samson. Being regained by David, it continued subject to his successors for 150 years; and, after successively falling into the hands of the Assyrians, Egyptians, Chaldeans, and Persians, it withstood Alexander of Macedon a siege of two months, and was, when captured, barbarously razed to the ground. Gaza appears never to have been rebuilt, and is described shortly after the days of our Lord as a desert place, Ac. 8. 26. Another city of the same name was erected near the ancient site, which still remains a place of considerable importance, and contains about 5000 inhabitants. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God exactly foresees the miseries of the most strong and flourishing states. And the strongest holds are of no avail against the justice of a threatening, an holy God. He effectually reckons with the spiteful or treacherous enemies of his people at last; and if he be against us, who can be for us? The more we trust to creatures for help, the more sad disappointments we shall meet with in a time of need. Yea, great distress may make us even to forget we have our darling babes, or to wish they had never been born. But, notwithstanding the confusions of war, every stroke shall be overruled of God, and none can stop it till it has finished its work.

CHAPTER XLVIII. Ver. 1. Moab. So called from Moab the son of Lot. It is bounded on the west by the Dead Sea, on the south by Midian, on the north by the river Arnon, and on the VIEW EAST FROM THE ACROPOLIS—SHOWING THE HILL WHERE ST. PAUL PREACHED. [Jeremiah, xlviii.]—In the year 588 B. C., Jeremiah was prophesying the conquest of Egypt by the Babylonians. At the same time in Greece, Solon, of the family of Nelidae, had come to great influence by the capture of Salamis and by his share in the first sacred war against Crisa and Cirrha whose inhabitants had robbed the temple of Apollo in Delphi. It was during this time that Solon was writing the constitution and laws for the citizens of Athens. Standing upon the Acropolis and looking east toward Hymettus, we see the natural features of the country which surrounded Athens in the time of Jeremiah. It is interesting to place ourselves in the time of the prophet and look toward Greece, for this classical country is regarded as one of the lands of the Bible. From Greece some 300 years after Jeremiah, Alexander the Great came and conquered Palestine.

5 For in the going up of Luhith continual weeping⁷ shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.

6 Flee, save your lives,⁸ and be like the heath⁹ in the wilderness.¹

7 ¶ For because 'thou hast trusted in thy works, and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken;² and 'Chemosh⁴ shall go forth into captivity, with his 'priests and his princes together.

8 And the spoiler⁵ shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape; the valley also shall perish, and the plain⁶ shall be destroyed, as the LORD hath spoken.

9 Give¹ wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away: for 'the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein.⁷

10 Cursed⁸ be he that doeth the work of the LORD deceitfully,⁸ and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

11 ¶ Moab hath been at ease⁹ from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees,¹ and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity:² therefore his taste³ remained⁴ in him, and his scent is not changed.

12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will send unto him 'wanderers,⁶ that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles.

13 And¹ Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Beth-el⁷ their confidence.

14 ¶ How say ye, 'We are mighty and strong men for the war?

15 Moab is spoiled,⁸ and gone up out of her cities, and his chosen⁹ young men are gone down to the slaughter, saith 'the King, 'whose name is the LORD of hosts.

16 The calamity of Moab is near¹ to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.

17 All ye that are about him, bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, 'How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!

18 Thou 'daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst; for the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and he shall destroy thy strong holds.

19 O inhabitant² of 'Aroer, stand by the way, and espy; ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

20 Moab³ is confounded; for it is broken down: howl and cry; tell ye it in 'Arnon, that Moab is spoiled,

21 And judgment is come upon the 'plain is illustrated by the situation of Moab, and the habits of all the dwellers in Syrian border-land. Moab was bounded on the east by the great desert of Arabia; and to this day when any invading force enters the territory of a transjordanic people, if unable to meet them in the field, they pack up their goods, collect their flocks and herds, and retire into the desert. This is the counsel given to the Moabites by the prophet.—P.

The proper territory of Moab lay immediately upon the eastern border of the Dead Sea, bounded on the north by Ammon and on the south by Edom; but in prosperous times, during the internal conflicts of Israel, the Moabites conquered the extensive plain extending east of Gilead as far as the southern border of Bashan. Some of the cities here named lay in this plain, such as Beth-gamul, Kerioth, and Bozrah.—P.

23 And upon 'Kiriathaim, and upon Beth-gamul, and upon Beth-meon,

24 And upon 'Kerioth, and upon 'Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab, far or near.⁴

25 The⁵ horn of Moab is cut off, and his 'arm is broken, saith the LORD.

26 Make¹ ye him drunken; for he 'magnified himself against the LORD: Moab also 'shall wallow in his vomit, and he also 'shall be in derision.

27 For 'was not Israel a derision unto thee? was he found among thieves?⁵ for since thou spakest of him, thou skippedst⁶ for joy.

28 O ye that dwell in Moab, leave the 'cities, and dwell in the rock, and be like the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.

29 We have heard the pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud,)⁸ his loftiness, and his arrogancy, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart.

east by the deserts of Arabia. The Israelites were expressly forbidden to injure the Moabites, De. 2: 9; but this forbearance was repaid not only with inhospitality, but malice; for the Moabites hired Balaam to curse Israel, and joined with the Midianites in enticing them to sin, Nu. xxi. xxiv.; De. 23: 2. During the period of the judges, Moab held Israel in bondage for eighteen years, from which they were delivered by Ehud, Ju. iii. Moab was completely subdued by David; but, during the decline of the kingdom of Israel, they regained their independence, and seized on the greater part of the possessions of the tribe of Reuben, 2 Ki. 13: 20. After an invasion by Shalmaneser, Is. xvi. xvi.; Am. 2: 1, Moab soon regained its strength, and became one of the most flourishing kingdoms of Asia. It was sadly devastated by Nebuchadnezzar, who carried into captivity the greater number of its inhabitants, 2 Ki. 24: 2; Eze. xxv. After various recoveries and disasters, it fell under the power of the Romans, and the whole country is studded with relics of that extinct empire. The natural fertility of the soil is nearly unparalleled, yet the whole 39 They shall howl, saying, ⁴How is it broken down! how hath Moab turned the back⁶ with shame! so shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.

40 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, he⁷ shall fly as an eagle,⁸ and shall spread his wings over Moab.

41 Kerioth is⁹ taken, and the strongholds are surprised, and the mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.¹

42 And Moab shall be destroyed ⁹from being a people, because ¹⁰he hath magnified himself against the LORD.

43 Fear,⁴ and the pit, and the snare, shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith the LORD.

44 He¹ that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, ¹¹the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon, because of the force: but ¹²a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the tumultuous ones.²

46 Woe¹³ be unto thee, O Moab! the people of Chemosh³ perisheth: for thy sons are taken captives,⁴ and thy daughters captives.

47 ¹⁴Yet⁵ will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the LORD. Thus far is the judgment of Moab.

B BRIDGE OVER THE JORDAN—NEAR WHERE THE ISRAELITES WOR-SHIPPED THE EGYPTIAN CALF. [Jeremiah, xlix:19.]—"Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong." This bridge is over the Hasbeiya branch of the Jordan. The bridge is said to date to the time of the Romans, but is thought to belong to a later date. It has a very solid look and is in need of repairs, but one peculiarity of the Turk is that nothing with which he has to do is ever repaired. The rock-paved roadway you see coming down to the bridge is the road along which we pass from the plain of Huleh to Cæsarea Philippi. This is a wild and picturesque place, and the river underneath is fitly represented by Jeremiah in the sentence "the swelling of the Jordan." The Jordan here dashes down the steep descent, covering the shrubbery on the banks with its spray. It passes in a channel nearly 200 feet deep.

1, 9, 21, 35 The judgment of Babylon. 4, 17, 33 The redemption of Israel.

THE word that the LORD spake^a against Babylon, and against the land of the Chaldeans, by^b Jeremiah the prophet.

2 Declare^c ye among the nations, and publish, and set up^a a standard;³ publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, ^aBel is confounded, Merodach⁴ is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

3 For^d out of the north^e there cometh up a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 ¶ In^f those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant^g that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been lost sleep; their shepherds^h have caused them to go astray, they haveⁱ turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their resting-place.^j punished, it is in vain for us to hope for an escape. Yea, if he continue his hand on us, we can never recover from our ruins, but must be dreadful and lasting monuments of his justice.—All earthly joy, pomp, power, or bravery in the day of his wrath, do but render our ruin more dreadful. Nor can the most securely situated or the most inoffensive escape from his anger. The most retired are forced into the open world, and made to share in the common misery. And God often wonderfully debases nations before he signally advances them.

CHAPTER L. Ver. 4. In those days. That is, during the days of Babylon's desolation. That desolation still continues, and the conversion and restoration of Israel is still future; but the visible ruin of Babylon is not more certain than the fulfilment of the promise of God to his people Judah and Israel. C.

Ver. 13. Wholly desolate. The abundance of the country has vanished as clean away as if the besom of desolation had swept it from north to south,—the whole land from the outskirts of Babylon to the farthest stretch of sight, lying a melancholy waste. R. K. Porter's Travels; see Rich, Keith, &c.—Note. He that would interpret the awful phrase 'wrath of the Lord,' will find a most intelligible exposition in comparing the histories of ancient and modern Babylon. The picture will present conquest pursued, pride inflated, idolatry established, luxury indulged, slavery maintained, mercy forgotten, and ruin, utter ruin, inflicted in return by the hand of a righteous God! C.

Ver. 19. Israel. The distinction between Judah and Israel is not to be overlooked. Judah was restored under Zerubbabel. Ne. i.—Israel never returned. But God has given the promise, and it will yet be fulfilled. See ver. 33. C.

Ver. 20. Satan, as the 'accuser,' will seek for their iniquity, as he did for iniquity in Job, but it shall not be found; because they shall have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. See He. 8. 8-12. C.

Ver. 40. Let the infidel compare the ancient with the modern state of Babylon, and the whole with the prophetic—not a description vague and general, but specific and particular—and then let him acknowledge that 'the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy,' and remain an infidel no longer. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Certain but dreadful is the ruin of arrogant sinners, and especially those who oppress or murder the people of God. How unstable are all earthly things! The Medes and Persians, whom the Chaldeans had but lately subdued, now tread their conquerors under their feet. And no idols, no princes, no counsellors, no diviners, no armies, no lofty walls or deep rivers, no wealth or bravery can protect them from the weakest foe. The measure which they had meted out to others is meted out to them again, pressed down and running over. And their fearful judgments exactly correspond to their horrid iniquities.—But in what fearful things in righteousness doth God answer the prayers of his people! Yet certain is their deliverance, their restoration to fellowship with God, to safety, comfort, and full forgiveness. And if we begin to be tenderly affected under God's corrections, it is a token that our merciful deliverance is near. In promoting a good cause, it is good to be zealously affected, and to be among the first to lead the way. It is highly honourable to return to God and our covenant obligations to him. And happy is it when the cruel insults and upbraiding of our enemies are exchanged for the smiles, the vindications of our God. And when our 45 Therefore hear ye ^athe counsel of the LORD that he hath taken against Babylon, and his purposes that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans; surely ^athe least of the flock shall draw them out; surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them.

46 At ^athe noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved, and the cry is heard among the nations.

CHAPTER LI.

¹ The severe judgment of God against Babylon in revenge of Israel.
⁵⁹ Jeremiah delivereth the book of this prophecy to Seraiah, to be cast into Euphrates, in token of the perpetual sinking of Babylon.

THUS saith the LORD, Behold, ^aI will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the midst¹ of them ^bthat rise up against me, a ^cdestroying wind;²

2 And will send unto Babylon ^afanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land: for in the day of ^atrouble they shall be against her round about.

3 Against him that bendeth ^alet the archer bend his bow, and against him that lifteth himself up in his brigandine;³ and ^aspare ye not her young men; destroy ye utterly all her host.

4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, and they that are ^athrust through in her streets.

5 For ^aIsrael hath not ^abeen forsaken, ^anor Judah of his God, of the LORD of hosts; ^athough their land was filled with sin against⁴ the Holy One of Israel.

6 Flee^a out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity: for this is ^athe time of the LORD's vengeance; he will render unto her a recompense.

7 Babylon hath been a ^agolden cup in the LORD's hand, that ^amade all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad.

8 Babylon is ^asuddenly fallen and destroyed: howl^a for her; ^atake balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would have healed Babylon,⁵ but she is ^anot healed: ^aforsake her, and let us go every one into his own country; for ^aher judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

10 The LORD hath brought forth our righteousness:⁶ come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the LORD our God.

11 Make^a bright⁷ the arrows; gather the shields: the LORD ^ahath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes: for his device is against Babylon, to destroy it; because ^ait is the vengeance of the LORD, the vengeance of his temple.

12 Set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon,⁸ make the watch strong, set up the watchmen, prepare the ambushes:⁹ for the LORD ^ahath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.¹

13 O thou that dwellest upon ^amany ^awaters, ^aabundant in treasures, ^athine end is come, and ^athe measure of thy covetousness.

14 The^a LORD of hosts hath sworn by himself,³ saying, Surely I will fill thee with men ^aas with caterpillars; and they shall lift up^a a shout against thee.

15 He^a hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his ^aunderstanding.

16 When^a he uttereth his voice, there is a multitude⁵ of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

17 Every^a man is brutish by his ^aknowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image:⁷ for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

18 They are ^avanity, the work of errors: ^ain the time of their visitation they shall perish.

19 The^a Portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things; and ^aIsrael is the rod of his inheritance. The LORD of hosts is his name.

20 Thou^a art my battle-axe⁹ and weapons of war: for with^a thee will I ^abreak in pieces the nations; and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22 With thee also will ^aI break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

24 And ^aI will render unto Babylon, and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea, all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the LORD.

nations around, especially from the Jewish temple, and dedicated to their idols, shall be forced back, and restored to the owners: and no more shall multitudes bring presents, or come to worship their idols. Hasten out of Babylon as far as ye can, O ye Jews, and let not the rumours of Cyrus' invasion, or the revolt of the Chaldean lords, in the least terrify you, for God will by these very means work out your deliverance. 50,

51. O ye Jews who have been preserved from the slaughter at the taking of Babylon, embrace the first opportunity of returning to Canaan, to rebuild your temple to God; deeply ashamed that, for your fathers'

25 Behold, I am against thee, O *destroying mountain,² saith the LORD, which destroyest³ all the earth; and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, and will make thee a burnt mountain.

26 And *they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations; but thou shalt be desolate for ever,⁴ saith the LORD.

27 Set⁵ ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, *call together against her the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz; appoint a captain against her; *cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillars.⁶

28 Prepare against her the nations, with *the kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion.

29 And *the land shall tremble and sorrow: for every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant.

30 The⁷ mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight, they have remained in their holds; their might hath failed; they *became as women: *they have burned her dwelling-places; her⁸ bars are broken.

31 One⁹ post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to show *the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end, 32 And that the *passages⁷ are stopped, and the *reeds⁹ they have burned with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, The daughter of Babylon is like a¹ threshing-floor, it is time to thresh her:¹ yet a little while, and the time of her *harvest shall come.

34 Nebuchadrezzar¹⁰ the king of Babylon hath devoured me, he hath crushed me, he hath made me an empty vessel, he hath swallowed me up like a dragon, he hath filled his belly with my delicates, he hath cast me out.

35 The¹¹ violence² done to me and to *my flesh³ be *upon Babylon, shall the inhabitant⁴ of Zion say; and, My blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, shall Jerusalem say.

36 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will plead thy cause, and take vengeance for thee; and I *will dry up her sea,⁵ and make her springs dry.

37 And¹² Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, an astonishment and an hissing without an inhabitant.

54 A sound of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans:

55 Because the LORD hath spoiled Babylon, and destroyed out of her the great voice; when her waves do roar like great waters, a noise of their voice is uttered:

56 Because the spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and her mighty men are taken; every one of their bows is broken: for the LORD God of recompenses shall surely requite.

57 And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is The LORD of hosts.

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly broken, and her high gates shall be burned with fire; and the people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

59 The word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went with Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign. And this Seraiah was a quiet prince.

60 So Jeremiah wrote in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even all these words that are written against Babylon.

61 And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt read all these words;

62 Then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, to cut it off, that none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be desolate for ever.

63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, that thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates:

64 And thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her: and they shall be weary. Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

27 In 2 Ki. 25. 8 Nebuzar-adan is said to have come to Jerusalem on the seventh; here he is said to have come on the tenth day of the month. How may these apparent contradictions be reconciled? Most easily. He came on the seventh, and continued collecting the spoil day after day, retiring, it may be, from the city at night, till the tenth, when he again 'came' back and burned both the temple and the city. The Jews still keep two fasts in memory of these calamities.—C.

eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.²

2 And he did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

3 For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

4 And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

5 So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

6 And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.⁴

7 Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about;) and they went by the way of the plain.

8 But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him.

9 Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah.

11 Then he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death.

12 Now in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard, which served the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem,¹

13 And he burned the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burned he with fire.

Ver. 25. A burnt mountain. A burning mountain often overwhelms with lava the cities and plains in its neighbourhood. So the fall of Babylon, by the sudden revulsion of trade, and wreck of property, must have overwhelmed its connected or dependent countries in common if not of equal ruin. C.

Ver. 31. Babylon is described by most credible ancient writers as a square of 15 miles each side; the Euphrates running through the middle. The city was taken by turning the river out of its ordinary course—the enemy entering through the empty channel. Such a city might, therefore, readily be taken 'at one end' before any alarm had reached the other. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Fearful are the destructions which await those who have long been employed in executing God's judgments upon others. And nothing more hastens their ruin than their insolence against God and abuse of his people. Even when he frowns upon these himself, he cannot endure others to insult, murder, or oppress them. And it is easy for that almighty God who is infinitely superior to idols, to make his counsel to stand, and to do all his pleasure. Strong and brave are the weakest when God animates them to the battle; and weak and dispirited the strongest when God fights against them. Vain is everything earthly, as all may issue at last in such misery and desolation. But, alas! how dreadful must be the last, the eternal, destruction

SUMMER HOUSE OF SHAMMIAH, DAMASCUS—WHERE NAAMAN THE SYRIAN LIVED (I. Kings, xx, xxii; II. Kings, v:6). [Jeremiah, lii:9].—"Then they took the king, and carried him unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him." The army of the Chaldeans pursued after and overtook King Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho. In going from Jericho to Riblah and Hamath they would necessarily pass through Damascus, for it was the most direct route between Jericho and Riblah. We give a picture of a summer house in Damascus to illustrate this important event in Jewish history. It was at Riblah that the Eyyptian king Pharaoh Necho put the youthful Jehoahaz in chains, and made Eliakim king, as we learn from II. Kings, xxiii:29-35. Nebuchadnezzar also encamped here while he directed his military operations in Palestine. This summer house in Damascus is the property of Shammiah, a very wealthy Jew.

REVOLT IN PRISON, DAMASCUS—A CITY CONQUERED AND GARRISONED BY DAVID. [Jeremiah, lii:25-26.]—In the Scripture above referred to, we have an account of the taking of Seraiah, the chief priest, and Zephaniah, the second priest, and others found in the city of Jerusalem, to the king of Babylon at Riblah. Damascus is upon the direct route between Jerusalem and Riblah, and the prisoners above referred to passed this city before reaching Riblah, where they were smitten and put to death by the king of Babylon. The illustration we give above is of a scene witnessed by the writer. The building to the right is the city prison. Five hundred men confined here for various offenses had mutinied, and were being shot to death from the top of the prison by the guards. We witnessed the whole scene from the veranda of our hotel which stood just across the Abana river from the prison. Several men were killed before the mutiny was quelled.

^a In this narrative Jeremiah gives an account of three minor deportations, not elsewhere mentioned in Scripture. But there were three others greater than these. The first in the 1st year of Nebuchadnezzar, Da. 1:1-6; the second in the 8th, 2 Ki. 24:12; and the third in the 10th, 2 Ki. 25:8; which are sufficiently distinguished from those in the 7th, 18th, and 23d years. This view is presented by Usher, and adopted by Blayney and Greenfield, &c. C.—Henderson reconciles the statements in this passage with those in Kings as follows:—According to 2 Ki. 24:14 the number of captives taken along with Jehoiachin amounted to 10,000, with which the statement here made, that the number was 3023, may be reconciled by comparing 2 Ki. 24:16, where we are informed that 7000 of the 10,000 specified, ver. 14, were military, leaving the sum total to be completed by the addition of the round number of 3000, which our author, giving the exact number of 3023, states to have been Jews, understanding thereby the inhabitants, exclusive of the soldiers. To the number of 4000, specified in ver. 30 before us, as the amount of those who had been taken captive at three different times, must be added the 7000 soldiers of 2 Ki. 24:14, so that the whole will come to 11,000; and regarding these as full-grown men, if we take into account the women and children, the total estimate of those carried away to Babylon will be, according to the computation of Micahel, about 50,000 individuals.—P.

of the wicked, of which all the overthrows of cities and nations are but alarming preludes! Quickly should we flee from among them, that we share not in their sins and their plagues. In every affliction we suffer on earth, let us think on God, and remember his mercy and truth. And though the accomplishment of his words be ever so unlikely, let us never stagger at his promise through unbelief. Is there anything too hard for the LORD?

CHAPTER LII. REFLECTIONS.—How corrupt dignified persons, churches, and nations sometimes become! But God casts out none from his church or protection till they first cast off him. If sinners willfully depart from him he gives them up to their own folly; and often nothing more is necessary for their destruction. Iniquity not only deserves, but hastens men's ruin upon them. And however sweet rebellion against God be at first, it is dreadful and bitter in its fruits. And the folly of parents often plunges their children into ruin. Divine ordinances, long abused, are removed at last. And external privileges, instead of excusing our sins, or exempting from miseries, become a grievous aggravation of both. Nor can our unbelief make void God's promises any more than his threatenings.—In this world all things are in a perpetual revolution; new kings, new laws, new conditions, new frames. And long nights of trouble often usher in joyful deliverances. Our times are all in God's hand, as well as the hearts of all men with whom we deal. And he can make our most wicked and infatuated oppressors to favour us whenever he sees meet.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah, as a prophet, 'hated without a cause,' or simply for telling the truth, for denouncing sin and exhorting to holiness; and persecuted to bonds, imprisonment, and most probably to a cruel and ignominious death, may justly be regarded as an eminent type of Messiah in his prophetic office. Each typical person is one who has just a certain measure of the Spirit of Christ bestowed upon him—is placed in circumstances, to a certain extent, similar to those in which Messiah is to be placed—and consequently exhibits a certain measure of the temper and character which, 'in the fulness of the time,' Christ was intended to exhibit, of the work he was fitted to accomplish, and of the suffering he was destined to endure. In all these respects Jeremiah was eminently a type of Messiah, whose day and kingdom he so clearly foresaw; see especially ch. 23. 5, 6; 33. 14–18. In one point of view, the character and circumstances of their respective times, there seems, no doubt, a wide difference; yet the sensual idolatry of the days of Jeremiah was not more idolatrous than the self-righteousness and traditions of the days of Christ, that had made 'void the law of God,' and converted the proud Pharisees into worshippers of themselves. The opposition, ingratitude, hatred, and cruelty with which Jeremiah was treated by his countrymen, are striking similitudes of their subsequent treatment of Messiah. All these things, however, the Lord bore patiently, and prayed for the forgiveness of them that crucified him; and here Jeremiah has been supposed to have come short, and has been accused of an impatience and vehemence indicative of the spirit of a mere man, rather than of an inspired prophet. That neither Jeremiah nor any other has ever attained the full 'measure of the stature of Christ,' will readily be admitted; but that the accusations against him are unfounded, the offspring rather of a spurious sentimentalism, than of the 'charity that thinketh no evil,' it is hoped the previous notes have demonstrated. And while it is neither right, necessary, nor permissible, to defend, or even to palliate, an error in the servants of God; it is right, and an imperative duty, to defend them against every unfounded accusation. In all the other attributes of a type Jeremiah will be seen a striking image of his future Lord, and especially in the following points:—(1) In the spirit of self-sacrifice, when he prefers the companionship of his wretched and ungrateful kindred to all the splendour and respect so generously proffered at the court of Babylon. (2) In the grief of heart he was called to endure. How accurately does he therein resemble the 'Man of Sorrows,' when he longs to weep 'day and night for the slain of the daughter of his people!' (3) In the unshrinking boldness with which he denounced sin, and the affectionate earnestness with which he called sinners to repentance. (4) In the untiring energy with which, during a long and turbulent period, he continued to prosecute the work of his ministry; so that, like his Lord, he might well nigh say, 'The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.' All these, with other graces, combined to shadow out in the servant, what his Master would be at his appearing. And 'all these things happened for our ensamples, and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come,' 1 Co. 10. 11.

As an internal evidence of the antiquity of the book, it is not unworthy of remark that the months are reckoned by numbers; first, second, &c., a mode which was not used after the captivity, for during the seventy years the Jews had learned, and afterwards continued to use, the Chaldaic names.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH

Are an appendix to his predictions; written not in the foresight, but on observing the desolations which they bewail;—not for Josiah's death, of whom there is not the smallest hint in the book, but for the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the unhooking of the Jewish church and state by Nebuchadnezzar. The composition is poetic and singular, each verse, in each chapter, beginning with a different letter of the alphabet, in order, as in some of the Psalms; only in the third every three verses begin with the same letter, somewhat in the form of Ps. cxix. Nothing can be conceived more tender, expressive, and affecting than the descriptions. The grand design of them is to lead the captives to repentance and humiliation for their sins before God, and to inspire them with some hopes of deliverance.

[The author's name is not mentioned in this book, and therefore some have questioned whether it proceeded from the pen of Jeremiah. There is no good reason, however, to doubt the authorship. Jewish tradition reaching back beyond the Christian era ascribes it to Jeremiah; and in a verse prefixed to the Septuagint translation, and apparently of the same date, Jeremiah is mentioned as the author. The verse is as follows: 'And it came to pass after Israel had been carried away captive, and Jerusalem had been laid waste, that Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented with this lamentation, and said.' The internal evidence is in entire accord with the historical. The writer was manifestly an eye-witness of the troubles he laments. The language and style, too, closely resemble those of the prophecies. P.]

The Book of LAMENTATIONS may be considered as a sequel to those prophecies of Jeremiah which related to the Chaldean invasion, and the subsequent ruin of Judea, and the captivity or dispersion of the Jews. And although by Josephus, Usher, and others, it has been considered as referring to the death of Josiah (2 Ch. 35. 25), yet the description of the 'captivity' (ch. 1. 3), of the complete ruin of Jerusalem (ch. 4. 5, 12), and of the capture of the king (ch. 4. 20), seems quite conclusive for referring the whole book to the days of Zedekiah.

The book is divided into five chapters, each of which contains a distinct subject of lamentation, subdivided into twenty-two stanzas, according to the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. In the first four chapters the stanzas begin with the letters following in alphabetical order. In the first two chapters each stanza forms a triplet, except the seventh of the first, and the nineteenth of the second, which have each a supernumerary line. In the third chapter each stanza consists of three verses, which all commence with the same letter; so that the whole alphabet is thrice repeated. In the fourth and fifth chapters the stanzas are merely complete, the fifth chapter being the only one not alphabetically arranged.

This arrangement is not to be considered as originating merely in the personal taste of the prophet, but as divinely directed for some special purposes. Among these purposes, it may be useful to note the following. (1) The Jewish and the Christian religions (and which yet are not two, but one religion, under two forms or dispensations, and calculated for two conditions of mankind, the local and the diffused, the self-governing and the governed); these are the only religions that have ever made education—the education of all ranks, without exception, an integral and necessary part of their constitution. They are, in a word, the only intellectual forms of religion; every false form being calculated either to tolerate ignorance or foster sensuality; and every false, superstitious, and apostatical form of Judaism and Christianity being more or less perverted to the same purposes. Now the alphabet containing the elements of all intellectual education, it is not surprising that an intellectual religion should embody some of its most important documents in an alphabetical form, so that the minds of children under instruction (see De. 6. 6) might associate their first steps in learning with the holy Word of the Lord. No doubt there are those who would pronounce such association unfavourable to future religious impressions; inasmuch as the first steps in learning are generally felt as a toil, and endured but as a slavery. But this, he it remembered, depends altogether upon the temper and the manner of the instructor, who generally has it in his power, by a judicious commixture of kindness and authority, to render a really intellectual education not only tolerable, but agreeable and delightful. (2) It is by no means improbable that, by adopting the alphabetical arrangement in his 'LAMENTATIONS,' the prophet meant to inculcate that sorrow was now the proper lesson which Judah and Israel were called to study; while the threefold repetition would, not ineptly, shadow forth the long-continued succession of afflictions which they were destined to undergo. Nor is it contrary to the emblematical manner of the prophets to conclude, that the dropping of the alphabetical form in the last chapter—which consists of an earnest prayer—was intended to show, that when Judah and Israel should return and call upon the name of the Lord, then should their lesson of sorrows have an end, and the joy of their heart be renewed, ver. 15. 21. (3) This alphabetic elegy, this funeral dirge of Zion, may well remind the believer of Him who came near 'the city, and wept over it.' And by comparing ch. 5. 18, 19, with Ps. 102. 25, and He. 1. 10–12, the Lord, before whom the prophet pleads and bemoans the melancholy ruin of his church and his country, is found to be the 'King of Zion,' the Lord Christ, who, in the book of Revelation, ch. 1. 8, is styled the Alpha and Omega, the whole alphabet, as it were the study and instructor of his church. C.]

CHAPTER I.

1 The miserable estate of Jerusalem by reason of her sin. 12 She complaineth of her grief, 18 and confesseth God's judgments to be righteous.

HOW doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people! how is she become as a widow! she that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary!

2 She weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are on her cheeks; among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her: all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies.

3 Judah is gone into captivity, because of affliction, and because of great servitude; she dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest: all her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

4 The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate; her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

5 Her adversaries are the chief, her enemies prosper: for the LORD hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions: her children are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed: her princes are become like harts that find no pasture, and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem remembered, in the days of her affliction and of her miseries, all her pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 Jerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she is removed: all that honoured her, despise her, because they have seen her nakedness; yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; she remembereth not her last end; therefore she came down wonderfully: she had no comforter. O LORD, behold my affliction; for the enemy hath magnified himself.

10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon all her pleasant things: for she hath seen that the heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that they should not enter into thy congregation.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 13, 14. By his devouring judgments he has consumed all our strength. He has entangled us so that we cannot escape. He has most furiously debased and destroyed us and all that we had. The punishment and bondage which we undergo for our sins, are bound so fast on us that we cannot shake them off: and our sufferings are so twisted together that we cannot break through them and escape.

Ver. 1. How doth the city sit solitary! When Jerusalem was taken by Titus Vespasian, the Roman emperor had a coin struck, upon which is a palm-tree, the emblem of Judea, and beneath it a solitary woman, the emblem of Jerusalem, sitting with her head leaning sadly upon her hand, with the legend, 'Judea capta.'—How is she become as a widow! Deprived of her earthly king, who is a captive, and rejected, and outcast from her God,— widow indeed; for 'her Maker was her husband,' Is. 54. 5.—How hath she become tributary! First to Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt, and now to the emperor of Babylon. Ver. 3. Because of great servitude. As a punishment for her sins in not emancipating her slaves. See Je. 34. 17; Ne. 5. 1-13. And O that slave-holding nations, called Christian, would take warning from the recorded judgments of the slave-holding Jews! C.

Ver. 7. Did mock at her sabbaths. The offence of the Sabbath is not its existence:—for all nations are willing to keep days of rest and festival. Its offence is its strictness, and its religious separation from all unnecessary secular employments and vain amusements. And it is well worthy of remark, that in every effort made for the 'better observance of the Lord's-day,' which is the 'Christian Sabbath,' a system of 'mocking' similar to that of the days of Jeremiah has uniformly been employed as one of the chief weapons of libertine opposition. indignation of his anger, 'the king and the priest.

7 The^a Lord hath cast off his altar, he hath 'abhorred his sanctuary, he hath given up⁸ into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; 'they have made a noise¹ in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD 'hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion; he hath stretched out a 'line,³ he hath not withdrawn his hand from 'destroying:⁵ therefore he made the ram- part and the wall to lament;⁶ they languished together.

9 Her⁴ gates are sunk into the ground;⁷ he hath destroyed and broken her bars: 'her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: 'the law is no more,⁸ her prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

10 The elders of the daughter of Zion 'sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jeru- salem hang down their heads to the ground.⁹

11 Mine⁹ eyes do fail with tears, my bowels are troubled, my 'liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings swoon¹ in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.²

13 What^a thing shall I take to witness for thee? what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for 'thy breach is great like the sea;³ who can heal thee?

14 Thy 'prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee; and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but of strangers, careless about relieving friends, and joyous at the fall and distress of enemies, are some of the most common and most decided symptoms of the 'desperate wickedness' of the carnal and unrenewed heart. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how great is the desolation when God withdraws and we are deprived of a magistracy or ministry. Great is the slavery, the sorrow, the contempt, the poverty to which sin brings men. And what neglect, profanation, and derision of everything sacred it occasions! If we wilfully depart from God, the rest of our soul, we must not hope to find rest in anything else. And all afflictions are doubly heavy when we apprehend them coming from an incensed God. Affluence abused is the ready way to pining want; and cruel oppression of others prepares the like misery for ourselves. When sins become numerous and notorious, it is proper that God should rise to punish them. And amidst desolating judgments, nothing is more painful to gracious souls than the violation and contempt of God's ordinances, and the loss of those comforts which they once enjoyed in him and his favours. But it is a mercy that we may apply to him in hope, when all our friends forsake us, and our enemies abuse us. And it is doubly bitter if he then keeps himself at a distance.—But if comforts be withdrawn, children murdered, friends turn enemies or be buried in death, if sword, famine, and pestilence devour, or if enemies insult, it is but the just punishment of our iniquities. No fiery judgments devour, no entangling providences befall, no servitude or misery crushes, but what are all framed out of our own transgressions. Let us therefore always justify God, and blame ourselves: and the more that created friends, confidences, and comforts disappoint us, let us the more earnestly supplicate his favour. A praying heart and a prayer-hearing God will quickly produce the destruction of our enemies and our own deliverance. And after he has glorified himself in our corrections, he will magnify himself in the tremendous ruin of our destroyers.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 13, 14. What can equal your calamity? Your breaches are like those made by the sea, great and incurable. Your prophets of your own choosing, instead of charging your sins faithfully upon you to bring you to repentance, and so prevent those judgments, preached their own flatteries, which hardened you in your sins, and hastened your ruin.

Ver. 1. Cast down from heaven unto the earth. Believers can always say, 'Our conversation (our citizenship) is in heaven.' And this 'conversation,' or citizenship, is twofold—inward, that of faith; outward, that of church-fellowship and enjoyment of ordinances. From this inward citizenship, as a right, the believer is never 'cast down'; but of all its outward benefits, as an enjoyment, he may be, and often is, deprived. But while through all storms the true believer clings to the Saviour by whom he has been 'apprehended,' there are individuals, multitudes, and churches, who are judicially 'cast down from heaven unto the earth,' are deprived of church-fellowship and ordinances; because never having had the root of faith, but the mere leaves of profession, they are condemned to wither away as severed branches, and all their 'beauty' perishes. C.

Ver. 2. Swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob. The flood of invasion that in wrath has passed over the land, has swept away in its violence, and 'swallowed up' in its depths, all the habitations, the villages, and cities of the land. See Wylie's Modern Judea, ch. x. C.

Ver. 11. My liver. The learned editor of the Pictorial Bible considers this expression metaphorical, and as used in the same way as the heart is used for the affections of the mind. But there seems no necessity for this figurative sense, for the word 'liver,' may be translated 'bile,' and the expression will import some grievous form of cholera, produced by excessive grief and unwholesome and insufficient food. See ver. 12; ch. 1. 11. C.

Ver. 16. The causes of this deep-rooted antipathy may have been many, arising from the recollections of the conquests gained over them by David, and from collision of commercial interests, &c. But the chief cause is to be sought in the hatred of the heathen against the religion of the Jews. For while heathenism has generally been tolerant of heathenism, it has uniformly been intolerant of Judaism and Christianity. C.

Ver. 17. He hath caused, &c. God did not efficiently 'cause' the cruel and vengeful disposition of the enemies of Jerusalem; but, by his judgments upon her sins, he gave them occasion of joy; and in that sense, but in no other, did he 'cause' them to rejoice. C.

Ver. 19. The top of every street. This expression is used ch. 4. 1; Is. 51. 20; Na. 3. 10, and is, most probably, to be explained by the fact, that Jerusalem was built upon hills, on the tops of which the streets generally terminated in public market-places, or bazaars, whither the children had gone in search of food. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Terrible is the issue when God becomes our enemy and fights against us: and corre-

have seen for thee ⁴false burdens, and causes of banishment.⁴

15 All that pass by ⁵clap ⁶their hands at thee; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call ⁷the perfection of beauty, the joy of the whole earth?

16 All thine enemies ⁸have opened their mouth against thee: they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, 'We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, we have seen it.

17 The LORD hath done that which he had devised; ⁹he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: ¹⁰he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and ¹¹he hath caused thine enemy to rejoice over thee; he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.⁶

18 Their ¹²heart cried unto the Lord, 'O wall of the daughter of Zion, ¹³let tears run down like a river day and night: give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye ¹⁴cease.

19 Arise, ¹⁵cry out in the night; in the beginning of the ¹⁶watches ¹⁷'pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord: lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, ¹⁸that faint for hunger in the top of every street.

20 ¶ Behold, O LORD, and consider ¹⁹'to whom thou hast done this. Shall the women ²⁰'eat their fruit, ²¹and children ²²'of a span long; ²³shall ²⁴the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord?

21 The ²⁵young and the old lie on the ground in the streets: my virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword; thou hast slain them in the day of thine anger; thou hast killed, and not pitied.

22 Thou hast called, as in a solemn day, my terrors ²⁶round about; so that in the day of the LORD's anger none escaped nor remained: those that I have swaddled and brought up ²⁷'hath mine enemy consumed.

spondent to the counsels of his heart are the judgments of his hand. Justly he debases by his judgments those who had debased themselves by their sins, and mingles the blood of sinners with their sacrifices; yea, deprives of sabbaths and solemn ordinances those who would not religiously observe them. Grievous sorrows follow upon grievous sinning. And men must either mourn over their sins or over the dreadful effects of them. Alas! what a fearful curse it is to be given up to the delusions of unsent and hypocritical ministers! nor is anything more destructive and damning. It is highly proper, in trouble, to observe the exact agreement between God's judgments and his word; and to ease our broken hearts by pouring our complaints into his bosom. He alone can help us; and none ever truly sought him in vain.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 3, 7, 9, 43, 53. He has so plunged and fixed me in miseries that it is impossible for me to get out; and my attempts to obtain relief do but render me still more and more miserable.—We are quite overwhelmed with trouble, and brought into a most desperate and remediless condition.

31 By comparing this expostulation with ch. 4. 10, it will be seen how literally, and how awfully God real-tive consideration of this chapter will suggest, at least the probability, that it is a prophetic picture of the suffering Messiah, drawn for the instruction of Zion in the duty of humiliation and patience under the hand of the Lord. This interpretation of the chapter is suggested on the following grounds:—(1) The title, which is, literally, 'mighty man.' (2) The fact of his deep afflictions, Col. 4. 24. (3) The cruel mockery of his people, ver. 14; Mat. 27. 29. (4) The gall he gets to drink, Mat. 27. 34. (5) The cheek he turns to the smiter, ver. 30; Jn. 19. 3. (6) His sympathetic weeping, ver. 48; Lu. 19. 41. (7) His assertion that he was persecuted 'without cause,' ver. 52; Jn. 15. 25. (8) His life being 'cut off,' ver. 53, 54; comp. Is. 53. 8. (9) His redemption from death, ver. 58; Ps. 16. 10; Ac. 2. 24-36. (10) His fearless appeal to his judge, ver. 59; Jn. 8. 40; He. 9. 14. (11) The continuous plotting of his enemies, ver. 61, 62; Mat. 2. 16-20; 3. 15. (12) The corresponding language of his companions, the apostles, ver. 45; comp. 1 Co. 4. 13; also Ps. 44. 22; He. 8. 36. (13) The experience of all believers, that the only argument that can reach the judgment or the heart of the afflicted, is derived from a recital and view of the sufferings of Christ, He. 12. 1-3. (14) That Christ and his sufferings are similarly introduced in the Psalms and the Prophets. The only objection to this interpretation arises from comparing ver. 4 with Jn. 19. 36. But the breaking of his bones there denied is the act of his enemies, the breaking in ver. 4 is the act of God; and, when compared with Ps. 51. 8. Is. 38. 13; Je. 50. 17, will be seen to be the emblem of extreme affliction, such as our Lord endured when he bore our griefs and carried our sorrows, was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities.—C.

b The subject of this elegy, says Henderson, 'is the personal experience of Jeremiah, on which he expatiates in the most touching strains in order partly to give vent to his own feelings, and partly to excite corresponding emotions in the breasts of his exiled countrymen. From the lively recollections which he had of the severe trials that he had endured in the course of his prophetic ministry, the merciful interpositions of the Lord on his behalf, and the incontestable right of the most High to inflict suffering on sinful men, he proposes to draw an example from which they might receive instruction, and be induced, in the exercise of repentance and prayer, to hope for a restoration from their captivity.' This seems to me to be the true object of this touching elegy.—P.

CHAPTER III.

1 The prophet bewaileth his own calamities; 22 he acknowledgeth God's mercies and truth to be a proper ground of patient hope: 37 he maketh humble confession of the sins which had drawn down God's severe judgments: 55 he prayeth to be avenged of his enemies.

I AM the man ¹that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.¹

2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness, ²but not into light.

3 Surely ³against me is he turned; he turneth his hand ⁴against me all the day.

4 My ⁵flesh and my skin hath he made old: he hath broken my bones.

5 He ⁶hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travail.

6 He ⁷hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.

7 He ⁸hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out: he hath made my ⁹'chain heavy.

8 Also ¹⁰'when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.

9 He ¹¹hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone: he hath made my paths crooked.

10 He ¹²was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.

11 He ¹³hath turned aside my ways, and pulled me in pieces: he hath made me desolate.

12 He ¹⁴hath bent his bow, and set me as a mark for the arrow.

13 He hath caused the arrows ¹⁵of his quiver to enter into my reins.

14 I ¹⁶was a derision to all my people, and their song all the day.

15 He hath filled me with ¹⁷'bitterness, ¹⁸'he hath made me drunken with wormwood.⁵

16 He hath also ¹⁹'broken my teeth with gravel stones, ²⁰he hath covered me with ²¹'ashes.

on when he acknowledges Jesus to be Master and King: and in which service afflictions may be, and generally are, more or less included.—Note. There are many blessings attendant upon early conversion, such as, (1) The follies of youth, and sins of riper years, which it prevents. (2) The many bitter weepings which are prevented by preservation from these follies. (3) The blessings to others which the instruction and example of early piety so frequently conveys. (4) The blessed hope which it works in the believer's own experience of continued mercy, Ps. 77. 6; Ro. 5. 4. (5) The continued opportunities which it furnishes, when days are lengthened, for glorifying God in the various periods or relations of life; and (6) The nearer resemblance to Christ into which it brings the believer.—Note. Let the aged sinner know that it is never too late—but, let the youthful remember, it is never too early—to believe and turn to the Lord. C.

Ver. 35. The verse condemns all oppression wherein men take advantage either of the mere letter or imperfection of a human law to inflict an injury in the name of law, and as in the presence of 'the most High,' by whom kings reign and princes decree justice. C.

Ver. 39. Wherefore doth a living man complain? Seeing the chief blessing, life, is still continued; and seeing that afflictions are intended for correction, why should man murmur at what he either wants or suffers? Why should the sick man reject the medicine, or accuse the Physician of cruelty? Is. 45. 7; Am. 3. 6; He. 12. 6. C.

Ver. 51. Mine eye affecteth mine heart. What my eye sees 'preys upon my heart.'—Note. Fools make a mock, a sport, a jest, an entertaining comment of sin; but the eye that sees sin as Jesus saw it—as God sees it—must often weep as Jesus wept. C.

Ver. 64-66. That ver. 64-66 may be rendered in the future, as 20 My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is humbled¹ in me.

21 This² I recall to my mind,² therefore³ have⁴ I hope.⁵

22 ¶ *It*⁶ is of the LORD's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not.

23 *They are*⁷ new every morning: great *is*⁸ thy faithfulness.

24 The LORD *is*⁹ my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him.

25 The¹⁰ LORD is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him.

26 *It*¹¹ is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.

27 *It*¹² is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth.

28 He¹³ sitteth alone and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him.

29 He¹⁴ putteth his mouth in the dust; if so be there may be hope.

30 He¹⁵ giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him: he is filled full with reproach.

31 For¹⁶ the Lord will not cast off for ever:

32 But though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies.

33 For¹⁷ he doth not afflict willingly,⁷ nor grieve the children of men.

w The lesson here taught is very cheering. Afflictions are sent unto the soul as it is thoroughly humbled, until it is brought to feel and acknowledge its utter wickedness and helplessness—then the moment it turns to God in penitence and faith, seeking pardon, acceptance, and help, that moment the rod is removed, and blessings begin to flow from the fountain of divine mercy.

declaratory and not imprecatory, is certain; but similar scriptures quoted from the Old into the New Testament, being thus rendered into the Greek, which does not admit the uncertainty of the Hebrew (see Ps. 69. 25; 109. 8; comp. with Ac. 1. 20), seem to require the authorized version to be retained, on the sound principle of analogy, and to call for exposition, rather than authorize escape from an apparent difficulty or objection. See for this exposition, and defence of similar prayers, Ps. 5. 10; 35. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How tremendous are the fatherly corrections of JEHOVAH! and very criminal must be the sins which so provoke him against the objects of his love. The children of light, and heirs of joy, sometimes walk in the greatest darkness of calamity and grief, and even despondency: and many and diversified are God's arrows of affliction, flying swift and piercing deep. But if men will walk in crooked paths of iniquity, it is but just that God should cross their designs and break their measures; and if they will regard iniquity, it is just in him to shut out their prayers, than which few things are more galling to a gracious heart.—Saints can never enter the lowest hell, being preserved by grace: but by multiplied troubles from God, from devils, and from men, they may have a hell upon earth. Yet God will deliver his people and churches in due time, when they are thoroughly melted and purified in his furnace. In their worst cases they are neither helpless nor hopeless. Let us therefore always acknowledge him kind and faithful. If our troubles be heavy and sharp, let us eagerly claim and live upon him as our portion, and comfort ourselves with his compassion, and with a persuasion that all he does is the fulfilment of his gracious Word, on which he has caused us to hope. Let us complain to God, but never complain against him. And let us earnestly work together with God, and labour to promote the same self-debasing and soul-sanctifying ends. Experience of former kindness should encourage us to hope for more. And having cast our burdens on the Lord, we should continue waiting instant and patient in prayer; and at last we shall find an answer of peace. There is no prison so deep or dark but God can bring us out of it; no enemy so strong but God can destroy; and no request of faith so silent but he will hear it for our good. But woe to those, however powerful, haughty, merry, or scornful, against whom God's favourites plead! And think, my soul, what of all these troubles Jesus underwent—in infinite love underwent—and all for me!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 13-15. Their priests and prophets have persecuted the Lord's prophets, and have ruined the nation by flattering them in their sins. They formerly wandered from God's law in acts of violence and murder, and now they cannot walk in the streets without polluting themselves by dead bodies.—Yea, every one, even the heathens, abhor them as unclean lepers, or persons too despicable to live on the earth.

Ver. 3. Sea-monsters. The word so translated is a general name for all large and cruel animals, whether of the land or water. THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

Ezekiel was also a priest; and prophesied among the captives in Chaldea while Jeremiah prophesied in Judea and Egypt. His predictions, especially the first and last nine chapters, are extremely figurative. But if we search them with reverence, humility, and diligence, we may from them find much encouragement to our faith and hope in God; even as in natural things we may reap much benefit from those, the nature, connections, and influences of which we do not well understand. We have in them (1) His divine call to his prophetic office, i.-iii. (2) His visions and messages of reproof and threatening to the Jews, iv.-xxiv. xxxiii. (3) His predictions of ruin to the enemies of the Jews; particularly the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyrians, Egyptians, and Turks, xxv.-xxxii. xxxv. xxxviii. xxxix. (4) Promises of mercy to the Jews after their captivity in Babylon and their present dispersion; which are likewise typical of the glorious privileges of the gospel church, xxxiv. xxxvi.-xlvi.

[Ezekiel and Jeremiah were both priests; were contemporaries, and prophesied mostly of the same events. Ezekiel, however, was carried captive to Babylon, and dwelt on the banks of the Chebar, a tributary of the Euphrates. Jeremiah remained in Judea, so that, in each country, God had his faithful witness. The prophecies of Ezekiel extend to a wide field, including not merely the Jews, but also the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyrians, Egyptians, and the northern nations, governed by Gog, designated the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. Like the other prophets, he sets forth under various emblems the times and the glories of Messiah. He began to prophesy in the fifth year of his captivity, and continued in the faithful discharge of his duties for about twenty years. C.]

Ezekiel was among the captives taken to Babylon with Jehoiachin in B.C. 599, when Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and carried away the treasures of the temple. His residence was at Tell Abib, on the banks of the river Chebar, in Mesopotamia. His prophetic mission began in the fifth year of his captivity (B.C. 594), and continued, so far as we have any record, to the twenty-seventh year (see ch. 29. 17). Ezekiel was a priest, and had studied deeply the ritualistic and symbolic lore of his people. He also appears to have been minutely acquainted with the sacred rites and strange idolatry of those among whom he dwelt. His brilliant imagination was thus prepared for decking his prophetic visions in a gorgeous symbolism without parallel elsewhere in Scripture. The events of his life are unknown, and we have no record of the date or manner of his death. P.]

CHAPTER I.

¹ The time of Ezekiel's prophecy by the river Chebar. ⁴ His vision of four cherubims, 15 of the four wheels, 26 and of the glory of God.

NOW it came to pass in the thirtieth year,² in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as ¹I was among the captives³ by the river of ¹Chebar,⁴ that ¹the heavens were opened, and ¹I saw visions of God.

² In the fifth day of the month, which was the ⁵fifth year⁵ of king Jehoiachin's captivity,

CHAPTER I. Ver. 4-15. These living creatures may denote angels, as ministering in the dispensations of Providence, and ministers, as serving in the church. Their being living, denotes their own life and liveliness, and the quickening influence of their work: their being four, denotes their sufficiency for all the ends of the earth, and under all the empires of it; their four faces—viz. of a man, denotes their wisdom, prudence, and tender compassion;—of a lion, their courage, boldness, and might;—of an ox, their indefatigable labour and patience;—of an eagle, their clear and piercing knowledge, high contemplations, and holy affections. Their four wings, covering their bodies, stretched upwards, and joined to their fellows, denote their diligence, speedy success, consciousness of their own infirmities, and mutual harmony and love. Their straight feet, like those of a calf, and sparkling, denote their upright, steady, persevering, pure, and glorious ministrations and behaviour. Their many hands under their wings, denote their great but prudently directed and humble activity in their whole work. Their fiery appearance, denotes their ardent love and holy zeal. The Spirit moving among them, denotes the Holy Ghost as calling them and qualifying them for, and directing and actuating them in, their work; and all directed by the voice of the Almighty, who is enthroned in heaven. 15-25. The four wheels, with four faces each, and coloured like beryl, mysterious in their form, dreadfully high in their rings, full of eyes, and moved by the living creatures straight forward, may denote the manifold, precious, glorious, mysterious, dreadful, wise, and prudent providences of God, perseveringly, self-consistently, and righteously conducted by the ministration of angels in all parts of the world: or they may denote the churches of Christ, mysterious in their form, uniform in their appearances, perseveringly advancing to the everlasting state, precious and shining in their oracles, ordinances, and true members, fearing God, and dreadful to ⁵ Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of ¹four living creatures. And this was their appearance; they had the likeness of a man.

⁶ And every one had ¹four faces, and every one had ¹four wings.

⁷ And² their feet were straight feet;³ and the sole of their feet was like ¹the sole of a calf's foot; and they sparkled like the colour of ¹burnished brass.

⁸ And they had ¹the hands of a man¹ under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings.

their enemies, intelligent, prudent, and watchful, and directed and actuated by the Spirit of God, through the instrumentality of ministers, according to the word of an enthroned Redeemer. 26-28. This man, amber-coloured, and fiery in appearance, enthroned in heaven over the wheels and animals, and encircled with a rainbow, represents Jesus Christ, in our nature, as terrible to his enemies, but full of love to and zeal for his people, exalted to his Father's right hand, to be the Head and Director of angels and ministers, and ever attending to and administering the covenant of grace to the world.

Ver. 4. A whirlwind is the emblem of speedy judgment and total ruin, Job 11. 9. The north, the seat of the invading nations. The cloud, the fire, and the brightness, are the same emblems of divine presence, energy, and judgment that appeared on Sinai; indicating that the same God was present to inflict deserved punishment upon the rebellious transgressors of his law and the idolatrous apostates from his worship. SITE OF THE ACADEMY—WHERE PLATO HAD VISIONS THE TRUEST EVER RECORDED OUTSIDE OF THOSE INSPIRED BY THE SPIRIT OF GOD. [Ezekiel, i.]—The first chapter of Ezekiel opens with a glorious vision of God. Ezekiel was among the captives, and exiled from his native land in a strange, depressing atmosphere, and yet we have evidences throughout his work of his deep spiritual insight. The book of Ezekiel may be called a song which the poet learned in sorrow. In some respects his work is the most imaginative and remarkable in the Scripture. We give a picture above of the site of the Academy where another seer lived and taught. It was amid the olive groves of the Academy that Plato had his visions of God, and which are nearer to those of the prophets than any others that ever took form among heathen writers. When Ezekiel was writing by the River Chebar in Babylon, Solon introduced a new standard of coinage in Athens whereby he reduced debts secured by mortgage 27 per cent. It is an interesting fact thus to know that Ezekiel, the seer, and Solon, the wise man of Greece, lived and wrought in the same age of the world's history.

15 ¶ Then I came to *them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and I sat where they sat, and *remained there astonished among them seven days.²

16 And³ it came to pass, at the end of seven days, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 Son of man, *I have made thee *a watchman unto the house of Israel: *therefore hear the word at my mouth,³ and give them warning from me.

18 When I say unto the wicked, *Thou shalt surely die; and *thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, *to save his life; the same wicked man shall⁴ die in his iniquity; but *his blood will I require at thine hand.

19 Yet⁵ if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, *he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered⁶ thy soul.⁴

15 Heb. righteousness.
16 I entirely concur with the comment of Fairbairn on the doctrinal bearing of this passage, that it has nothing to do with the question as to the possibility of the righteous falling from a state of grace. "It seems to be a misdirection of the passage to apply it to such a purpose. Its direct and immediate bearing had respect only to the inseparable connection between righteousness and life, and death, and certainly by the former a real participation of the divine likeness, and by the latter the loss of both. But whether this loss may ever be sustained by any who have properly enjoyed the good—whether those who have been truly renewed by grace ever fall back again into the corruption and ruin of nature, this is not to be determined by a passage like the present, which being intended only for a direction to the prophet, in regard to his public ministrations, of necessity spoke of the appearances, as indicative of the realities of things. — P.

7 Heb. a man reproving. A ch. 2. 15. 1. 2. 2. Ki. 17. 7. 23. 2. Ch. 35. 15. 16. Je. 44. 4. 5. 1. De. 33. 25. ch. 11. 25. 33. 22. Ex. 4. 11. 12. ch. 24. 27. J ch. 2. 5. 7. Mat. 11. 5. 13. 9. Re. 2. 11. 1. Co. 14. 38.

may either denote the restraints which God put upon him during his four hundred and thirty days' emblematic siege of Jerusalem [ch. iv.], or the restraints which the Jews would lay upon him, in order to prevent his denouncing judgments against them.

Ver. 3. Honey is the emblem of sweetness collected by industry, and preserved by care—of which the bee is one of the most remarkable natural examples. It here represents the sweetness of those reflections that arise from the knowledge and meditation of God's Word, and ready obedience to his will. C.

Ver. 4. This expression, Speak with my words unto them, is such a plain and explicit assertion of full and complete verbal inspiration in one prophet, that unless it be found explicitly disavowed, which it never is, the same amount of inspiration must be ascribed to every other prophet. See ver. 10. C.

Ver. 9. Adamant. What particular stone is intended cannot be determined, nor is the determination important, as the import of the passage is sufficiently plain. God had endowed the prophet with knowledge by means of the roll, or revealed word; he, in face of all opposition, with honesty and courage, determined to deliver his message. C.

Ver. 12. The glory of the Lord from his place, was the Shekinah in the wilderness—in the tabernacle, God manifest in light and cloud. "The glory of the Lord from his place" in the temple, Mal. 3. 1, was "the Word made flesh" and dwelling among men, who thus beheld "his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." "The glory of the Lord from his place" in the heavens, is Christ sitting at the right hand of God, and ever living to make intercession for us. C.

Ver. 14. In bitterness of spirit because of the calamities he was commissioned to reveal.—In the heart. In the godly indignation of his spirit against ingratitude and hardness of heart to be rebuked. C.

Ver. 20. There is a faith that is living, and there is a faith that is dead, Ja. 2. 17; there is, with Christ, an outward union of profession—there is an inward union of the heart, Jn. 15. 2. 6; Ro. 10. 9. The man that professes faith in Christ is righteous in profession, but no farther. And such a one may fall away from that profession in which, for a time, he "did run well;" and that either through ignorance of the real nature of the gospel, Mat. 13. 19, or want of "root in himself," or the dread of persecution, Mat. 13. 21, or through "care of the world and deceitfulness of riches," and the seed may thus be choked, and the plant become "unfruitful."—A stumbling-block. This may be either a fuller exposition of divine truth for the edification of the church, whereby ignorance is alarmed and alienated—the letting loose of the storm of persecution, by which indolence is disturbed, and the lovers of pleasure disgusted—or the full demand of God upon the liberality of Christian stewardship, at which covetousness takes the alarm and shuts out Christ, by admitting and cherishing "the love of money." These and other such "stumbling-blocks" God is said to "lay before" men—not to induce them to stumble and fall—not to tempt them to evil—but to punish them for their sins—to bring out from beneath the garb of profession the reality within; and to be a warning to him that "thinketh he standeth (by faith) to take heed lest he fall" (by sense), C.

Ver. 26. This dumbness may have been physical, so that he could not speak; God thereby manifesting to the prophet and people that speech was his gift, their lips not their own, Ps. 12. 4: or it may have been mental, arising from such an overwhelming astonishment at the view of the divine glory, as deprived him for a time of the power of utterance—a result often arising from deep impressions of natural objects and occurrences; or it may have been merely the effect of that commanded restraint or compulsory imprisonment, by which he was for a time reduced to silence as a public "preacher of righteousness." C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's Word ought to be received as the delightful food of our soul, without disputing; and the more readily we obey God's difficult commandments, we shall receive the more comfort in the issue. Saints may receive with delight what speaks terror to the wicked. And they who minister in holy things, ought to meditate on and experience their subject before they deliver it to others. But unless God give them a spirit of wisdom and understanding, their own labours can avail but little. The more impudent sinners are in opposition to religion, the more bold and resolute should ministers and others appear in defence of it, that if any obstinately reject the counsel of God, they may be rendered inexcusable. And if we be called to hard services, he will fit and furnish us for them. Nor must the want of desired success discourage us, or in the least abate our faithfulness and diligence. What struggles of fear and unbelief may there be where grace reigns! It is very discouraging for ministers to be sent to preach to such as are uncontrollably wicked, and hate to be reformed. And their great griefs are often too big to be uttered. But God can bow their hearts as well as furnish their heads, and so prevent their refusal or desertion of their work. And he often for a time straitens them whom he intends to exalt.—Perseverance in sin, and apostasy from God, must certainly issue in temporal and eternal destruction. But readily will God pardon the most wicked if penitent. O the infinite importance of the ministerial office! What influence the execution thereof hath upon the everlasting happiness or misery of mankind! and ministers are acquitted or condemned as guilty of the destruction of souls as they faithfully deliver God's messages or not. Men's apostasy from, or perseverance in, good works, clearly manifests the counterfeit or real nature of their religion and grace. But they who follow God's direction shall have his necessary comforts always attending them. They who sinfully evade God's public work are ordinarily punished with temporary restraints from it: and they who hate reproof are deprived of faithful reprovers. Such as intend public preaching ought to be prepared for it by much reading, meditation, and prayer, as their messages are deeply connected with the eternal salvation or damnation of men.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1-7. It is most probable that these things were really done, and not in mere vision. If that year was their leap-year of thirteen months, there was time enough between the dates [ch. 1. 1, 2; 8. 1]. God could easily make the prophet lie still all the time specified, and live comfortably on his provision. The brittle tile represented Jerusalem's weakness and readiness to be irrecoverably ruined. The pan or slice of iron represented the walls of Jerusalem, or the resolution and fortifications of the Chaldean besiegers; the three hundred and ninety days on his left side, answering to the years of wickedness by the less regarded ten tribes after Jeroboam had become king, 1 Ki. xii., might also figure out three hundred and ninety days of siege by the Chaldeans, before they went off to fight the Egyptians [Je. 37. 5]. The forty days on his right side, answering to the Jews' years of wickedness under Manasseh, Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah, or beginning from the thirteenth or eighteenth year of Josiah, might represent the forty days of siege after the Chaldeans returned before the city was taken.—His setting his face against the portrait of Jerusalem, and having his arm bare, marked how furiously the Chaldeans should besiege it, and how ready they would be to use their swords in murdering the inhabitants.

Ver. 1. Tile. The tiles and bricks used for building in several eastern countries are very large, and have often been used as tablets. Pliny relates how Epigenes inscribed a long series of astronomical observations upon brick tiles (Nat. Hist. lib. viii. 57). The order was particularly appropriate in Chaldea, where it was customary to inscribe indented figures upon broad and thin bricks, many of which are still found in the ruins of Babylon, and may be frequently seen in European collections of eastern antiquities. C.

Ver. 7. Arm shall be uncovered. The uncovering of the arm denoted, in eastern phraseology, preparation for battle; and was intended as a farther emblem of Chaldean preparation, courage and activity in carrying on the siege. C.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Under the type of a siege is showed the time from the defection of Jeroboam to the captivity. 9 By the provision of the siege, is showed the hardness of the famine.

THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even Jerusalem.¹

2 And lay siege² against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount³ against it; set the camp also against it, and set battering rams⁴ against it round about.

3 Moreover, take thou unto thee an iron pan,⁵ and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city; and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. This⁶ shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

4 ¶ Lie⁷ thou also upon thy left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it thou shalt bear their iniquity.⁸

5 For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days:⁹ so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.

6 And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days:¹⁰ I have appointed thee each day for a year.¹¹

7 Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it.

8 And behold, I will lay bands¹² upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee from one side to another,¹³ till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 ¶ Take¹⁴ thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and fitches,¹⁵ and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread¹⁶ thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side; three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof.¹⁷

10 And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be by weight twenty shekels¹⁸ a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it.

11 Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of an hin:¹⁹ from time to time shalt thou drink.

12 And thou shalt eat it as barley-cakes,²⁰ and thou shalt bake it with dung²¹ that cometh out of man, in their sight.

13 And the LORD said, Even thus shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread among the Gentiles, whither I will drive them.

14 Then said I, Ah Lord God! behold, my soul hath not been polluted; for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there abominable flesh into my mouth.

15 Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith.¹

16 ¶ Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, behold, I will break the staff of bread² in Jerusalem; and they shall eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall drink water by measure, and with astonishment:

17 That they may want bread and water, and be astonished one with another, and consume away for their iniquity.

CHAPTER V.

1 Under the type of the prophet's hair, 5 is showed the judgment of Jerusalem for their rebellion, 12 by famine, sword, and dispersion.

AND thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, and cause it to pass upon thine head, and upon thy beard; then take thee balances to weigh, and divide the hair.

2 Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are fulfilled: and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife; and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them.

3 Thou shalt also take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy skirts.²

4 Then take of them again, and cast them into the midst of the fire, and burn them in the fire; for thereof shall a fire come forth into all the house of Israel.

5 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her.⁵

6 And she hath changed my judgments into wickedness more than the nations, and my statutes more than the countries that are round about her; for they have refused my judgments and my statutes, they have not walked in them.

my statutes, neither have kept my judgments, neither have done according to the judgments⁷ of the nations that are round about you:

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgments in the midst of thee, in the sight of the nations.

9 And I will do in thee that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like, because of all thine abominations.

10 Therefore the fathers shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I scatter into all the winds.

11 Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, Surely, because thou hast defiled my sanctuary with all thy detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore will I also diminish⁸ thee; neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity.

12 ¶ A^a third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and I will scatter a third part into all the winds, and I will draw out a sword after them.

13 Thus^a shall mine anger be accomplished, and I will cause my fury to rest upon them, and I will be comforted: and they shall know that I the LORD have spoken it in my zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them.

14 Moreover, I will make thee waste, and a reproach among the nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by.

15 So it shall be^a a reproach and a taunt, an instruction^a and an astonishment unto the nations that are round about thee, when I shall execute^j judgments in thee, in anger and in fury, and in furious rebukes. I the LORD have spoken it.¹

CHAPTER VI.

1 The judgment of Israel for their idolatry. 8 A remnant shall be saved. 11 The prophet is directed to lament their calamities.

AND the^a word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face toward the mountains of Israel,² and prophesy against them,

3 And say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD God; Thus saith the LORD God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys,³ Behold I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places;

4 And your altars shall be desolate, and your images⁴ shall be broken; and I will cast down your slain men before your idols.⁵

5 And I will lay⁶ the dead carcasses of the children of Israel before their idols;⁷ and I will scatter your bones round about your altars.

6 In^a all your dwelling-places the cities shall be laid waste,⁸ and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and made desolate, and your idols may be broken and cease, and your images may be cut down, and your works⁹ may be abolished.

7 And the slain shall fall in the midst of you, and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

8 ¶ Yet will I leave a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries.

9 And they that escape of you shall remember

13.—The knife represents destruction by the sword.—The scattering represents the captivity and dispersion. C.

Ver. 6. They (the nations) have refused—but merely refused—but Israel speciously accepted and falsely covenanted to obey, then lightly changed and wickedly rejected my judgments and my statutes, and so were worse than the heathen. C.

Ver. 7. Neither have done, &c. Neither have ye done so well as the nations—they have tenaciously adhered to the gods of their idolatrous fathers—ye have lightly forsaken the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They have been comparatively moral with a false religion; you have followed lies though in possession of the oracles of truth. C.

Ver. 17. Evil beasts. Either actually wild beasts, driven from the rivers by inundations, from the mountains by storms, or from the deserts by hunger; or figuratively, the Chaldeans, whose untamed ferocity justly entitled them to be called 'evil beasts.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—If men will not be reformed, they must certainly be ruined: and with great ease, and by a vast variety of judgments, God can accomplish the destruction of obstinate sinners. It is very awful when those who should have remained as monuments of mercy fall because of their sins: and highly criminal when such as had been singularly privileged with God's favours, oracles, and ordinances, for promoting the welfare of all around them, become a plague, and the vilest monsters in wickedness: and yet often apostate professors become more abandoned than heathens! How awful it is when idols and their services are admitted into God's land, his temple, his church, and the heart formed for himself! The immediate agents in the ruin of sinners are all the instruments of an angry God: and when his wrath is kindled, who can abide it! It is dreadful to contemplate that by our sins we may come to destruction. And, alas! in what awful condition must the impenitent perish for ever! If public reproofs cannot restrain public wickedness, public judgments must follow at last. Some will be destroyed and should become a warning to others. And if God bear long with us in our sins, his judgments must be the severer when they are inflicted. And the most incredulous will at length be forced to believe his Word, though it should be by their own everlasting destruction.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 3. Rivers and valleys are also specially addressed; because it is probable that, like the heathen whom they imitated and surpassed, ch. 5, 7, they had learned to deify the rivers, and people them with the Naiades; and it is certain that in the valley of Hinnom their most cruel rites of idolatry were practised. C.

Ver. 11. Smite with thine hand, &c. Eastern people employ much more action while speaking than Europeans; and some stance requires to be taken into account in the order 'to smite and to stamp,' actions which, to an eastern people, might be eminently expressive of the deepest indignation and sorrow. C.

Ver. 12. The threefold division of judgment, ch. 5, 12, seems, most probably, to have been adapted to three political factions into which the people were divided. (1) Those that were for fleeing 'far off,' and leaving Jerusalem to her fate, and taking refuge in Egypt or among the Ammonites, &c. (2) Those who encouraged, or perhaps compelled, Zedekiah to rebel. And (3) those who, when the rebellion was suppressed in the open country, refused to hear Jeremiah, and madly held out in Jerusalem. A terrible example of the existence and wickedness of such Jewish factions may be seen in Josephus' History of the Jewish War. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Terrible are the desolations which guilt and war make in nations. And no place, no idol, no station, can protect from God's wrath. If men will not destroy idols, he will find a way, even by idolaters, to destroy both together. His persevering patience, as well as both mercies and judgments, encourage and excite to a cordial and thorough repentance. And loathsome and abominable is the most beloved sin to a person truly penitent. Yea, hopeful is the case when sinners begin to remember God, and the base affronts which they have given him. And nothing more deeply wounds awakened consciences than a sense of their base ingratitude, and of grieving the Holy Spirit of God. God will make all men, either by their ruin, or especially by their hearty repentance, effectually to acknowledge his perfections, to feel the equity and veracity of his Word, and justify him in the accomplishment of it. The sins and judgments of others should affect us as well as our own. And

SUMMER HOUSE, CÆSAREA PHILIPPI—NEAR MOUNT HERMON
WHERE CHRIST WAS TRANSFIGURED. [Ezekiel, vi:3-4.]—"And say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God; thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Behold I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places; and your altars shall be desolate, and your images shall be broken; and I will cast down your ~~plain~~ men before your idols." We have a picture here of a summer house in Cæsarea Philippi. The weather is so hot here in the summer, and there are so many creeping and crawling things among the old ruins of this ancient city that people build above their stone quarters, in the warm season, summer houses such as you see in the picture. Cæsarea Philippi is at the foot of Mount Hermon, and truly has the prophesy of Ezekiel been fulfilled in this city. Here the altars are desolate, and the images broken, and the temple of Pan is in ruins.

ber me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives, because "I am broken" with their "whorish heart, which hath departed from me, and with their "eyes, which go a whoring after their idols: and they shall "loathe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations.

10 And^r they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.²

11 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, "Smite with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! for "they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged, shall die by the famine: thus will I "accomplish my fury upon them.

13 Then^r shall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, upon "every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains, and under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.

14 So will I "stretch out my hand upon them, and make the land desolate, yea, more desolate than the wilderness³ toward "Diblah, in all their habitations; and they shall know that I am the LORD.⁴

CHAPTER VII.

1 The final desolation of Israel. 16 The mournful repentance of them that escape. 20 The enemies defile the sanctuary because of the Israelites' abominations. 23 Under the type of a chain is showed the miserable captivity of all orders of men.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Also, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God unto the land of "Israel, "An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land.

3 Now is the end come upon thee, and "I will send mine anger upon thee, and will judge ministers must often weep over them who never shed a tear for themselves.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 7. The beginning of desolation is come upon you who remain in Judea; and ye shall quickly meet with real and terrible trouble, and not mere fears and ill-grounded fancies of it. 10-15. Since pride and violence have come to such intolerable heights among all ranks, the haughty and cruel Chaldeans are in readiness to punish you; and all orders shall be equally involved in your misery: such as sell fields shall not return to them in the year of jubilee, being captives in Babylon; yea, after their seventy years' captivity, it will be impossible for many to find their own inheritances. This prediction of the desolation of the country, and of its inhabitants, shall not fail of exact accomplishment: nor shall any be able to secure themselves from those judgments threatened, so long as they continue in their evil courses. They may blow the trumpets to call them together for war; but, deprived of all courage and resolution by my wrath upon them, none shall dare to assemble. 16-22. The few appointed for escape shall indeed be preserved, and scattered here and there for their safety; and they shall bitterly bewail their calamities and sins. All shall be quite dispirited and incapable of helping themselves; and shall be quite overwhelmed with grief, terror, and shame. Their wealth shall be altogether unprofitable to them; nay, they shall be glad to be rid of it, or shall have it seized by the enemy: or, in the famine, it shall be unable to procure them sufficient food,—since they have made it the occasion of manifold wickedness, and have employed it in the service of idols. And as for my magnificent and beautiful temple, which has long been the glory of their nation, and which they have defiled with their idols and the service of them, I will quickly drive them far from it into Chaldea, and will give it into the hands of the most infamous heathens to be defiled, plundered, and destroyed. 23-27. Prepare for imprisonment, captivity, and bondage; for your land is full of capital crimes, oppression, rapine, and injustice. Therefore shall the barbarous Chaldeans seize upon your whole property, of which ye so proudly boasted; nor shall your humblest entreaties be able to procure any respite, but one mischief shall follow another. Neither prophet nor priest shall be able or allowed to teach you; nor shall the most prudent and experienced know how to advise you. Both magistrates and people shall be utterly cluded spots, or had returned from the nations into which they had fled, or been carried captive. C.

Ver. 4. Thine abominations, &c. Being "given over" to your own will and ways, your abominations that you have chosen and loved, shall remain in the midst of every family and assembly, evidences of your apostasy and causes of divine judgment. C.

Ver. 10. The rod. Some think Nebuchadnezzar, who is called "the rod of God's anger," and who was a proud man; but it seems rather to describe the oppression and pride that had grown up in Israel; and on account of which God commissioned as proud an oppressor to execute his righteous judgment. C.

Ver. 12. Let not the buyer rejoice that he has obtained, nor the seller mourn that he has been forced to part with, property at an undervalue; it shall now be wrested from the buyer by a foreign power, as it was from the seller by domestic oppression. C.

Ver. 19. The possession of silver and gold led to the abuse of them in luxury, pride, covetousness, and idolatry. While the Israelites were comparatively poor, they were industrious, and remembered God; when, by their industry, they became rich, they stumbled over their abundance, and forgot the giver.—A melancholy progress which Christianity, alas! too often witnesses in her own children; and against which all successful men have special need to "watch and pray." C.

Ver. 20. "As to their beautiful ornaments, which were for pride, they turned them into images of their abominations, and their detestable things they made therewith; hence I will make them to them as an unclean thing." Boothroyd.

REFLECTIONS.—God gives to sinners fair warning of their approaching ruin; and with tenderness he seeks by his warnings to save them from ruin. But fearful and various are the plagues which men's diversified iniquities entail upon them. And nothing can avail for

GATE OF ATHENE ARCHEGETIS—RUINS ONCE CONSECRATED TO THE CAUSE OF IDOLATRY. [Ezekiel, viii:17.]—"Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence and have returned to provoke me to anger." At the time Ezekiel wrote this, B. C. 594, Solon repaired the constitution and laws for Athenian cities, but the abominations Ezekiel represents as being committed by the house of Judah and filling the land with violence, were being committed also by the Athenians in their worship of idols. So when Solon was an old man, Pisistratus, the tyrant, made himself the master of the Acropolis. These ruins and others in Athens only serve to show that the same laws which were at work among the Israelites, bringing them to confusion, were also at work among the Greeks, bringing them to a depth of national poverty, from which they have never recovered.

15 The sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within: he that is in the field shall die with the sword; and he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him.

16 ¶ But they that escape of them shall escape, and shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity.

17 All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water.⁹

18 They shall also gird themselves with sackcloth, and horror shall cover them; and shame shall be upon all faces, and baldness upon all their heads.

19 They shall cast their silver¹ in the streets, and their gold shall be removed:² their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the LORD: they shall not satisfy their souls, neither fill their bowels; because it is the 'stumbling-block of their iniquity.³

20 ¶ As for the beauty of his ornament, he set it in majesty; but they made the images of their abominations, and of their detestable things therein: therefore have I set it far from them.⁴

21 And I will give it into the hands of the strangers for a prey, and to the wicked of the earth for a spoil: and they shall pollute it.

22 My face will I turn also from them, and they shall pollute my secret place:⁵ for the robbers shall enter into it, and defile it.

23 ¶ Make a chain;⁷ for the land is full of bloody crimes, and the city is full of violence.

24 Wherefore I will bring the worst⁸ of the heathen, and they shall possess their houses: I will also make the pomp of the strong to cease, and their holy places shall be defiled.⁹

25 Destruction cometh; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none.

26 Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be upon rumour; then shall they seek a vision² of the prophet: but the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients.³

27 The king shall mourn, and the prince shall be clothed with desolation, and the hands of the people of the land shall be troubled: I will do unto them after their way, and according to their deserts⁴ will I judge them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Ezekiel, in a vision of God at Jerusalem, 5 is showed the image of jealousy, 7 the chambers of imagery, 13 the mourners for Tammuz, 16 the worshippers of the sun. 17 God's wrath for their idolatry.

AND it came to pass in the sixth year,¹ in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me.

2 Then I beheld, and, lo, a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber.

3 And he put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me² in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north, where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain.

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold, northward at the gate of the altar, this image of jealousy in the entry.

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold, a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I went in and saw; and behold, every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts,⁵ and all the idols⁶ of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel,⁷ and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan,⁸ with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients⁸ of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, 'The LORD seeth us not; the LORD hath forsaken the earth.'

13 ¶ He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the LORD's house which was toward the north;¹ and behold, there sat women weeping² for Tammuz.³

15 Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these.

16 ¶ And he brought me into the inner court of the LORD's house; and, behold, at the door of the temple of the LORD, between the porch and the altar,⁴ were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east.

17 ¶ Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger; and, lo, they put the branch to their nose.⁷

18 Therefore^a will I also deal in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity;

of their sex, they bid fair to stick at nothing horrid or obscene. And if men once turn their back upon God's institutions, they bid fair endlessly to wander after their own inventions. But shortly shall the most secret abominations be discovered, and the most shocking and daring be sufficiently punished.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 2-11. The six armed destroyers denote the Chaldeans and other instruments of God's vengeance. The man with the ink-horn denotes Jesus Christ, who manages all the slaughter of apostate nations, nay, all in the world, so as may consist with the preservation of his people, especially those who faithfully mourn over, and testify against, abundant iniquities.

Ver. 1. Cause them that have charge, &c. The princes of the Chaldeans, who had a charge from God to execute righteous judgment against the wicked inhabitants of the city. C.
Ver. 2. Six men. Equivalent to the six labour days of the week—a number exactly completed in the six successive incursions of the Chaldeans. See Je. 52. 28.—And one man among (not of) them clothed with linen—represents the righteous discrimination of God in the execution of his judgments upon mixed communities, whether he employ human or angelic agency, Re. 15. 6; 19. 8. C.

Ver. 3. The glory... was gone up. 'The glory,' or Shekinah, had gone up from the 'door of the inner gate,' ch. 8. 3, and now appeared on the threshold, ready to enter, judge, or depart. C.

Ver. 4. Set a mark. The Jews thought the mark was the letter called shau, the first in the Hebrew word law. Some early Christian writers admitting this to be the mark, yet held it was in the Samaritan character, which was in form of a cross—thus showing how early the superstitious use of that symbol of salvation had crept into the church. From Re. 14. 1 the mark will be found to be the name of the Father, acknowledging his children, and sealing them with the Spirit of promise until the day of redemption; and the name of the Lamb, Re. 22. 4, acknowledging in his righteousness. See also the holy priesthood of believers implied in this forehead mark, comp. Ex. 28. 38, with Re. 1. 6. C.

Ver. 6. Ancient men. The Sanhedrim, ch. 8. 10, 11, in God's house governors by office, idolaters by practice. A solemn warning to all who bear rule in the Christian church to beware both of 'the fear of man which bringeth a snare,' and that love of the world, which sooner or later is sure to terminate in that 'covetousness which is idolatry.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers of wrath, no less than of mercy, are always ready at his call. But how exceeding loath he is to leave a church, till their ob-

'and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.

CHAPTER IX.

1 A vision, whereby is showed the preservation of some, 5 and the destruction of all the rest. 8 God cannot be entreated for them.

HE cried¹ also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying, Cause them² that have charge over the city to draw near, even every man with his destroying weapon in his hand.³

2 And, behold, six men came from the way of the higher gate, which lieth⁴ toward the north, and every man a slaughter weapon⁵ in his hand; and one man⁶ among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side:⁷ and they went in, and stood beside the brasen altar.

3 And the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house: and he called to the man clothed with linen, which had the writer's inkhorn by his side;

4 And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark⁸ upon the foreheads of the men that sigh, and that cry, for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 ¶ And to the others he said in mine hearing,⁹ Go ye after him through the city, and smite; let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity:

6 Slay utterly¹ old and young, both maids, and little children, and women; but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house.

7 And he said unto them, Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain; go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, that I fell upon my face, and cried, and said, 'Ah, Lord God! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

stinacy and impudence, as it were, force him away!

And gradual even then are the removals of his comfortable presence. But even in the midst of ruin and destruction, he takes peculiar care of the protection of his followers, however weak and concealed their holiness and zeal may be. He knows them that are his; and not one of them shall be lost. And he will keep them safe amidst common calamities who keep themselves pure amidst abounding provocations. But when he has gathered his wheat into his garner, nothing remains for the chaff but unquenchable fire. Those who persist in impenitence must die without mercy. And none meet with more terrible destruction than unfaithful magistrates and ministers. God's temple protects penitent, not obstinate offenders. And if judgment begin at the house of God, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear? If servants in it defile it with their idolatries, no wonder that God should suffer the enemies of it to defile it with their violences.—But if God spare us in mercy, we ought to intercede for our sinful brethren.—And even though for their sinfulness God

9 Then said he unto me, 'The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, and the land is full of² blood,³ and the city full of perverseness;⁴ for they say, 'The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and the LORD seeth not.

10 And as for me also, mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity; but I will recompense their way upon their head.

11 And, behold, the man clothed with linen, which had the inkhorn by his side, reported the matter,⁵ saying, 'I have done as thou hast commanded me.

CHAPTER X.

1 The vision of the coals of fire, to be scattered over the city. 8 The vision of the cherubims.

THEN I^a looked, and behold, in the firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne.¹

2 And he spake³ unto the man⁴ clothed with linen, and said, 'Go in between the wheels,⁵ even under the cherub, and fill thine⁶ hand with coals of fire from between the cherubims, and scatter them over the city.⁷ And he went in in my sight.

3 Now the cherubims stood on the right⁸ side of the house, when the man went in; and the cloud⁹ filled the inner court.

4 Then the glory of the LORD went up¹ from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD's glory.

5 And the sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.²

6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels,³ from between the cherubims; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels.

7 And one cherub stretched forth³ his hand from between the cherubims unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen; who took it, and went out.

8 ¶ And there appeared in the cherubims the form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 And when I looked, behold, the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub; and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a beryl stone.

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel⁴ had been in the midst⁵ of a wheel.

11 When^a they went,⁶ they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head⁷ looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole body,⁸ and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes⁹ round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, 'it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel!¹²

14 And every one had four faces. 'the first face was the face of a cherub, and 'the second face was the face of a man, and the 'third the face of a lion, and the 'fourth the face of an eagle.

15 And the cherubims were lifted up. 'This is the living creature³ that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 And when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them; and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for 'the spirit of the living creature⁴ was in them.

18 Then the glory of the LORD departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.⁶

19 And the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them; and every one stood at the door of 'the east gate of the LORD's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

20 This^a is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubims.

21 Every^a one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

22 And the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: they went every one straight forward.

CHAPTER XI.

1 The presumption of the princes of Judah. 4 Their sin and judgment declared. 13 Ezekiel complaining, God sheweth him his purpose in saving a remnant, 21 and punishing the wicked. 22 The glory of God leaveth the city. 24 Ezekiel, carried back by the Spirit, propheth to them of the captivity.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1-7. The throne, ver. 1, denotes God's coming in a way of judgment against the Jews. The man clothed in linen, taking the fire from between the cherubims to scatter over the city, ver. 2, 6, 7, denotes Christ as executing the destructive justice of God on Jerusalem, according to the predictions of his prophets, and by the ministrations of angels. The bright cloud that filled the inner court, ver. 3, 4, might denote the terrible judgment of God on the priests; or his presence, as leaving the Jews and coming to the Gentiles. The terrible sound of the cherubim's wings, heard even to the outer court, ver. 5, may denote the terrible judgments of God on the Jews, heard of among the heathen; or the gospel published by the apostles to the Gentiles. 13. I plainly discerned that every providential dispensation, and every particular church, was under the direction and government of some superior being, even God himself. abominations, "I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God.

22 ¶ Then^a did the cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

23 And^a the glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city.²

24 ¶ Afterwards the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, to them of the captivity: so the vision that I had seen went up from me.

25 Then^b I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had showed me.

CHAPTER XII.

THE word of the LORD also came unto me, saying,

2 Son^a of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house.¹

3 Therefore, thou son of man, prepare thee stuff³ for removing, and remove by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight: it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.

4 Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing; and thou shalt go forth at even⁴ in their sight, as they that go forth into⁵ captivity.

5 Dig thou⁶ through the wall in their sight, and carry out thereby.

6 In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight: thou shalt cover thy face,⁷ that thou see not the ground; for I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel.

7 And^a I did so as I was commanded: I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the even I digged⁹ through the wall with mine hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight.

mon for Satan to make sinners look on their punishment as either doubtful or distant. Ministers have therefore need to be exceedingly bold and faithful, in warning self-flatterers and deceivers of others. And for this God sometimes renders some unexpected monuments of his justice, that others may hear and learn, and do no more so wickedly.—Proud transgressors often disclaim and detest their inferiors in guilt, and insult such as, in obedience to God, have given place unto wrath. To be banished from public ordinances is heavy to gracious souls; but God's presence and acceptance can more than balance the want. And great is the mercy when remarkable pardons, regeneration, and reformation coincide with and prepare for remarkable outward deliverances. But however loath God be to proceed, the obstinately wicked shall never pass unpunished. When sinners have sinned up the measure of their iniquity, he will be glorified in their torment.—The most remarkable visions of God here are but short-lived. But it is of great use when ministers faithfully impart to others what themselves have heard and learned of the Father.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 27. There is an impatient interpretation of prophecy which is not satisfying unless predicted events can be shown to be just at hand—and this is near akin to enthusiasm. But there is also a procrastinating interpretation, that removes all predicted events to an indefinite distance—and this is near akin to infidelity. The prayerful and attentive comparison of the 'sure word of prophecy,' with 'the existing,' signs of the times—a patient searching for the mind, and waiting for the work of the Lord—learning, not dogmatizing—repentance of personal sins whilst denouncing the sins of others—are essential to that shineth in a dark place.' glory which had so long rested on the ark, between the cherubims, in the most holy place, is here represented as taking a final departure from Jerusalem.

It went, so to speak, in stages;—first, it left the holy of holies and stood over the threshold of the tem-then it rose up from the threshold and rested on the cherubims (ver. 18); then it was conveyed until it stood over the great east gate which open-the outer court (ver.

of the city altogether, was wafted across the Kidron valley, and stood on the sad is this whole rewithdrawing gradually, and as if re-temple, his city, and his chosen people, and thus delivering them over to the fury of their enemies.—P.

figurative. The wall word signifies, 'false-to cover it, and thus conceal its defects, represents the ap-

Israel, to "stand in the battle in 'the day of the LORD.

6 They^o have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The LORD saith: and the LORD hath not sent them: and they have made others "to hope that they would confirm the word.

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The LORD saith it; 'albeit I have not spoken?

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye have spoken vanity, and 'seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God.

9 And^k mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they 'shall not be in the assembly² of my people, neither shall they "be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the 'land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

10 Because, even because they have "seduced my people, saying, 'Peace, and there was no peace; and one built up a wall,³ and, lo, others "daubed it with untempered mortar:⁴

11 Say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall: "there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, 'shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing where-with ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore^u thus saith the Lord God, I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and "great hailstones, in my fury, to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that "the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall "fall, and "ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof: and "ye shall know that I am the LORD.

15 Thus^b will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered mortar; and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it;

nations brings along with it the decay of everything valuable, or a curse on what remains. And if once neighbours, by fraud, oppression, and murder, devour one another, let them expect that God will plague them with common devourers; and that he will make himself known, either in the terrors of his wrath to the impenitent, or in the riches of his grace to such as humble themselves under his mighty hand. How dreadful is it when corrupt speeches become common proverbs, by which Satan hardens sinners against the words or ways of God! But they who will not believe God's warnings, will too late be terribly convinced by the infliction of his judgments. And let sinners put the evil day as far from them as they please, his threatenings will in due time prevail, and vindicate themselves.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 2-6. According to their own inclinations and affections, they publish their own imaginations without any warrant from me, and are extremely crafty, covetous, hardened, and mischievous. But they never do anything to reform the people, or to prevent judgments, or for the security and defence of church or state, which can enable them to hold out in the day of the Lord's judgments. Yea, their visions are but false and counterfeit, though, by their high pretences to inspiration, they have made the credulous people to believe their predictions will be accomplished. 9-16. I will manifest my power in punishing these false prophets, and will expel them from among my people, and I will deny them a return from captivity, because some of them affirmed their seductions for truths, and others supported them by specious but weak pretences. Yea, the Chaldeans, by their desolating ravage and fury, shall disprove their counterfeit oracles, and every argument used to support them.

18-21. They, by their signs of pillows and kerchiefs, and especially by their flattering predictions of peace and prosperity, lull all ranks into vain confidence and carnal security. By fitting their predictions to every one's humour, they promote their destruction instead of saving them. For the most pitiful rewards, they pretend my name and authority to countenance their abominable flatteries, denouncing destruction to those in Babylon whom I will preserve; and promising life and liberty to those in Jerusalem whom I will destroy. Therefore will I so refute and expose their delusions that no one shall be in danger of being ensnared thereby; and I will make them more and more abhorred than ever they were loved or feared.

Ver. 5. Gaps. Have not defended the breaches effected by heretical and ungodly men in the doctrinal and moral defects which the Lord has raised for the protection of truth and godliness, Phil. 1. 7, 17; have not interceded, like Moses, standing in the breaches which an offended God has threatened, or made, 10

16 To wit, the prophets of Israel, which 'prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which 'see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord God.

17 ¶ Likewise, thou son of man, 'set thy face against the 'daughters⁵ of thy people, which prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them,

18 And say, Thus saith the Lord God, Woe to the women that 'sew pillows to all arm-holes,⁶ and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature, 'to hunt souls! Will ye hunt the souls of my people, and 'will ye save the souls alive that come unto you?

19 And will ye 'pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley, and for pieces of bread, 'to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God, "Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls 'to make them fly;⁸ and 'I will tear them from your arms, and will let the souls go, even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.

21 Your kerchiefs⁹ also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

22 Because 'with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad, and 'strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by¹ promising him life;²

23 Therefore ye 'shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations: for I will deliver my people³ out of your hand; and 'ye shall know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 God answereth idolaters according to their own heart. 6 They are exhorted to repent, for fear of judgments, by means of seduced prophets. 12 God's irrevocable sentence of famine, 15 of noisome beasts, 17 of the sword, 19 and of pestilence. 22 A remnant shall be left for the instruction and consolation of others.

THEN came 'certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me.

2 And^b the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, 'these men have set up their idols in their heart,¹ and 'put the stumbling-block of their 'iniquity before their face: 'should I be inquired of at all by them?

REFLECTIONS.—God never places any in offices for which he does not qualify them. Nor have covetous and men-pleasing preachers any proper evidence of a divine mission. How daring and blasphemous is it to counterfeit commissions from God, or to father the God was pleased, at sundry times, to bestow the prophetic spirit upon women—as Miriam, Deborah, and Huldah. These endowments naturally produce, in vain minds, the ambitious desire of similar attainments, and for the sake of popular applause or filthy lucre, ver. 19, the infamous pretenders to a divine commission employed their influence to misrepresent the divine will, and counteract God's holy law.—C.

TEMPLE AT OLD CORINTH—TEMPLE OF NEPTUNE, THE ONLY RUIN STANDING OF THE ONCE BEAUTIFUL CITY OF CORINTH. [Ezekiel, xiv:3.]—"Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their hearts, and put the stumbling block of their iniquity before their face; shall I be inquired of at all by them?" The idolatries which corrupted the Israelites in the time of the prophets they learned from other nations. The artist and the writer left Athens by train early in the morning, passed by Eleusis, and over the Corinthian canal, and reached Old Corinth in time for dinner. This picture was taken about 12 o'clock. In no city in the world did men set up idols of greater splendor and put stumbling blocks of their iniquities more completely before their face than in Corinth, the city which at the time Ezekiel wrote his prophecy was the most corrupt and wealthy in Greece. All that remains of it is the temple of Neptune, seven venerable columns of which we see in the picture.

15 ¶ If I cause noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they spoil⁸ it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts:

16 Though these three men were in it,⁹ as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate.

17 ¶ Or ^{if} I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I cut off man and beast from it:

18 Though⁹ these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves.

19 ¶ Or^h if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast:

20 Though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall ^{but} deliver their own souls by their righteousness.

21 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God, How much more when¹ I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?

22 ¶ Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters; behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see their way and their doings: and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know that I have not done without cause² all that I have done in it, saith the Lord God.

CHAPTER XV.

3 By the unfitness of the vine branch for any work, 6 is showed the rejection of Jerusalem.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, own infamy and ruin. And it is a great mercy to be delivered from such as would impose on or tyrannize over our conscience.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 3-10. They have given their idols the highest place in their esteem and affections, and have set them up before them as objects of worship.—If any such consult me by a prophet, let them expect nothing but fearful denunciations of judgments, answerable to their abominable idolatries, and the horrid wickedness of their heart; answerable likewise to my glorious perfections, which I will magnify in making them the lasting monuments of just indignation.—Their false prophets will I give up to the delusions of their own heart, that I may fearfully destroy them and those who consult them. 21-23. Either the deep repentance and penitent acknowledgments of those who should be brought to Babylon, or their sinful obduracy and horrid vices, would convince these who had been formerly carried captive, that God had justly desolated their country, and make them glad that themselves had been so early carried captive.

Ver. 7. W'ha separateth himself from me. The israelites did not purpose to separate themselves from God—nay, they came with apparent thankfulness to receive instruction from his prophet—yet God pronounced them 'separate,' because he had said, 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me.' An awful lesson to those churches both in the East and the West that have combined pictures, images, relics, and tutelary saints with the worship of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and not less awful to those of the Reformed churches, who, rejecting all outward idolatry, have yet set up in their hearts the love of the world in any of its idolatrous forms, Col. 3: 5; 1 Jn. 2: 15, 16; 5: 21. C.—Answer him by myself. Not by a reply from the prophet, but by a judgment inflicted by my own hand.—Note. This is the case with all who are seekers after religious knowledge, but careless of religious practice, or living in the indulgence of some secret sin. Let them know assuredly 'their sin will find them out,' and their Judge who seeth in secret will punish them openly. C.

Ver. 9. The Lord have deceived that prophet. God does not influentially deceive the prophet into an error; but if, like Balaam, the prophet 'love the wages of unrighteousness,' then God adjudges him to be given over to the counsel of his own heart, Ro. 2: 28; and if, like Judas, he be a traitor to his country or his God, God adjudges him to be given up to Satanic possession, Lu. 22: 3-6, and so he becomes at once the dupe and the propagator of lies. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The very worst of men too often hypocritically put on specious appearances of religion. But it is at their peril to mock God, or attempt imposing upon him. His judgments will fall upon them answerably to what they really are in his sight. Their sin, shame, and misery are all owing to themselves. And of all sinners, the doom of hypocrites and deceitful preachers will be the most terrible. If we serve idols, our heart cannot fail to be estranged from God, and we must be for ever separated from him. If we

* The force of the metaphor lies in the fact, that the only value of the vine is its fruit. If it be fruitless, it is absolutely worthless. Israel was a vine. The Lord had planted it. It had proved entirely fruitless, and it was consequently without value. The wood of other trees may be employed for some good purpose, but nothing can be made of the vine, branch or stock. It is only fit for the fire. The application is this:—A people to whom God makes himself known, and who turn his grace into lasciviousness, sink far beneath those who have not known God. A heathen nation may have still much good and a future; degenerate Israel, that dwells at present at Jerusalem (this limitation is given by ver. 6, and by the nature of the thing), is utterly miserable, and must perish without remedy, He. 6. 4-8.—P.

3 Or, when I looked upon Jerusalem.
d This is one of the boldest and most striking figures in the whole book. It exhibits in a very touching manner the depth of Israel's sin and iniquity. Jerusalem is represented as a new-born female infant abandoned by its parents; but taken, tended, nurtured, and trained with even more than a parent's tenderness and care by Jehovah. On reaching maturity she becomes the bride of her preserver; and is liberally supplied with everything her heart could desire. But instead of returning love and devotion, she basely gives her affection to others, and becomes an adulteress.
The terrible judgments inflicted in Israel were thus most richly deserved.—P.

2 Son of man, What is the vine-tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. Is it meet¹ for any work?

5 Behold, when it was whole it was meet² for no work: how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned?

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.³

7 And⁴ I will set my face against them; they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; and ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them.

8 And⁵ I will make the land desolate, because they have committed a trespass,⁴ saith the Lord God.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Under the similitude of a wretched infant is showed the original state of Jerusalem. 6 God's extraordinary love towards her. 15 Her monstrous whoredoms. 35 Her grievous sin, 44 Her sin, equal to her mother's, and exceeding her sisters, Sodom and Samaria, calleth for judgments. 60 Mercy is promised her in the end.

AGAIN the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know¹ her abominations,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem, Thy birth² and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.

4 And³ as for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born, thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water to supple thee:³ thou wast not salted at all, nor swaddled at all.⁴

5 None⁵ eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee, to have compassion upon thee; but love to be flattered in our sins, God will justly give us up to such flattery. And dreadful at last shall be the punishment both of deceivers and deceived. The punishments of sin on earth are intended to prevent others from the commission of it. Nor does God ever take men into covenant with himself without purging them from their odious iniquities. National sins, carried on to an enormous height, cannot long fail to bring on national judgments. And if men who receive distinguished favours notoriously rebel, they may expect complicated judgments. God often averts general calamities for the sake of a few, who, in the general corruption, are singularly upright, pious, humble, and mighty in prayer. But if nations be singularly ripened for ruin, such can only obtain their own deliverance, or a blessing on their own share in the common calamity. Yet how pleasant it is in evil days to see sinners become monuments of mercy, and to see such benefited by his judgments and repenting of their sin! And it is well when God is not only justified, but glorified, in the manifested wisdom and goodness of his afflictive dispensations.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 2. Vine-tree. Israel is beautifully compared to a vine, spreading from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates, and covering the hills with its shadow, Ps. 80. 8; and our Lord takes it as an emblem of his body and his members, and thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

6 ¶ And when I passed by thee, and saw thee polluted⁵ in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live; yea, I said unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, Live.

7 I have caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast increased and waxen great, and thou art come to excellent ornaments: *thy*⁷ breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown, whereas thou wast naked and bare.

8 Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee, behold, thy time *was*⁸ the time of love; and I spread my skirt⁸ over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea, I swore unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord God, and thou becamest mine.

9 Then washed I thee with water: yea, I thoroughly washed away thy blood⁹ from thee, and I anointed thee with oil.

10 I clothed thee also with brodered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and I put bracelets upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy forehead,¹ and ear-rings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thine head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment *was*¹³ of fine linen, and Ver. 7. They rejected the word of the prophet, and fled from Jerusalem into Egypt to escape the Chaldeans, but in Egypt they met the destruction they had vainly hoped to avoid, Je. 42. 7-22. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In great condescension, God often explains his providences for the satisfaction of his servants and people. But none are more unprofitable than degenerate professors of the true religion. They who will not be useful for the glory of God and his grace, must be made fuel for the fire of his wrath; and must pass from one trouble into another till they be consumed. And the complete ruin of his implacable adversaries will manifest his excellencies, as well as the perfect happiness of his obedient friends.

CHAPTER XVI. The whole of this chapter emblematically represents the original sinfulness and misery, the gracious conversion, the fearful apostasy, severe corrections, and wise recovery of the gospel church, and of good men. Ver. 3-5. Abraham and Sarah were originally idolaters; and their posterity lived in Egypt most wickedly and wretchedly. 6-14. These figurative expressions represent all the favours which God heaped upon them in the days of Moses, Joshua, David, and Solomon; their deliverance from Egypt; preservation in the wilderness; the adoption of them by covenant into his family; giving them his oracles, ordinances, tabernacle, and temple; multiplication of their numbers; rendering them his only church, and a most wealthy, powerful, prosperous, and famous nation. 15-34. Proud of their privileges, they abandoned themselves to idolatry, and employed the wealth which God had given them in making and serving idols everywhere throughout their country. Their first-born children, who were sacred to God, they sacrificed to Molech. By costly presents they started the alliance of their heathen neighbours, Egyptians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, &c., and insatiably and impudently vied with them in their idolatries. 35-43. For their filthy idolatries, murder of their innocent infants, shameless lewdness, base ingratitude, and long-repeated provocations of God, the Chaldeans, and afterwards the Syro-Grecians and Romans, shall terribly destroy them, and lay desolate their country, and thus force them to cease from their wickedness. 44-59. In loathing God their covenant Husband, and murdering their children, they were as wicked as the ancient Canaanites. And however they had once condemned the ten tribes which dwelt on the north, and the Sodomites who dwelt on the south-east of Judea, they now exceeded them in the number of their idols, the enormities of their wickedness, and in sinning against more warnings, mercies, and judgments. 60-63. In pursuance of my covenant made with Abraham, and in the wilderness, I will forgive their iniquities, render them deeply penitent for their sins, and receive them back to their land; and not by the ceremonial dispensation, but by the preaching of the gospel, will I convert not only the ten tribes, but the very worst of the heathens, to Christ, when they repent and believe.

Ver. 3. An Amorite. Not by descent, but by disposition; 'Amorite' signifying a rebel, which Abraham as an idolater (Jos. 24. 2) originally was, and as every man by nature is, till graciously 'quickened together with Christ,' Ep. 2. 1-5. An Hittite—one that fears. A description which well applies to Sarah, and indicates her constitutional fear lest the promise of God would not be fulfilled—a fear arising from weakness of her faith, and which nothing but the grace of God could sustain against the misgivings of sense. C.

Ver. 10-14. These several things—brodered work, badgers' skin, linen, silk, &c.—are first to be considered as literal national such, no doubt they are so often either idolized or dedicated to pride and vanity, that they appear unfit emblems of the humble use of anything, is most unjust. Even the merely ornamental arts are not sinful in themselves, else God had not so employed them in the garment of the temple, nor adorned them as evidences of his paternal kindness. It is by considering them as such, that all the evils that to many seem inseparable from manufactures, and all the pride so often exhibited in ornamental dress, are to be counteracted and remedied. He that 'gives God thanks' may make what he will: he that 'gives God thanks' may wear what he will. But without thankfulness, the rags of the beggar and the purple of the king are alike liable to conduct into sin. C.

Ver. 27. Daughters of the Philistines. This phrase is employed to indicate the degraded condition of Israel, whose once manly character had become so debased by idolatry and licentiousness, that the daughters of their enemies not only ruled over them, but despised them: and though heathens, were ashamed of their faithless apostasy. C.

Ver. 34. 'Adultery (ver. 32) and whoredom' are used for apostasy and idolatry, both because they imply a breach of the covenant whereby God said to Israel, 'Thy Maker is thine husband'; and because apostasy and idolatry were, in reality, but other names for the crimes charged, impurity constituting an essential part of all idolatrous worship. C.

Ver. 39. In ancient times the exposure of captives in a state of nakedness is frequently recorded as one among the glaring horrors of slavery. That such cruelty should have prevailed among idolatrous heathens needs not be wondered at; but, alas! that it ever should have prevailed among Christians! Alas! that nations calling themselves Christian, and states boasting of their freedom, should still legalize and practise the same abomination! Lord, open their eyes that they may see, and their hearts that they may feel and repent! C.

Ver. 41. By the Babylonish captivity, Judah was completely cured of her idolatry; and all that has yet been discovered of the remnants of the ten tribes of Israel, seems to represent them as returned to their attachment to the law of Moses; so that one stumbling-block to their reception of pure Christianity is taken out of the way, and their perversion to the Romish and Greek communions—which both, alas! still multiply their images and worship at their shrines—seems to be rendered impossible. C.

Ver. 55. The name of 'Sodom' is applied to Jerusalem, Is. 1. 10, because of her resemblance to that wicked city in luxury, impurity, pride, oppression, and other abominations. But here Sodom is not identified but contrasted with Jerusalem. See also ver. 46. Scott and other eminent expositors understand 'Sodom' as representing the Gentiles; but this cannot well be, as they have already been largely converted, while Jerusalem remains in unbelief. Piscator and others render the passage, 'If I shall return, &c.; and understand it as saying, 'To restore thy captivity is not in my thoughts or purposes'; this, however, will not accord with the promise, ver. 60-63. Is not 'Sodom' rather to be taken literally as undoubtedly 'Samaritan' is taken for 'Israel', which is to be restored, and understood to mean Moab and Ammon, the descendants of Lot, who escaped out of Sodom when the Lord miraculously destroyed it, and 'set it forth as an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire?' Jude 7. See Je. 48. 47. 49. 6, where the restoration of these two nations is expressly promised. And though human history be unable to distinguish them among men, this ignorance cannot interfere with the knowledge and purposes of God. C.

TEMPLE OF JUPITER OLYMPUS, ATHENS—SEVEN HUNDRED YEARS IN PROCESS OF CONSTRUCTION. [Ezekiel, xvi:24, 25.]—"That thou hast also built unto thee an eminent place, and hast made thee an high place in every street. Thou hast built thy high place at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred." Ezekiel in this sixteenth chapter speaks of the extraordinary love of God toward Jerusalem, and of her deep degradation in departing from Him in search of the gods of wood and stone worshiped by surrounding nations. We give a picture of a ruined temple in Athens erected in honor of Jupiter, the most powerful of all the gods of the ancients. The greatest temple of Athens was that of Jupiter Olympus. It is at the southeast of the Acropolis, and near the right bank of the Ilissus. This temple was begun by Pisistratus, tyrant of Athens, who lived between B. C. 560 and 527, which was probably before the death of Ezekiel. This great edifice was seven hundred years in process of construction.

Ver. 22. In this righteousness that he hath done. How is this to be reconciled with what he has said in 13: 35; 17: 13; 18: 20; Ro. 3: 10, which all concur in denying that there is an righteousness: 'all that doeth good?' There is no contradiction. The sinner who has been caught a Saviour, Ac. 16: 30, has been 'justified freely by grace.' Ro. 3: 24, and is accounted righteous in the sight of God. But how can the answer be said to have 'done' this righteousness? Observe, in answer to the question, 'How can he be said to have done this?' Through faith in Jesus Christ, the sinner has done—actually done. Through faith in Jesus Christ, he is led by the Spirit, Ro. 8: 14, he hath penitently forsaken, his sin, 13: 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801,

CASTLE OF BABYLON. [Ezekiel, xvii:17.]—"Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons." This castle has nothing to do with Babylon the Great, for it is in Egypt, and is used to illustrate this verse simply because Pharaoh, king of Egypt, is represented as building forts and casting up mounts. This is a relic of the town which was built by Cambyses, B. C. 525. It is upon the site occupied by Old Cairo, where the epistle of Saint Peter was written. The fort itself belongs to the Roman period. Here was stationed one of the three legions of the Roman army. The masonry resembles very much that which we find in the palace of the Cæsars in Rome, and also in the temple of Minerva and the Roman Pantheon.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 A lamentation for the princes of Israel, under the parable of lions' whelps taken in a pit; 10 and for Jerusalem, under the parable of a wasted vine.

MOREOVER, take thou up "a lamentation for the princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother? "a lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And "she brought up one of her whelps: it became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 The^e nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains into the land of Egypt.

5 Now, when she saw that she had waited, and "her hope was lost, "then she took another of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

6 Andⁱ he went up and down among the lions, he became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men.

7 And he knew their "desolate palaces,² and he laid waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

8 Thenⁱ the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and "spread their net over him: he was taken in their pit.³

9 And they put him in ward in chains,⁴ and

CHAPTER XX.

1 God refuseth to be consulted by the elders of Israel. 5 He sheweth the story of their rebellions in Egypt, 13 in the wilderness, 27 and in the promised land. 33 He promiseth to gather them by the gospel. 45 Under the name of a forest he sheweth the destruction of Jerusalem.

AND it came to pass in the "seventh year,¹ in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that certain of "the elders of Israel came "to inquire of the Lord, and "sat before me.

How extensive is the amiable character of a truly good man! Cordial worship of the true God alone, chastity, honesty, equity, mercy, and withdrawing from fellowship in wickedness, jointly taken, are the necessary lines of it. And none can expect a glorious reward, unless by grace he persevere in his righteousness. But it is vain to seek righteousness as it were by the works of the law, which requires of us what only infinite power can effect. And it is infatuated to attempt holiness of life while our hearts are unrenewed by grace. But infinitely dangerous is it to rush upon death and damnation, notwithstanding the most earnest warnings, entreaties, and offers of a gracious God; or to indulge ourselves in neglect of the most difficult duties, when God hath graciously promised to work them in us.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1-9. The kingdom of Judah, and family of David, abandoned to violence and oppression, associated themselves with their heathen neighbours, their princes and nobles, and learned their ways. Jehoahaz, son of king Josiah, was scarcely enthroned by the nation when he became a tyrannical oppressor. But the Egyptians quickly dethroned him, and carried him off a prisoner. The Jews, finding that there was no hope of his restoration, or of freeing themselves from their dependence on the Egyptians, did, with their consent, make Jehoikim their king. Converting with his heathen neighbours, he soon became a most cruel oppressor, and rendered his kingdom everywhere miserable by his tyrannical rage. The Chaldeans and their allies quickly invaded their country, and by making him their prisoner, restrained his oppressive cruelties. Not long after, they transported to Babylon king Jehoiachin his son, and almost all the princes of Judah; and after eleven years more, Zedekiah; and laid the land desolate. 10-14. Once the Jewish state and family of David wonderfully flourished, had many valiant princes fit to sway the sceptre, and in glory and power could have vied with any of the neighbouring nations. But by the Egyptians, and especially by the Assyrians and Chaldeans from the east, the nation is wholly ruined, and the princes either murdered or carried captive; and now the poor remains of the nation are miserable captives in Babylon. And king Zedekiah, by his rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, hath occasioned the ruin of his family and nation; and never shall any of his family be honoured with an earthly sceptre.

Ver. 2. What is thy mother? The address seems to be to Jehoahaz, comp. ver. 4 with 2 Ki. 23. 34, whose mother was Habbai, 2 Ki. 23. 31. But by "mother Jerusalem is evidently to be understood, the nurse and nursery, as it were, of the degenerate prince. The allusion to a mother, however, records a fact often observed, and of deep import—that the good or evil of human character is generally to be traced to the early influence of maternal rather than paternal precept and example. C.

Ver. 5. She took another. Most probably Jehoikim, 2 Ki. 24. 1, 2. This verse renders it certain that by "mother," ver. 2, Jerusalem is to be understood; for the "mother" continues the same, and takes "another of her whelps;" whereas Zedekiah, and not Hamutal, was mother to Jehoiachin, 2 Ki. 23. 36. And if by "another" is to be understood Jehoiachin, comp. ver. 9 with 2 Ki. 24. 8-16, neither was his mother Hamutal, but Nehushta, 2 Ki. 24. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers have often mournful work put into their hands to declare the awful consequences of sin. It is just and common for those who terrified and enslaved others, to be affrighted and enslaved in their turn. And they who fill up the measure of their fathers' sins, lay up sorrows and lasting matter of lamentation for their children.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 4. Do not intercede for, but reprove, convince, and condemn them for their own and their fathers' abominable iniquities, which they imitate. 5, 6. I entered into promise with them by solemn oath, and manifested my power for their deliverance. 7. Renounce with abhorrence these abominable idols, to which ye with pleasure lift up your eyes in worshipping them. 9, 14, 22. Out of respect to my honour and glory I spared them, and proceeded to bestow further deliverances on them. 12. I gave them my Sabbaths and ordinances as a token of the covenant relation between me and them, and in order to promote their sanctification in heart and life. 11, 13, 21. No doubt a perfect fulfilment of the broken promise of works, if possible, would entitle a man to eternal life; but the immediate meaning of these verses is, that in a careful observance of God's laws, the Jews should enjoy prosperity in Canaan. 25, 26, 28. I permitted them to make for themselves wicked and destructive rules of superstitious and idolatrous worship, and even to provoke me to desolate their country, by the sacrificing of their own children to Molech.—For by their inventions in my worship, or in that of their idols, they have exceedingly disparaged my wisdom, sovereign authority, and sole deity. 29, 30. And do not ye to this day impudently keep up the superstitious and idolatrous worship of the high-places, notwithstanding all my remonstrances against it? And do not ye, elders, continue in the idolatries of your fathers, notwithstanding the judgments inflicted upon you for the same? 32-38. In vain ye hope to prosper by imitating the heathen idolatries; for I will manifest my power over you in inflicting upon you the most terrible judgments. And I will, in the most wrathful manner, gather you out of all the countries around your own land, and carry you to Chaldea, or some worse place, to be slaves to the most barbarous nations; and there will I execute my judgments upon you, to manifest my own perfections, and convince you of your wickedness.—And by severe corrections, and by distinguishing the real saints and obstinate transgressors in my punishments, I will re-acknowledge you as my peculiar people, and reduce you to blessed fellowship with and obedience to myself. 39-44. For a time I will indeed abandon you to your idolatries, and reject you from being my people; but after the captivity, and especially after the dispersion, I will bring you back to your own land, restore my worship among you, work wonders of mercy for your establishment and happiness, and render you deeply sensible of and penitent for your own and your fathers' iniquities. 46-48. Since Jerusalem is now filled with inhabitants, unfruitful in holiness or virtue, and is become a harbour for cruel oppressors, thieves, and murderers, I, by the Chaldeans, will burn it to a heap, and destroy all ranks of people in it without remedy.

WAITING PROCESSION IN THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH 'MAL—BEGINNING OF THE PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA. [Ezekiel, xx:7.]—"Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the Lord your God." The festival of the Mah 'Mal is a modern form of idolatry which seems always to have been characteristic of Egypt. This festival takes place at Cairo annually in April. It is one of the most gala days ever seen in this city. The particular incident which gave rise to this festival is connected with a beautiful woman who lived at the beginning of the reign of the Mamelukes. After the death of her husband she reigned eighty days as Sultana, and then married again. She gave her hand and her throne to her husband, and retired herself within the harem. She made a pilgrimage to Mecca in a magnificent litter borne between camels, and every year since a litter has been sent from Egypt to Mecca along with the pilgrims who make the journey to the holy Mohammedan city.

and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink-offerings.

29 Then I said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah⁷ unto this day.

30 ¶ Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day; and shall I be inquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be inquired of by you.

32 And that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all,⁸ that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

33 ¶ As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you;

34 And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out.

35 And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face.

36 Like⁴ as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God.

37 And I will cause you to pass under the rod,⁹ and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant:

38 And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith

In this verse three distinct Hebrew words are rendered by one English word, 'south.' I think they are proper names, each specifying a distinct district. The first word is Teman, which embraced that section of southern Palestine which lay along the borders of Moab and Edom. The second is Darom, which was the name of the region in the extreme south-western part of the country, including part of Philistia towards the south. The third is Negeb, a name exclusive of the south to the southern part of Judea. This prophesy, therefore, was directed not against all Palestine, but against that extreme southern portion of it which had as yet in a great measure escaped the ravages of the Assyrian and Babylonian armies.

the Lord God, Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me, but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols:

40 For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the first-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things.

41 I will accept you with your sweet savour, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen.

42 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers.

43 And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight, for all your evils that ye have committed.

44 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

45 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

46 Son of man, set thy face toward the south, and drop thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the south field;

47 And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

48 And all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be quenched.

49 Then said I, Ah Lord God! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?

buildings, or from the many shady and fruitful trees that gave the surrounding country the aspect of a forest. The prophet describes it as situated in the south, either because it lay, according to Hebrew geography, south of that part of Chaldea where he then resided; or, more probably, ver. 47, because it lay in the south of Canaan. See ch. 21. 4. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wretched is their stupidity, and presumptuous their heart, who, even under sufferings, ask God's leave to go on in sin! God's choice of us, and his manifestation of himself to us, are altogether of blessed grace; and to these, and to our own faith we owe our happiness. And it is from regard to God's own honour that corrupt churches, nations, families, and persons are so long borne with and preserved. Our disobedience to his laws originates in an inward bias towards the world and the flesh; and if once bad principles or customs be rooted, it is almost impossible to extirpate them. Though by disobedience to God's laws men plainly rush upon their own death and damnation; yet where parents are negligent in the education of children, children rarely make the laws of God the object of their earnest study. But when men profane God's ordinances and Sabbaths, he ordinarily gives them up to strong delusions in their principles and worship. And dreadful is the case of those to whom the slavery of their own lusts is allotted for their punishment; and when they will not take warning by all the admonitions against or mischievous consequences of sin, which have taken place before them.—But they who will not acknowledge God as their gracious saviour and righteous ruler, shall feel stand; and he will easily find both place and time to punish obstinate apostates, and to pluck them out from among his people, whom they have corrupted; nor will either sinful compliances or carnal projects avail to their safety. They who think to serve themselves by sin, do but make themselves slaves to it. And pre- tences to religion, in such a case, do but add profane- ness and hypocrisy to iniquity, and lose men the favour of the world, while they render them the detestation of God.—Even the believers must often be saved as by fire, their transgressions are so many, and their corruptions so strong. But afflictions must purge them; and, through all the changes on earth, they must be prepared for their comforts here, and heavenly inheritance hereafter. Their persons being once accepted in Christ, the acceptance of their services done in faith must follow. And O what baseness, malignity, and ingratitude do they discern in sin through the glass of his redeeming love, while they loathe themselves on account of it, and are more engaged to his service. But, alas! that sinners should need to be so repeatedly warned of their ruin; that God's fruitful vine should become an unfruitful forest, and his house a den of thieves! But if all ranks combine in wickedness, they must be jointly involved in punishment. They who are unwilling to profit by God's Word, ordinarily pick quarrels with it, or the manner of delivering it. But if people deride ministers, it is enough that they have a God to complain to.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Ezekiel prophesieth against Jerusalem with a sign of sighing. 8 The sharp and bright sword, 18 against Jerusalem, 25 against the kingdom, 28 and against the Ammonites.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, "set thy face toward Jerusalem, and "drop thy word toward "the holy places, and prophesy against the land of "Israel,"

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD, Behold "I am against thee, and will draw forth "my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my "sword go forth out of his sheath "against all flesh from the south to the north;

5 That "all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it shall not return any more.

6 Sigh, therefore, thou son of man, "with the breaking of thy loins; and with bitterness sigh before "their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For "the tidings, because it cometh: and "every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water: "behold, "it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord God.

8 ¶ Again, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith

* Or, 'The rod of my son contemneth every tree.' 'The rod of my son' is not the rod which my son uses, or which becometh to him; but the rod by which he is punished. Israel was God's son, and God's chastisement would visit all classes among the people, rulers (here symbolized by 'trees') as well as commoners.—P.

† This verse is very obscure. The meaning may perhaps be:—'Surely it (the rod of chastisement; i.e. the Babylonian power) is tried; and what if indeed the rod despoise (if Nebuchadnezzar despoise the Jewish power, and the resistance offered by it to his arms—what then would the LORD; Say, 'A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter: it is furbished that it may glitter: 'should we then make mirth? 'it "contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree."

11 And "he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled: the sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer.

12 Cry* and howl, son of man; for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel: "terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people: "smite* therefore upon thy thigh.

13 Because⁷ it is "a trial, and what if the sword contemn⁸ even the rod? it shall be no more, saith the Lord God.⁸

14 Thou, therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite thine hands together,⁹ and "let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth "into their privy chambers.¹

15 I have set the point² of the sword "against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied. Ah, it is made bright, it is wrapped³ up for the slaughter.

16 "Go⁴ thee one way or other, either on the right hand, or on the left,⁵ whithersoever thy face is set.

17 I^h will also smite mine hands together, and "I will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 10-13. The king and princes shall be no more able to resist or avoid the Chaldean sword than the meanest of the common people. That terrible calamity will so disgrace the royal power of David's family, that none of them shall ever afterwards sway an earthly sceptre; and when the Chaldeans have executed my judgments on others, they themselves shall be destroyed. 19. Mark on a tile, or on the ground, two ways, one leading from Babylon to Jerusalem, and the other leading to Rabbath, the capital of the Ammonites; and pitch on a proper place for Nebuchadnezzar to consult which way he should go first. 23. The Jews, who have perfidiously violated their oath of subjection to Nebuchadnezzar, will contemn and deride his divinations: but he will quickly punish them for their treacheries, by murdering or taking them captives. 25-27. Thou wicked Zedekiah, who hast profanely broken thine oath to Nebuchadnezzar, shalt now be punished, and an end put to thy idolatry, perfidy, and other abominations, in thy destruction. Thou shalt be disgracefully dethroned, and the whole nation and royal family turned upside down; Jehoiakim, now in prison, shall be exalted, and thou shalt be debased. Dreadfully shall the nation be overturned by the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, and Romans, &c. Nor shall it ever attain its wonted lustre and dignity, or any of the family of David wear a sceptre, till Christ take his spiritual kingdom in the gospel church, nay, in the millennium. 29. Your diviners falsely promise you safety and happiness, and that you shall tread down the Jews, whose wickedness hath made them fully ripe for punishment: but they will really bring you into the same miserable condition with these wicked Jews.

Ver. 3. The righteous and the wicked may die together. To the righteous, calamity being a purification, 2 Co. 4. 16-18, and death a deliverance; while to the wicked, calamity is a punishment, and death a curse, Ro. 6. 21, 23. C.

Ver. 6. With the breaking of thy loins. So as to make the prophet bow his head and bend his loins, as one overwhelmed with sorrow of heart. Gill interprets it of sighing till the girdle of his loins should burst; but such an effect seems scarcely possible by any muscular exertion, unless the girdle were so frail as to render its disrapture but little emblematic of the intensity of the prophet's distress. C.

Ver. 10. My son the king, of whom Jerusalem was called mother, ch. 19. 2. The rod—the sceptre, ch. 19. 11. As every tree—holdeth the kingly sceptre in no more respect than the branch of a tree by the way-side. C.

Ver. 13. For it (the rod—sceptre) is tried, and what if it despoise the sceptre? This (the rod—sceptre) shall not remain, saith Jehovah' (Boothroyd). And though 'the sceptre'—the power of self-government—shall not depart from Judah—from the tribe—till Shiloh come, yet no king of David's line shall reign in Jerusalem 'till he shall come whose right it is,' 27. C.

Ver. 14. Smite thine hands together. By some it has been interpreted as a sign of encouragement to the Chaldeans; and certainly clapping the hands is a mode of call common in the East. Others have regarded it as a form of oath, intimating the certainty of the judgment. But Scripture is rather to be interpreted by comparison with Scripture, than by any reference to oriental manners or customs; and viewed in this light, the action prescribed is either a form of confirmation or oath, see ver. 17; ch. 22. 13, or else a token of the prophet's grief at the judgment he was commanded to foretell. See ch. 6. 11. C.

Ver. 19. Appoint thee two ways. Describe or draw a plan or map, as in ch. 4. 1, of two roads, one for the invasion of Judah, the other for the invasion of Ammon, ver. 20. C.

Ver. 21. He made his arrows. 'Mingled his arrows' (Boothroyd). A heathenish mode of divination in war, which consisted in writing the name of each city to be assailed upon an arrow, shaking the whole in a quiver, and deciding upon priority of attack by the order of drawing.—He looked in the liver. The heathen priests pretended to foretell future events by examining the entrails of beasts slain in sacrifice—and particularly by the liver—and by disease, wounds, the form of the lobes, &c., they augured good or evil to the person inquiring. Such are specimens of the manner in which Satan has continued to deceive, and succeeded in persuading men to follow a dark and baseless superstition, while rejecting the sunlight evidence of divine revelation. C.

Ver. 23. As a false divination. The Jews will despise this mode of divination; and because they know the mode to be a mere pretence, will conclude the prediction to be false.—Note. The success of such divinations is no more evidence of their sun world rise. That rising is foretold by experience anticipating the uniform course of nature. Even so—they can never err that prophesy evil against evil men: it is the uniform course of Providence. C.

Ver. 26. This shall not be the same. This man shall no longer wear the crown; or this crown shall no longer be a badge of royalty, ver. 27. C.

Ver. 27. Until he come, &c. Until Messiah come, whose right the government is, by creation, as God; by descent, as man, Ja. 1. 3; Ac. 2. 30. C.

Ver. 29. To bring thee—Rabbath, the capital of the Ammonites, ver. 20; ch. 25. 2-6. The slain—the Jews, whom, being slain, the Ammonites would be incited to plunder. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need that ministers should use great plainness of speech in dealing with souls; should observe God's hand in his public judgments, in which even the godly share with the wicked; and should deny themselves, and be affected with their messages, in order to edify others. Alas! infinite is their danger who have God against them. 'Nothing can defend them from his righteous and terrible judgments. And while wicked men abound everywhere, his wrath shall follow without restraint. Nor is it proper to be jovial, but penitent, when his judgments are abroad in the earth, in order to vindicate his perfections. But it is matter of comfort to saints that all judgments are managed by Christ, the Son of God, and their friend and Saviour: and that to them they are but corrective trials, not blows aimed for their destruction.—God can easily force the most proud and crafty plotters on earth to court his direction in their concerns, and lead them, even by events apparently fortuitous, to his proper work. None are more ready to despise God's warnings than perfidious and profane swearers. And in none do these sins look worse than in magistrates and ministers who profess the true religion. But if men despise the warnings and offers of God's grace, they shall be seized by his judgment and none are so high but God can debase them, nor any so low but he can exalt them. Pride goes before destruction; and before honour is humility. At what pains and cost do men destroy one another! But if all overturnings in the world make way for Christ, the rightful Sovereign of nations and churches, and his CUSTOMS PIER, SMYRNA. [Ezekiel, xxii:15, 16.]—"And I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and will consume thy filthiness out of thee. And thou shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord." This prophecy has been literally fulfilled. The Jews have been scattered throughout the Gentile nations of the world, and they have learned as no other nation has the great truth that there is one God. It is said to be very difficult to find a Jew who is not a believer in God.

We give a picture here of the Customs Pier in Smyrna because this is one of the great Jewish cities in Asia Minor. Many of the leading commercial establishments in this city belong to Jews. Here they live and hold their inheritance in sight of the heathen Turks by whom they are surrounded. In Smyrna the Jews have lived from remote times to the present. There are many great commercial houses managed by them in this city to-day.

18 ¶ The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land; and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced.

21 For^a the king of Babylon stood at the parting^b of the way, at the head of the two ways,^c to use divination: he made his arrows bright,^d he consulted with images,^e he looked in the liver.

22 At his right hand^f was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint captains,^g to open the mouth in the slaughter, to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

23 And it shall be unto them^h as a false divination in their sight, to them that have sworn oaths:ⁱ but he^j will call to remembrance the iniquity,^k that they may be taken.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.^l

25 ¶ And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel,^m whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, 26 Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.

27 I will overturn, overturn, overturn it;ⁿ and it shall be no more, until he^o come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

28 ¶ And thou, son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord God concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach;^p even say thou, The sword, the sword is drawn; for the slaughter it is furnished, to consume because of the glittering;

There can be little doubt that the point indicated was Rabbath. There we know he established his headquarters. The route for an army from Babylon to Palestine could only cross the desert by Palmira, or at a point farther north. Rabbath is on the line of march, and being situated in the midst of a fertile plain on the bank of the Orontes, no better position could be selected for the encampment of a large army. From Rabbath three roads branch to the southwards—one runs along the eastern base of Anti-Lebanon, by Damascus and Busan, direct to Rabbath-annon; another runs down the valley of the Euphrates to Central Palestine and Jerusalem; the third passes the northern end of Lebanon, enters Phoenicia, and follows the coast to Philistia and Egypt. Nebuchadnezzar was encamped at Rabbath when the Jewish king and princes were brought to him after the capture of Jerusalem.—P.

¹elder,⁵ and ⁶Aholibah⁷ her sister; and they were mine,⁸ and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names, Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem Aholibah.

5 And Aholah ⁹played the harlot, when she was mine;⁸ and she ¹⁰doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians ¹¹her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, ¹²horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she committed her whoredoms with¹³ them, with all them ¹⁴that were the chosen men of Assyria,¹ and with all on whom she doted: with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her ¹⁵whoredoms brought from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore ¹⁶I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

10 These discovered her nakedness;² they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword; and she became ¹⁷famous⁴ among women; for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw ¹⁸this, she was ¹⁹more corrupt in her inordinate love than⁵ she, and in her whoredoms more than her sister in ²⁰her whoredoms.⁶

12 She doted upon the ²¹Assyrians ²²her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, ²³that they²⁴ took both one way;

14 And ²⁵that ²⁶she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men pourtrayed upon the wall,⁷ the ²⁷images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion,

15 Girded⁸ with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire⁹ upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity,

16 And, as soon as she ³⁰saw them with her eyes,⁹ she doted upon them, and ³¹sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.¹

17 And the Babylonians² came to her into the bed of love,³ and they defiled her with their whoredom; and she was polluted with them, and her mind was alienated⁴ from them.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then my mind ³²was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she ³³multiplied her whoredoms, ³⁴in

⁴ Recent excavations among the ruins of palaces and temples of Assyria and Babylonia illustrate these words. The halls and courts of the great cities of those kingdoms were covered with figures of their gods and heroes, mostly coloured. It is probable that some of these sculptures had been imported into Judea; or, perhaps, some Jews who visited Babylon saw them there, and brought back such glowing descriptions, that the idolatrous people of Jerusalem were induced to imitate them, even in the chambers connected with the temple.—P.

calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

20 For she ³⁵doted upon their ³⁶paramours, whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus ³⁷thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 ¶ Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ³⁸I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom ³⁹thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on ⁴⁰every side;

23 The^c Babylonians and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa,⁷ and all the Assyrians with them: all of them ⁴¹desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee ⁴²with chariots,⁸ waggons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, ⁴³which shall set against thee buckler, and shield, and helmet, round about: and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their ⁴⁴judgments.

26 They shall also ⁴⁸strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy fair jewels.³

27 Thus ⁴⁹will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ⁵⁰I will deliver thee into the hand of ⁵¹them whom thou hatest, into the hand of ⁵²them from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And^m they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare; and the ⁵³nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be ⁵⁴discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these ⁵⁵things unto thee, ⁵⁶because thou hast gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou^a hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give ⁵⁷her cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord God, ⁵⁸Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large: ⁵⁹thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

our apostasy from him. If men will strengthen their corruptions, and bid defiance to repentance, by long-continued customs of sinning, or by reflecting on their former wickedness with pleasure and pride, and will alienate their affections from God, let them not wonder if he mark his detestation of them in the most fearful calamities. If we follow the pattern of punished transgressors, we must expect to share with them in their tremendous plagues. And if we indulge ourselves in to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great.

10 Heap^d on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and "spice it well, and let the bones be burned.

11 Then "set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and "that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 She^a hath wearied herself^s with² lies, and her^a great scum went not forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

13 In^c thy filthiness is lewdness: "because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou^c shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, "till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 I^b the LORD have spoken it; it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither^d will I spare, neither will I repent: "according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 16 Son of man, behold, "I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes⁶ with a stroke:⁷ yet¹ neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears run⁸ down.

17 Forbear to cry,⁹ make no mourning for the dead, "bind the tire of thine head upon thee,¹ and put "on thy shoes² upon thy feet, and cover^p not thy³ lips,⁴ and eat not the bread of men.⁵

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning; and at "even my wife "died: and I did in the morning "as I was commanded.

19 ¶ And the people said unto me, "Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

25 The signs of deepest sorrow and heaviness in the East are: shrill cries; removing the turban or head-dress and sprinkling ashes on the head; putting off the shoes; covering the mouth; and fasting. The prophet was forbidden to manifest any of these signs of mourning. He was in this the type of Israel, who, because they were wholly absorbed in their own misery, would take no notice of the destruction of the temple.—P.

8 This remarkable prophecy has been literally fulfilled. Rabbah has been desolate for centuries. The Arabs of the desert—the Beni Keden ("men of the east" of ver. 4) have held possession of it for ages. They do not live in it, they live in tents; but they stable their camels and herds in it during the noonday heat and the cold nights. Its temples, palaces, theatres, tombs, are all alike desolate, and defiled by the rocks. Jackals prow round it; vultures hover over it; but no human being seeks a home within it. Few look on this scene of almost unparalleled desolation without calling to mind the language of this verse.—P.

23 And your tires shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet: ye shall not mourn nor weep: but ye shall "pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another.

24 Thus Ezekiel is unto you "a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do; and "when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

25 ¶ Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them their "strength, the "joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and that whereupon they set their "minds, "their sons and their daughters, 26 That "he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?

27 In that day "shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb: and thou shalt be "a sign unto them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 God's vengeance, for their declared malevolence against the Jews, upon the Ammonites; 8 upon Moab and Seir; 12 upon Edom; 15 and upon the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, "set thy face "against the Ammonites, and prophesy against them;

3 And say unto the Ammonites, Hear the word of the Lord God; Thus saith the Lord God; "Because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it was profaned: and against the land of Israel, when it was desolate; and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity;

4 Behold, therefore, I will deliver thee to the men¹ of the east for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee: they shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk.²

5 And I will make "Rabbah "a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching-place for flocks; and "ye shall know that I am the LORD.³

6 For thus saith the Lord God, "Because thou hast clapped thine hands,⁴ and stamped with the feet,⁵ and "rejoiced in heart⁶ with all thy despite against the land of Israel;

7 Behold, therefore, I "will stretch out mine ties; no man repenting of his own sins, and returning in contrition to the Lord. C.

Ver. 27. No more dumb. From this date till the taking of Jerusalem, about eighteen months after, the prophet was either altogether dumb, or at least refrained from all public preaching to the people. C.

REFLECTIONS.—All times, places, and events are under the immediate inspection of God; and it is useful to keep an exact account of his remarkable providences. But men only weary and ruin themselves by following after lying vanities. And inviolable are the threatenings, and tremendous the judgments, of God against obstinate sinners. Daring sinners must be made a spectacle to angels and men. They who harden themselves against God's means for their conversion must perish without remedy; and they who obstinately indulge their lusts must at last be abandoned to them. Agreeable marriage connections are very delightful; but our dearest created comforts are always on the wing to depart from us; and if they be taken from us, let us eye the hand of God and hear his language therein; and by faith let us take himself and his fulness to supply their room. Such submission will exceedingly sweeten our wormwood and gall. The removal of other men's comforts ought to make us think of parting with our own.—But if men hate the power of godliness, it is just that God should strip them of their beloved forms of it, and make them to mourn for their sufferings who never would mourn for their sins; yea, that he should make hardened sinners to feel the truths which they slighted when preached to them. But dreadful is the situation when miseries are so heavy as to stupify and overwhelm the mind. And still more so when men, under terrible calamities, pine away in their sin.

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 4. Men of the east. The Chaldeans or Arabians: most probably the latter, to whom the country might be allotted for their military services in Nebuchadnezzar's army.—Fataces. The word signifies "dwellings, tents, pens for sheep, or inclosures for cattle." The latter sense seems here preferable to Fataces. C.

Ver. 7. I will stretch thee. This whole country, once so cultivated, so productive, so populous and prosperous, is now converted into a complete desert. See burckhardt's Syria. C.

Ver. 8. Behold, the house of Judah, &c. That is—See how the Jews, notwithstanding their religious profession, and their boast of divine protection, are suffering the calamities common to the heathen nations. Moab and Seir seem, in this reflection, to have hand upon thee, and ¹will deliver thee for a spoil⁷ to the heathen; and I will cut thee off from the people, and I will cause thee to perish out of the countries: I will destroy thee; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.⁸

8 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, "Because that Moab and ⁹Seir do say, Behold, the house of Judah ¹⁰is like unto all the heathen;

9 Therefore, behold, I will open the side of Moab⁹ from the cities, from his cities which are on his frontiers, the glory of the country, Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim, 10 Unto¹⁰ the men of the east ¹¹with the Ammonites,² and will give them in possession, that the Ammonites may not be remembered among the nations.

11 And¹¹ I will execute judgments upon Moab; and they ¹²shall know that I am the LORD.

12 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah³ by taking vengeance,⁴ and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them;

13 Therefore⁴ thus saith the Lord God, I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it: and I will make it desolate from Teman; and they of Dedan shall fall by the sword.⁵

14 And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by⁶ the hand of my people⁶ Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger, and according to my fury; and they ⁷shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, Because the Philistines ⁸have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart, to destroy it for the old hatred;⁷

16 Therefore, thus saith the Lord God; ⁹Behold, I will stretch out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the ¹⁰Cherethims, and destroy the remnant of the ¹¹sea-coast.⁹

17 And I will execute great vengeance¹ upon them with furious rebukes; and ²they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall lay my vengeance upon them.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Tyrus, for insulting over the distress of Jerusalem, is threatened with destruction. 7 The power of Nebuchadnezzar against her. 15 The mourning and astonishment of the princes of the sea at her fall.

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year,¹ in² the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, because that ¹Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem,² Aha,^c she is broken that was the ³gates of the people;³ she^e is turned unto me;⁴ I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ⁵Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause ⁶many nations to come up against thee, as the ⁷sea causeth his waves to come up.

4 And they ⁸shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: ⁹I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock.

5 It¹ shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God; and ²it shall become a spoil to the nations.

6 And her daughters⁵ which are in the ⁶field shall be slain by the sword; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

7 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus ⁸Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, a ⁹king of kings, from the north, ¹⁰with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people.

8 He¹ shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field; and ²he shall make a fort against thee, and cast a mount⁷ against thee, and lift up the buckler⁸ against thee.

9 And he shall set engines of war against thy walls, and with his axes⁹ he shall break down thy towers.

10 By¹ reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee: thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.¹

11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets:² he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall ³go down to the ground.

12 And ⁴they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise, and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy thy pleasant houses:³ and they shall lay thy stones,⁴ and thy timber, and thy dust, in the midst of the water.⁵

13 And¹ I will cause the noise of thy songs

Ver. 5. Mat. 6. 19. Ti. 6. 17. Pr. 11. 4. 24. Re. 18. 11-13. Zec. 9. 3. 4. Is. 24. 8, 9; 14. 11. Je. 7. 34; 16. 9; 25. 10. Ho. 2. 11. Re. 18. 22, 23, with ch. 28. 13. Is. 23. 7, 16.

credit to themselves for a purer form of religion; but, no matter what its form may have been, being void of 'brotherly kindness and charity,' it was nothing, 1 Co. 13. 2. C.

Ver. 15. National antipathies have disfigured the whole history of man, and are the natural productions of 'the carnal mind,' which, being 'enmity against God,' cannot become 'good-will to men' until it is renewed by the Holy Spirit. That Christian nations, that Christian churches, that Christian families, should tolerate or cherish such feelings, is deeply to be deplored. O! let believers forbear one another, and pray that they may be preserved from groundless divisions, and enabled to 'keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—In all ages the seed of the serpent have hated the people of God, or those who had their appearance. And especially in their distress, what unnatural and barbarous instances have they given thereof, as if they imagined the saints had lost their ALL when they lost their outward prosperity! It is indeed mournful when professed saints, by their apostasy, give occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme. But if God severely correct his own people, he will severely punish their enemies. And they who boasted of any other defence but his promise, power, and providence, shall terribly punish the guilty; and perhaps by the hand of those whom they had injured.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 5. A place for the spreading of nets. The whole village of Tyre consists of fifty to sixty poor families, who live on the produce of their little ground and a trifling fishery' (see Volney's Travels).—What an instructive lesson to the believer, to behold an avowed infidel thus compelled by stubborn facts to bow to the spirit of prophecy. (See also Bruce's and Shaw's Travels.) C.

Ver. 14. Thou shalt be built no more. There has arisen here a difficulty in the minds of some expositors; for it is historically notorious that insular Tyre was rebuilt after its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, and recovered much, if not the whole, of its former magnificence. The solution of the difficulty lies in the fact, that the continental city never was rebuilt, but sunk into a mere village—a state of obscurity, dependence, and poverty, from which it has never emerged. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God highly resents our taking pleasure in the death or decay of others for the sake of our own carnal advantage. And there is little reason to to cease; and the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.

14 And¹ I will make thee like the top of a rock; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more:⁶ for I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus, Shall not the isles shake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee?

16 Then all the princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered garments: they shall clothe themselves with trembling;⁷ they shall sit upon the ground, and shall tremble at every moment, and be astonished at thee.

17 And they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and say to thee, How art thou destroyed that wast inhabited of seafaring men,⁸ the renowned city, which wast strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!

18 Now shall the isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure.⁹

19 For thus saith the Lord God, When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee;²

20 When I shall bring thee down with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in places desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory in the land of the living;⁴

21 I will make thee a terror,⁵ and thou shalt be no more: though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again, saith the Lord God.⁶

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The rich and large commerce of Tyrus. 26 Her great and irrecoverable fall.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, take up a lamentation for Tyrus;

3 And say unto Tyrus, O thou that art situate at the entry of the sea,¹ which art a merchant of the people for many isles, Thus saith the Lord God, O Tyrus, thou hast said, I am of perfect² beauty.

¹ ver. 5-24. Is. 23. 2, 3, 8, 11. Ec. 18. 7. ² Heb. perfect of, ver. 4, 10, 11; ch. 28. 2.

boast of or trust in created enjoyments, when the most wealthy and powerful cities may quickly be so ruined, as that the place where they stood shall not be known. So weak is human strength, so fading human greatness, and so tottering the rocky foundations of cities! Alas, the dreadful effects of sin, especially in hell! And how just is it that they who, priding themselves in their own strength, took pleasure to affright their inferiors, by the display of it, should likewise affright and astonish them, by the suddenness or strangeness of their punishments! It is common for worldly men to lament the death of great rather than of good men. And marvelously will God connect his own glory, and the restoration of his people, with the ruinous destruction of his and their enemies.

OIL MILL, DAMASCUS—IN THE TIME OF EZEKIEL DAMASCUS WAS THE MERCHANT OF TYRE, AND TYRE WAS THE SEAPORT TOWN OF DAMASCUS. [Ezekiel, xxvii:18.]—"Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of thy making, for the multitude of all riches; in the wine of Helbon, and white wool." Damascus has always been a very important commercial city. On the great highway between the Mediterranean and the nations of the east it has always been an influential trade point. At the time Ezekiel wrote this twenty-seventh chapter Tyre was the seaport town of Damascus as Beyrout is to-day. In the above picture we have an oil mill photographed by our artist. The oil produced in this mill is olive oil. The olive furnishes oil for nearly all the cooking which is done in the east as well as furnishes lights. There is an old saying that, "When the oil fails the lamp in the dwelling of the poor expires." The olive berries begin to ripen early in the autumn. They are allowed to remain on the trees sometimes, though guarded.

19 Dan⁵ also and Javan⁶ going to and fro,⁷ occupied in thy fairs; bright iron,⁸ cassia, and salamus, were in thy market.

20 Dedan⁹ was thy merchant in precious clothes¹⁰ for chariots.

21 Arabia,¹¹ and all the princes of Kedar, they occupied with thee¹² in lambs, and rams, and goats; in these were they thy merchants.

22 The merchants of Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and gold.

23 Haran,¹ and Canneh, and Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Ashur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants.

24 These were thy merchants in all sorts of things,² in blue clothes,³ and brodered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar,⁴ among thy merchandise.

25 The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market; and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas.

26 Thy rowers⁵ have brought thee into great waters: the east wind hath broken thee in the midst⁷ of the seas.

27 Thy riches, and thy fairs, thy merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots, thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, and in⁸ all thy company which is in the midst of thee, shall fall into the midst⁹ of the seas in the day of thy ruin.

28 The suburbs¹ shall shake at the sound of the cry of thy pilots.

29 And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the sea,² shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land;

30 And shall cause their voice to be heard well as insular Tyre to be included in the general description; a fact which it is important to notice, as it is necessary to remove an apparent contradiction between the prophecy and history. C.

Ver. 15. Dedan. Dedan was the son of Raamah, Ge. 10. 7; and the city after his name, situated on the Persian Gulf, is still called Dedan.—Many isles, &c. Many isles were the markets of thy manufactures: they returned thee for thy price, horns, ivory, and ebony. Boothroyd. This enumeration evidently points to the trade of the coasts of Africa and the East Indies. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great power and wealth rarely fail to have great pride for their companion. How strangely God by trade connects the different nations of the world! And yet, the more extensive trade is, the necessities and dependence of the traders are but the more manifested. Many articles in trade might be easily dispensed with: and yet God's wisdom remarkably appears in rendering that which is but trifling in itself the means of subsistence to multitudes. But the most pompous and powerful nations and cities are certainly and awfully brought down at last. And convenient situations, advantageous harbours, magnificent and elegant structures, numerous and well-manned fleets, choice troops and armour, universal traffic, and wide-spread fame, do but concur to aggravate their misery. But when even their own governors are guiding them to ruin, most sure and wretched is the downfall. And it is very hard for those who have been wallowing in pleasure, and sleeping in carnal security, to endure remarkable losses, disappointments, and trouble.

CHAPTER XXVIII. Ver. 1-19. You think yourself every way accomplished in body and mind, in dignity and wealth—as happy as ever Adam was in Paradise; having your crown studded, and your garments glittering with precious stones; and regaled, chiefly on your coronation day, with the finest music of instruments, contrived with exquisite art.—You think yourself a very angel, endowed with power to protect your people. You walk up and down as a god, or as the Jewish high-priest, all surrounded with precious stones glittering like fire. And till you discovered your violence, pride, fraud, and joy at the miseries of the Jews, you appeared endowed with all excellencies and prerogatives.—But now, for these thine iniquities, I will overturn thy dignity, eject thee from thy throne and grandeur, render thee a public example of my wrath, and an object of derision to the princes around; a fire, kindled by thine own imprudence and injustice, shall occasion thy terrible ruin. 22-25. God is sanctified in Zidon, by manifesting his justice, holiness, and power in his judgments; but sanctified in the Jews, by manifestations of his mercy, and making

² The whole beauty and force of this magnificent description of Tyre consists in this, that the city commanded the best art and labour of every country, and the stately products of every country found room and sale in her markets. Damascus was famed for rich brocades, ornaments of gold and silver, and arms; it was the merchant (the supplier) of Tyre in the multitude of wares, and of all riches. Its trade with the shepherd Bedaw makes it, a wool depot, and 'white wool' was supplied in the markets of Tyre. The 'wine of Helbon' was another of its exports. The remains of Helbon still exist in a rich valley of the same name within a few miles of the city. The valley is to this day celebrated for the luxuriance of its vineyards and the choice quality of its grapes; and a good wine is manufactured in a neighbouring convent.—C.

against thee,³ and shall cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads, they shall wallow themselves in the ashes.

31 And they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing.

32 And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and lament over thee, saying, What city is like Tyre, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea?

33 When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of thy merchandise.

34 In the time when thou shalt be broken by the seas in the depths of the waters,⁵ thy merchandise, and all thy company in the midst of thee, shall fall.

35 All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance.

36 The merchants among the people shall hiss at thee; thou shalt be a terror,⁶ and never shalt be any more.⁸

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 God's judgment upon the prince of Tyrus for his impious pride. 11 A lamentation of his great glory corrupted and fallen by sin. 20 The judgment of Zidon. 24 The restoration of Israel.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyre, Thus saith the Lord God, 'Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, in the midst² of the seas; yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart³ as the heart of God:

3 Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee:

4 With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures:

them to own him for a holy and just God in their holy conversation.

Ver. 2. I am a god. Many of the ancient heathen kings affected to be the descendants of the gods. Alexander of Macedonia would be held as the son of Jupiter, and murdered his friend because he would not worship him. The grand Lama of Tibet is worshipped as God. And, alas! the church of the meek and lowly Jesus still furnishes one 'who sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God,' 2 Th. 2. 4, and who has not shut his ears to the voice of blasphemy calling him Numen in terris—'God upon the earth.' C.

Ver. 3. Wiser than Daniel—in thine own conceit. Daniel was now famed throughout Asia for his divine knowledge, political skill, and management of the empire. C.

Ver. 13. Thou hast been in Eden. Trafficking in the land of Eden, in which, according to Moses, Ge. 2. 12, was 'gold and the onyx-stone,' where natural objects still retained their original loveliness, and 'man alone was vile.' C.

Ver. 14. Anointed cherub. This is not, as some have imagined, an irony—a figure ill suited to a solemn rebuke, administered by the Spirit of God. The meaning is to be ascertained from ver. 2, and the words to be supplied are, 'Thou hast said, I am the anointed cherub, appointed to guard the mercantile entrance of the land, as the cherub guarded the tree of life: that is, in modern language, to monopolize the trade; a scheme after which foolish nations are still more or less labouring, though good-will and justice declare it should never be attempted, and all experience proves it can never succeed.—Stones of fire. 'Glittering stars' (Tertullian). Perhaps the sparkling frelike gems on the breast-plate of the high-priest; intimating early education in the holy principles of the true religion, to which the Tyrians must have been introduced in the days of David and Solomon. C.

5 By thy great wisdom,⁴ and by thy traffic, hast thou increased thy riches, and ^athine heart is lifted up ^bbecause of thy riches.⁵

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because thou hast ^aset thine heart as the heart of God;

7 Behold, therefore, I will bring ^astrangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations: and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy ^bbrightness.

8 They¹ shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

9 Wilt thou ^ayet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God?⁶ but thou shalt be a man, and no god, in the hand of him that slayeth⁷ thee.

10 Thou shalt die ^athe deaths of the uncircumcised by the ^bhand of strangers: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

11 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Son of man, ^atake up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord God, Thou ^asealest up⁸ the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.⁹

13 Thou hast been in ^aEden the garden of God;¹ every ^aprecious stone was thy covering, the sardius,² topaz, and the diamond, the beryl,³ the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the emerald,⁴ and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship^a of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created.

14 Thou art the ^aanointed cherub that covereth; and ^aI have set thee so: thou wast ^aupon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the ^astones of fire.

15 Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till ^ainiquity was found in thee.

16 By the ^amultitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned: therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the ^amountain of God: and I

Ver. 15. Wast perfect. No irony, as some imagine, but a fact: intimating that the Tyrians had commenced their career of commercial prosperity in the fear of God, and had fallen from religion through the influence of pride, covetousness, and injustice. See ver. 16, 17. A charge that, alas! still continues to be exemplified in the history of individuals, families, cities, and nations, whose worldly prosperity is too often found to correspond with their moral deterioration and forgetfulness of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary, and yet very hard, to make proud men know themselves to be but men—but poor, dependent, dying worms. And very rarely they who are intelligent, wealthy, and dignified are remarkably humble. Yea, seldom do men carry on very extensive trades without oppressing and injuring their neighbours. But they who pretend to be God's rivals, are at last forced to quit their claims, and find themselves but men, weak and sinful. God can easily cast the most sinful out of their dignified stations, and devour them with a fire kindled by their own iniquity. Let Britain think and tremble!—How the cup of his justice goes round from one nation to another! But the ruin of his people's enemies remarkably makes way for their restoration and happiness. Even when he corrects them, he takes the greatest care that they may not seem vile to those around; and is highly provoked with those that despise them, and help forward their affliction.

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 4-7. By my providence thou shalt march out of thy country against the Cyrenians, on the west of Egypt, and lead along with thee multitudes of thy subjects. But the terrible ruin of this thine army shall provoke the remainder to rebel, and never cease their war against thee till thou and thy party be utterly ruined. And the Egyptians shall see themselves punished for encouraging the Jews to rebel against the Chaldeans to their own hurt. 16. They shall no more appear proper assistants to the Jews, nor tempt them to recommit their former wickedness, in distrusting God's promises and assistance, or in trusting to heathen helpers, and copying after their idolatries.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 The judgment upon Pharaoh for his treachery to Israel. 8 The desolation of Egypt. 13 The restoration of it after forty years. 17 Egypt the reward of Nebuchadrezzar's service against Tyrus. 21 Israel shall be restored.

IN the "tenth year,"¹ in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,²

2 Son of man, "set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and against" all Egypt:

3 Speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, "I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great dragon" that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own,⁴ and I have made it for myself.

4 But "I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause the fish" of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales; and "I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, and all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales."⁶

5 And "I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the open fields,"⁷ thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: I have given thee for meat to the "beasts of the field and to the fowls of the heaven.

6 And all the inhabitants of Egypt "shall know that I am the LORD, because they have been "a staff of reed to the house of Israel.

7 When they "took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder: and when they leaned upon thee, thou brakest, and madest all their loins to be "at a stand.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I "will bring a sword upon thee, and cut off man and beast out of thee.

9 And "the land of Egypt shall be desolate and waste; and they shall know that I am the LORD: "because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it.

10 Behold, therefore, I am against thee, and against thy "rivers, and I will make the land of Egypt utterly waste" and desolate, from "the tower of Syene" even unto the border of Ethiopia.²

depend on them. But highly criminal is it for men, even the greatest, to pride themselves in their prosperity, as if they had not received all from God, and that only in loan. Quickly may they expect to lose that which they refuse to hold under him. Alas, how fluctuating are the affections of our most ardent lovers and greatest admirers! They may one day risk their life to assist our ambition, and the next pull us from our station and being on earth. And too often do subjects ruin themselves by foolish adherence to sovereigns, or by undutiful rebellions against them. Nothing is more provoking to God, and injurious to mankind, than to deceive those who put confidence in us. And it is a mercy for the world when he strips those of their power who exercised it in tyrannizing over or deceiving their neighbours. Yea, happy is it to have those created comforts and confidences removed from us which estranged us from God. But how alarming is it to behold Egypt, the most ancient enslaver of God's people for about a hundred years, already more than two thousand years in the basest servitude to Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, and at last to Mameluke and Turkish slaves! At the most terrible expense and pains are men bent to destroy one 12 And "I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of "the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate "forty years: and "I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

13 Yet thus saith the Lord God, At the end of forty years" will I gather the Egyptians from the people whither they were scattered:

14 And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return into the land of "Pathros, into the land of their habitation,"⁵ and "they shall be there a base" kingdom.

15 It shall be the basest of the kingdoms; neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations.

16 And" it shall be no more the confidence of the house of Israel, which "bringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they shall look after them; "but they shall know that I am the Lord God.

17 ¶ And it came to pass in the "seven and twentieth year,"⁸ in the first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve "a great service against Tyrus: "every head was made "bald, and every shoulder was peeled:"² yet had he no "wages,"⁴ nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it:

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, "I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall take her multitude, and take her spoil, and take her prey,"⁵ and it shall be the wages for his army.

20 I have given him the land of Egypt for his labour" wherewith he served against it, because they "wrought for me, saith the Lord God.

21 ¶ In that day will I cause the "horn of the house of Israel to bud forth,"⁷ and will give thee "the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and "they shall know that I am the LORD.

another. And yet, while they are pursuing their coveted and ambitious views, they are at length brought under the rule of the British nation. And often God rewards the men with wealth or honour in this world, and yet they are lost in the next. It is well if he, in wrath, remember mercy; and it is a happy presage when his faithful ministers are divinely countenanced and encouraged in their work.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—The day of God's just judgment, however slow, comes certainly at last. And they who will help his enemies must

3 For the ¹day is near, even the day of the LORD is near, a ²'cloudy day';² it shall be ³'the time of the heathen.

4 And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great pain³ shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they ⁴'shall take away her multitude, and her ⁵'foundations⁴ shall be broken down.

5 Ethiopia,⁴ and Libya,⁵ and Lydia, and all the mingled people, and Chub, and the men⁶ of the land that is in league, shall fall with them by the sword.

6 Thus saith the LORD, They also ⁷'that uphold Egypt shall fall, and the pride of her power shall come down: from the tower of Syene⁷ shall they fall in it by the sword, saith the LORD God.

7 And ⁸'they shall be desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities shall be in the midst of the cities that are wasted.

8 And ⁹'they shall know that I am the LORD, when I have ¹⁰'set a fire in Egypt, and when all her helpers shall be destroyed.⁸

9 In that day shall messengers⁹ go forth from me in ships,¹ to make the ¹¹'careless Ethiopians afraid, and ¹²'great pain shall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt: for, lo, it cometh.

10 Thus saith the LORD God, ¹³'I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

11 He and his people with him, the ¹⁴'terrible of the nations, shall be brought to destroy the land: and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain.

12 And I will make the rivers ¹⁵'dry,³ and sell¹ the land into the hand of the wicked; and I will make the land waste, and all that is therein,⁴ by the hand of strangers: I the LORD have spoken it.

13 Thus saith the LORD God, I will also ¹⁶'destroy the idols, and I will cause their images⁵ to cease out of ¹⁷'Noph;⁷ and ¹⁸'there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt: and I ¹⁹'will put a fear in the land of Egypt.

14 And I will make ²⁰'Pathros desolate, and will set fire in Zoan,⁸ and will execute judgments in No.⁹

15 And I will ²¹'pour my fury upon Sin,¹ the strength of Egypt; and I will cut off the multitude of No.²

16 And I will ²²'set fire in Egypt: Sin shall

+ Noph, now Grand Cairo, possessed by the Mahomedans, the most decided enemies of images and image worship. How striking the coincidence of the fact and the prophecy! A few years since a splendid table service of plate was ordered in London by Mehmet Ali the ruler of Egypt; and why—inquired the visitor to whom they were shown—why are the ornaments so few and so uniform? They must contain nothing that represents life—was the reply—and that would be reckoned an image.—C.

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD God, Behold, I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will ¹⁴'break his arms, the ¹⁵'strong, and ¹⁶'that which was broken; and ¹⁷'I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand.

23 And¹⁸ I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries:

25 But I will strengthen the arms of the ²²'king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down; and ²³'they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall put my ²⁴'sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and ²⁵'he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt.

26 And ²⁶'I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries: and they ²⁷'shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 A recital to Pharaoh of the glory of Assyria. 10 And the fall thereof for pride. 18 The like destruction shall be to Pharaoh.

AND it came to pass in the ¹'eleventh year,¹ in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ²'speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude; ³'Whom art thou like in thy greatness?

take their destruction along with them. God ordinarily makes one wicked person or nation his scourge to another; easily he can alarm the most distant or secure. And the fall of sinners ought to alarm their survivors. If we refuse to glorify him by obedience, he will take care to glorify himself in our destruction. And if lesser judgments will not humble and reform us, he will bring on more severe ones. He keeps nations in perpetual variation. Nothing is unchangeable but himself. But they who are most elevated in their prosperity are often most dispirited in their adversity. And no conquerors, no armies, have any power at all but what is given them from above.

CHAPTER XXXI. Ver. 3-6. The kingdom of Assyria arrived at an astonishing extent of dignity and power, ruling over and protecting many nations; and their king was exceedingly exalted. Their fruitful soil, enriching commodities, prudent administrations, and traffic with or conquest of nations, rendered it more powerful and extensive than any kingdom on earth. All the nations about were either under its dominion or courted its friendship. 13-17. Upon the fall of the Assyrian monarchy the conquering nations made a prey of it, and glutted themselves with the spoils thereof. Let therefore no princes nor kingdoms be puffed up with a conceit of themselves because of present prosperity, as they must all, in their turn, be reduced and ruined. When the Assyrian monarchy was destroyed, it struck a general terror into all its friends, dependants, and neighbours, and put a stop to all trade;—and while the Assyrians and their neighbours bewailed the disaster, the great kings and king-

MOSQUE OF THE CITADEL IN CAIRO. [EZEKIEL, xxx: 4.]—"And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great pain shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt." Egypt has in all ages been a place of war and bloodshed. This picture of the citadel in Cairo, begun by Muhammed-Ali and finished in 1857 by Sa'id Pasha, serves as a very good illustration of the text quoted from Ezekiel, because the sword has always been coming upon Egypt. It has attempted to perpetuate its existence not by constitutional forms of government, but by external force represented by the sword. This mosque at the citadel is built of alabaster. It is constructed after the model of Hagia Sophia at Constantinople. The mosque is a square, covered by a large dome, and four small walls. In the southeast corner is the tomb of Muhammed-Ali, and close by is the pulpit.

ENTRANCE TO THE TEMPLE OF THE SPHINX—STANDING WHEN ABRAHAM FIRST APPEARED IN EGYPT. [Ezekiel, xxxii:15.]—"I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be destitute of that whereof it was full; when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, then shall they know that I am the Lord." The prophecy of Ezekiel has been literally fulfilled as far as Egypt is concerned, against which it was uttered. The Egypt of Ezekiel's day is desolate. To the southeast of the Sphinx there is the large granite and limestone temple excavated by M. Mariette in 1853. Statues of Chephren, which are now in the Gizeh Museum, were found in it, and hence it is generally supposed that the Temple of the Sphinx was built by Chephren. It is said to be a good specimen of the simple style of architecture in vogue among the Egyptians in the time of the ancient Empire. There is a chamber in this temple in which are hewn in the wall niches which are thought to have been intended as places of deposit for the mummies.

will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee.

5 And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.

6 I will also water with thy blood the land wherein thou swimdest,⁴ even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee.

7 And when I shall put thee out,⁵ I will cover the heaven,⁶ and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light.

8 All the bright lights of heaven⁷ will I make dark⁸ over thee, and ⁹set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord God.

9 I will also vex⁹ the hearts of many people, when I shall ¹⁰bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known.

10 Yea, ¹¹I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall ¹²brandish my sword before them; and they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God, The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee.

12 By the ¹³swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall, the terrible of the nations, all of them; and ¹⁴they shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude¹ thereof shall be destroyed.

13 I will destroy also all the beasts thereof² from beside the great waters; neither shall the foot of man ³trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them.

14 Then will I make their waters deep,³ and cause the rivers to run like oil,⁴ saith the Lord God.

15 When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be destitute of that whereof it was full,⁵ when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, ⁶then shall they know that I am the Lord.

16 This⁷ is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her: the daughters of the nations shall lament her; they shall lament for her, ⁸even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord God.

17 ¶ It came to pass also in ¹⁸the twelfth year,⁶ in the fifteenth day of the month, ¹⁹that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, ¹⁹wail for the multitude of Egypt, and ²⁰cast them down, ²¹even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto ²²the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit.⁷

o Egypt has surpassed all other nations in the extent and decorations of her subterranean tombs—single tombs sometimes resembling a palace, her tombs a city. This is the melancholy 'glory of the grave' is therefore the chief to which the prophet alludes in his judgment. The proud tomb of Egypt is there, but her military pomp is no more; the company is indeed around the grave, but 'all of them slain, fallen by the sword,' and not one remains to write his fellow's epitaph. Nor let men doubt the possibility of such an unsparring massacre; for even at this very hour, has a British army been totally extirpated in India, and specimens of what a despised enemy and an unpropitious climate may effect—a note of divine displeasure not to be disregarded—sent to every lover of his country to repent of his own share of the national sins, and to pray for the averted of further calamities.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—One faithful minister or magistrate may be of great service to a country or nation. Yet much care and faithfulness is necessary in the work of fifth day of the month, that one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, The city is smitten.⁸

22 Now the hand of the LORD was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came, and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning, and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb.

23 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, Abraham was one, and he inherited the land: but we are many,¹ the land is given us for inheritance.

25 Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Ye eat with the blood,² and lift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

26 Ye stand upon your sword,³ ye work abomination, and ye defile every one his neighbour's wife: and shall ye possess the land?

27 Say thou thus unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; As I live, surely they that are in the wastes shall fall by the sword, and him that is in the open field will I give to the beasts to be devoured,⁴ and they that be in the forts and in the caves shall die of the pestilence.

28 For I will lay the land most desolate,⁵ and the pomp of her strength shall cease; and the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through.

29 Then shall they know that I am the LORD, when I have laid the land most desolate because of all their abominations which they have committed.

30 ¶ Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the LORD.

31 And they come unto thee as the people cometh,⁷ and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they show much love,⁸ but their heart goeth after their covetousness.

32 And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument: for they hear thy words, but they do them not.²

33 And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come³), then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 A reproof of the shepherds. 7 God's judgments against them. 11 His providence over his flock. 20 The blessings of Christ's kingdom.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God unto the shepherds, Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks?

3 Ye eat the fat,² and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed:³ but ye feed not the flock.

4 The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

5 And they were scattered, because there is no shepherd:⁵ and they became meat to all the beasts of the field when they were scattered.

6 My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them.

7 ¶ Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

8 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

10 Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more: for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.⁷

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God, Behold I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

f Ps. 80.1; 23.1; 119. 176. Mat. 18. 11. Lu. 19. 10. Is. 56. 8. Je. 23. 3; 30. 33; 1. 8.

either. And it is a great mercy that, when they cannot be so useful to others as they wished, they may save themselves. They who have hardened themselves in presumption generally at last sink into and harden themselves in despair. Yet certain and delightful is it that God hath no pleasure in the ruin of sinners; and that he is infinitely sincere and earnest in his calls to repentance. But sinners must repent or be damned. Holiness and happiness, obstinate sinning and misery, are inseparably connected in God's purposes, oracles, and providences; nor does the escaping one stroke secure the hardened transgressor from imminent ruin.

—To what a fearful pitch of profaneness are they arrived who can make common calamities the matter of their joy, or important discourses the object of their derision! And yet faithful ministers are a common object of contempt and hatred, and a common subject of discourse in the places where they live. And, alas, many pretend great fondness for God's ministers and ordinances who have no real love to them! Often hearers have their fancies pleased who never get their consciences touched, their hearts renewed, or lives sanctified, by what they hear. And nothing more effectually prevents the efficacy of the gospel than a covetous heart. But neither scoffers nor hypocrites shall be able to defeat the threatenings of God; and they who would not improve his mercies shall know their value by wanting them.

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 2-5. These rulers regard only their own interest, and not the welfare of the people. By oppression and murder they seize upon the estates of the rich; they have not supported, relieved, or comforted such as were fallen into decay or distress; they have not relieved or redressed the wrongs of the oppressed; they have not restored to ACADEMY OF SCIENCE, ATHENS—THE DIRECT OUTCOME OF THE CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION UNDER THE BENIGN INFLUENCE OF WHICH THIS CITY NOW FLOURISHES. [EZEKIEL, xxxiv: 23-25]—"And I will set up one Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace.

and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods." We give a picture of the Academy of Science in Athens, which is a fitting illustration of this prophecy of Ezekiel. The kingdom of Jesus Christ the son of David wherever established has promoted law and order and science and all the things which go to make up enlightened civilization. All nations where Christ has been accepted have enjoyed the showers of blessing of which Ezekiel speaks.

12 As a shepherd seeketh out^s his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver^t them out of all places where they have been scattered in "the cloudy and dark day.

13 And "I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the "mountains of Israel, by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

14 I will feed them in a "good pasture, and upon^r the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will "feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God.

16 I^b will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but "I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with "judgment.

17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, "I judge between cattle⁹ and cattle,¹ between the rams and the he-goats.²

18 Seemeth it a small thing unto you "to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must "tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

19 And as for my flock; they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.³

20 ¶ Therefore, thus saith the Lord God unto them, "Behold I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

21 Because "ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

22 Therefore^t will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle.

23 And I will set up one "shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even "my servant

j The blessings promised in ver. 23-31 are mainly, if not wholly, Messianic. The "good Shepherd" is the Messiah. The unity of the flock indicates a unity of religious sentiment rather than political unity, though the latter is not entirely overlooked.

k The power of the Shepherd in ruling is the power of him who is the head of all things to whom Paul represents as Head over all things to the Christian to observe that God, by the prophets, constantly promised a new covenant to the Jews; thereby intimating the departure of the Moors to make room for the gospel dispensation. CHAPTER XXXV.

The judgment of Mount Seir for their hatred of Israel, and insulting over their distress.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, "set thy face against "mount Seir,¹ and "prophesy against it,

3 And say unto it, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O mount Seir, I am against thee, and I will stretch out mine hand against thee, and I will make thee most desolate.²

Ver. 23. My servant David. David, the son of Jesse, had now been dead 400 years, and no one of the name ever afterwards sat upon the throne of Israel, till Messiah, the true David, so called of God from heaven, Mat. 3:17; for David, in Hebrew, corresponds to Beloved in Greek, which name God the Father then bestowed upon his only begotten Son. C.

REFLECTIONS.—If the dignity and power of men do not restrain them from sin, it will not exempt them from reproof, excuse their impotence, or avert God's judgments. Alas! miserable is the case of nations and churches when magistrates and ministers mind only their own temporal interests, neglect their duty, plague, oppress, and mislead their people. And most dreadful will be their account and condemnation at last. Soon will God deprive them of that power which they have abused. And if they will neglect their part, God will, at their expense, and for the welfare of his people, perform his, and neither slumber nor sleep. If they harden the wicked, and discourage the righteous, he their right such as, by the violence of others, had been forced to quit their lands; nor have they attempted to reform the wanderers in wickedness; but have tyrannized over them in the most unmerciful manner:—so that, by the ill conduct of their rulers, and the violence of enemies, they are either destroyed, or forced as captives or fugitives into other countries, and their wealth is made a spoil. 16, 17, 20, 22. While I redress the manifold grievances of the poor and oppressed, I will, by fearful judgments, destroy their wealthy and powerful oppressors; I will, in righteousness, make an effectual difference between the weaker and stronger part of my people—cherishing the former, and restraining the violence and fury of the latter. 18, 19, 21. Think ye it a small crime to enjoy my enlarged blessings yourselves alone, but ye must disturb the poor in the possession of their small estates, and consume them by your illegal oppression. Yea, ye oblige them to live upon the remains of what ye have destroyed, and molest and vex them by your injustice and violence. 23. Jesus Christ is called David, because he was his promised seed and glorious anti-type; and called God's servant, because, as mediator, he performs the debased and honorary work of our salvation, appointed him of the Father. He is called a Shepherd, to denote his careful gathering, protecting, guarding, providing for, feeding, and healing his people. And he is called a Plant of Renown, ver. 29, because, being low in his humiliation, he is infinitely excellent in himself; and is, and will for ever be, infinitely famous among angels and men. 25. I will establish with them my covenant, by virtue of which they shall enjoy all kinds of blessings; and wicked men, who oppress and devour others, shall either be converted or destroyed to such a degree, that, in the most barbarous and dangerous places, there shall be nothing but safety and comfort.

Ver. 16. I will seek that which was lost. This is the true character of Jesus—"The shepherd of the sheep," "the good shepherd," who came "to seek and to save that which was lost,"

4 I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

5 Because^a thou hast had a perpetual hatred,³ and hast shed the blood of the children⁴ of Israel by the force⁵ of the sword in the time of their calamity, in ^{the time that their iniquity had an end:}

6 Therefore,⁶ as I live, saith the Lord God, I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee: sith thou hast not hated blood, even blood shall pursue thee.

7 Thus will I make mount Seir most desolate,⁷ and cut off from it him that passeth out, and him that returneth.

8 And I will fill his mountains with his slain men: in thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers, shall they fall that are slain with the sword.

9 I will make thee perpetual desolations,⁷ and thy cities shall not return; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

10 Because thou hast said, "These two nations,⁸ and these two countries, shall be mine, and we will possess it; whereas⁹ the LORD was there:

11 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, I will even do according to thine anger, and according to thine envy, which thou hast used out of thy hatred against them; and I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.

12 And thou shalt know that I am the LORD, and that I have heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel, saying, They are laid desolate, they are given us to consume.¹

13 Thus with your mouth ye have boasted² against me, and have multiplied your words against me: I have heard them.

14 Thus saith the Lord God, When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate.

15 As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, will comfort the distressed, and ruin the presumptuous. And they who would engross everything to themselves, and who grudge that any can live beside them, shall be awfully reckoned with at last. But every loss, every trouble, is completely balanced to them who have Jesus Christ, and God in him, for their ALL and IN ALL. Glorious and renowned is his person, office, and work; rich and stable the relations made with him, and with us in him; and complete the safety, and unbounded and innumerable the blessings, of his kingdom.

CHAPTER XXXV. REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers must declare nothing but evil against the implacable enemies of Christ and his people. The quarrels of parents often descend to their children; and national antipathies are deeply rooted. Therefore parents should carefully avoid giving a bad example to their children, as it may insinuate and ruin them, though themselves should repent. Nothing is more cruel than to insult and oppress the distressed. Even they who suffer for their sin here, ought not to be trampled on, but pitied. And it shows great baseness if our own advantage thereby render us glad at the losses and troubles of others. When God's church is in trouble, the constancy and fidelity of her friends, and the malice and pride of her enemies, are singularly manifested. God is highly provoked when his enemies lay claim to the peculiar property of his offending favourites. And they who jest at or help forward their misery may expect similar calamities. Neither men's words nor their deeds are forgotten by God in measuring out his judgments. And implacable malice must be punished with irreparable ruin.

CHAPTER XXXVI. Ver. 2, 3, 6. When the Chaldeans, and afterwards the Romans, desolated Judea, the Edomites, and other neighbouring heathens that survived the common calamities, made a scorn and by-word of the Jews, and assisted to ruin them, in hopes of getting their country. 25, 26, 29. By my Word and Spirit I will apply to your souls the blood of Christ for removing the guilt and filth of your iniquities, and will reform you from your idolatry and other wickedness; I will renew your hearts, subdue your indwelling lusts, implant in you new principles of so will I do unto thee: thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, even all of it; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 The land of Israel is comforted, both by the destruction of the heathen, who spitefully used it, 8 and by the blessings of God promised unto it. 16 Israel was rejected for their sin, 21 and shall be restored without their desert. 25 The blessings of Christ's kingdom.

ALSO, thou son of man, prophesy unto the mountains^a of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD.

2 Thus saith the Lord God, Because the enemy hath said against you, Aha, even the ancient high places are ours in possession;

3 Therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Because¹ they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen,² and ye are taken up in the lips of talkers,³ and are an infamy of the people:

4 Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God: Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains and to the hills, to the rivers⁵ and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes and to the cities that are forsaken, which became a prey and derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about;⁶

5 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, which have appointed my land into their possession⁷ with the joy of all their heart, with despightful minds, to cast it out for a prey.

6 Prophecy, therefore, concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains and to the hills, to the rivers and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have borne the shame of the heathen.

7 Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, I have lifted up mine hand, Surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame.

8 But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit holiness, and by my Spirit dwelling and acting in you will daily persuade and enable you to render a cordial and universal obedience to all my commands.

Ver. 2. The ancient high-places—where the idolatrous rites of the heathen were celebrated—the recovery of which the idolatrous Idumeans, ver. 5, looked upon as a peculiar favour from their gods, and cause of glorying over the Jews. C.

Ver. 25. Then will I sprinkle, &c. Does the word 'then' apply to the time of gathering, or comes it after they are brought into their own land? Some think the Jews will be restored to their own land while still rejecting Jesus as Messiah, and will there be nationally converted to faith in him. Others think they will first be converted and then restored. But may it not be inferred from Eze. 20. 34-43, that they will be gathered from the heathen while still in unbelief; dealt with in a transition state, as were their fathers in the wilderness, by mercies and judgment, till 'the rebels be purged' from among them; and that 'they (the unbelievers) shall not enter into the land of Israel;' but they being purged out, 'all the (remaining) house of Israel shall serve' the LORD, and he 'will accept them.' That is, being converted to the gospel, they are made accepted in Jesus the Beloved, Ep. 1. 6. C.

Ver. 37. It is carefully to be noted that the promise here made is to 'the house (the whole house) of Israel.' But the restoration under Zerubbabel was merely of Judah and Benjamin, and of a very few of the ten tribes. The promise, therefore, though it began to be fulfilled before our Lord appeared in the flesh, still 20 There is great reason to conclude that Edom was the original seat of learning and civilization, the instructress of Egypt, Chaldaea, and consequently of Greece and of the world. See Wylie's Modern Judea, p. 44, &c.

21 The remnants of her ancient grandeur in the ruins of Petra, as above, and Kib's Fulfillment of Prophecy are justly ranked among the wonders of the world. At the time Ezekiel wrote she exhibited no symptoms of internal decay; and, for ages after his time, continued to advance to a degree of riches and power that promised to bid defiance to change. But, in face of all this, the prophet not merely foretells her decay, but her 'perpetual desolations.' And 'here,' says Dr. Shaw, 'is no place of vines, or of pomegranates; the whole is an evil place, a howling wilderness.' Travels, p. 438. See also Stephens, vol. ii. pp. 47, 51. Evidences these things are of the divine inspiration of the prophets, which it is hard to discover how scepticism can doubt or infidelity deny.—C.

27 The fulfilment of the prophecy recorded in vi. is here regarded as complete; the prophetic judgment pronounced against the heathen—those remnants—those remainders from the general desolation, are represented as glorying over the ruin of Israel. This is the occasion of the utterance of the prophecy in this chapter.

28 The fulfilment of which is still to a large extent future, for complete restoration of the Jewish people is predicted, and complete national devotion to the service of Jehovah.—P.

CHAPTER XXXVII. Ver. 10. The breath came into them, and they lived. Though it is not necessary, nor perhaps right, to assert with Hutchinson that the Scriptures contain a system of philosophy; yet, most certain it is, that they are found not merely MOSQUE IN TIBERIAS—ON LAKE GALILEE, AROUND WHICH OUR SAVIOR PERFORMED MOST OF HIS MIRACLES. [EZEKIEL, xxxvi: 26, 27.]—"A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them." This prophecy of Ezekiel was fulfilled in the coming of Christ. In Him provision was made for giving new hearts to the people. Ezekiel anticipates in this reference to the new heart the whole ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ. So when Christ appeared He said to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again." To be in Christ is to be a new creature. We give a picture of the Mosque in Tiberias in the neighborhood where our Savior performed many of His miracles, and uttered many of His wisest teachings.

36 Then^a the heathen, that are left round about you, shall know that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do^a it.

37 Thus saith the Lord God, 'I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of 'Israel, to do it for them;² I will increase them with men like a flock.

38 As the holy flock,³ as the 'flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts, so 'shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

¹ By the resurrection of dry bones, 11 the dead hope of Israel is revived. 15 By the uniting of two sticks, 18 is showed the incorporation of Israel with Judah. 21 The promises of Christ's kingdom.

THE hand^a of the LORD was upon me, and carried^b me out¹ in the Spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones,

2 And caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley;² and, lo, they were very 'dry.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, can these^a bones live? And I answered, O 'Lord God, thou knowest.³

4 Again he said unto me, 'Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O 'ye dry bones, hear the word of the LORD.⁴

5 Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, 'I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live:

6 And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and 'ye shall know that I am the LORD.

7 So^a I prophesied as I was commanded:⁵ and as I prophesied 'there was a noise, and, behold, a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

8 And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above; but there was no 'breath in them.

9 Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind,⁶ prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord God, Come from the four^a winds, O breath,⁷ and 'breathe upon these slain, that they may live.

10 So I prophesied as he commanded me, and^a the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

11 Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the 'whole house of Israel: behold they say, 'Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost; we are cut off for our parts.

12 Therefore 'prophesy, and say unto them,

TOMB OF CAIUS CESTIUS—THE ROMAN PRÆTOR, WHO DIED THIRTY YEARS BEFORE THE BIRTH OF CHRIST. [Ezekiel, xxxvii:28.]—
 “And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.” Caius Cestius was a Roman prætor and tribune of the people, who died about 30 B. C., and Agrippa, his executor, erected this tomb to his memory, with two colossal statues, which are not now in existence. It is a striking fulfillment of prophecy to remember that in this land, which was heathen at the time Ezekiel wrote, is now established the most expensive and sublime sanctuary that has ever been erected by the faith of man. Saint Peter's might well stand for the sanctuary which God promised by his prophet to establish in the midst of his people for evermore.

CHAPTER XL.

1 The time, manner, and end of the vision. 6 The description of the east gate, 20 of the north gate, 24 of the south gate, 32 of the east gate, 35 and of the north gate. 39 The eight tables. 44 The chambers. 48 The porch of the house.

IN the "five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten, in the "self-same day the hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither.¹

2 In the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon "a very high mountain,² by which³ was as the "frame of a city on the south.

3 And he brought me thither, and, behold, there was "a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with "a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed; and he stood in the gate.

4 And the man said unto me, Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall show thee; for to the intent that I might show them unto thee art thou brought hither: declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

5 And, behold, "a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring reed of six cubits long, by the cubit and an "hand-breadth; "so he measured the breadth of the building one reed, and the height one reed.

6 ¶ Then came he unto "the gate which looketh toward the east,⁵ and went up the "stairs thereof, and measured the "threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad, and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad.

7 And every "little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits, and the threshold of the gate, by the porch of the gate within, was one reed.

8 He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts⁶ thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward.

10 And the "little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side to my sacrifice² that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood.

18 Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams,³ of lambs, and of goats,³ of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan.

19 And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken,⁴ of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you.

20 Thus ye shall be "filled at my table with horses and chariots,⁵ with mighty men, and with all men of war,⁶ saith the Lord God.

21 ¶ And⁷ I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment, that I have executed, and my hand that I have "laid upon them.

22 So the house of Israel shall "know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward.

23 And⁸ the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore "hid I my face from them, and gave them into the "hand of their enemies; so fell they all by the sword.⁷

24 According⁹ to their uncleanness, and according to their transgressions, have I done unto them, and hid my face from them.

25 ¶ Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Now¹⁰ will I bring again⁸ the captivity of Jacob, and have "mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name;⁹

26 After¹¹ that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses, whereby they have trespassed against me, "when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.

27 When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and "am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations;

28 Then¹² shall they know that I am the LORD their God, which caused them¹ to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left¹³ none of them any more there.

29 Neither¹⁴ will I hide my face any more from them: for I have "poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

x The words of Hävernack, quoted by Principia Fairbairn in his commentary on Ezekiel, are deserving of the attention of every thoughtful reader. They are, as I believe, a key to this most mysterious and remarkable portion of God's Word. We may not be able by it to reveal every latent truth, or solve every mystery; but we shall at least open the sanctuary for closer and more minute inspection. The prophet seems to have had the kingdom and work of the Messiah chiefly before his mind in the whole vision. He saw and described them through the symbols of the temple and its rites. He does not describe things as they actually existed in the temple, or in the Jewish state. It is altogether an ideal picture (see page 896).

noun. How humbling it is to nature when because of judgments on sin men become degraded like beasts! But wise are all his dispensations: his judgments on the wicked are according to justice, and an encouragement to the faith and hope of the people. True penitents are willing to bear their shame, and wonder at the mercy mingled with their sufferings. And when we return to God, he will return to us, and lift upon us the light of his countenance. But it is truly delightful when his kindness towards his people silences all the reflections of their enemies against him; and when he eminently bestows upon them his presence and Spirit, and assures them of their everlasting relation to and enjoyment of himself.

CHAPTER XL. Ver. 2, 3. The high mountain may denote the conspicuous firmness and heavenly nature of the gospel church. The man appearing as brass denotes Jesus Christ in his strength, stability, duration, debasement, and glory. His line and reed represent the Scriptures, by which everything in the doctrine, worship, or discipline of his church ought to be measured. His standing in the gate may represent him as the only door and way of our access to God, and to his church above or below. 4. This, and ch. 44, 5, compared with ch. 43. 10-14, containing most solemn charges for both ministers and people to remark and regard everything in the form of the gospel church, directs an awful rebuke to those who, affecting to put asunder what God hath joined, condemn and decry the forms of worship and the government and discipline of the gospel church, as not appointed in the Scriptures, and not much worthy of a Christian's regard.

Ver. 5-49—ch. xlii. xliii. The temple and its furniture, described in this and the three following chapters, represent the church, particularly in the apostolic and millennial state. The measuring of everything by Christ with a line and reed, denotes that everything in it is appointed by Christ in his Word; and nothing ought to be admitted but what is answerable to and founded on that Word. The wall denotes her divine protection and surrounding discipline and government. The courts, at least the outward, may denote her visible state; and the inner court, and especially the sanctuary, may allude to her invisible state of eminent fellowship with God in Christ. The separate building at the west end may represent the state of glory. The large gates, doors, and porches may signify Jesus Christ as the means of our abundant access to God; but the porch of the sanctuary may denote him as a supporter, hiding-place, and house of prayer for his people. 11 And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length⁷ of the gate, thirteen cubits.

12 The space⁸ also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side; and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side.

18 And the pavement by the side of the gates, over against⁷ the length of the gates, was the lower pavement.

19 Then he measured the breadth, from the forefront of the lower gate⁸ unto the forefront of the inner court without,⁹ an hundred cubits eastward and northward.

20 ¶ And¹⁰ the gate of the outward court, that looked¹¹ toward the north, he measured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof.

21 And the little chambers thereof were three on this side, and three on that side; and the posts thereof, and the arches¹ thereof, were after the measure of the first gate: the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

22 And their windows, and their arches, and their palm-trees, were after the measure of the gate that looketh toward the east; and they went up unto it by seven steps; and the arches thereof were before them.²

ture he paints; but still a picture exhibiting some of the leading features of the Jewish temple and ritual. It is modified for the purpose of bringing out more clearly the great spiritual truths of a new dispensation.—1. In the gospel times there is to be on the part of Jehovah a solemn occupation anew of his sanctuary, in which the entire fulness of the divine glory shall dwell and manifest itself. At the last there is to rise a new temple, diverse from the old, to be made every way suitable to that and adorning its intention, and worthy of it; in particular, of vast compass for the new community, and with a holiness stretching over the entire extent of the temple, so that in this respect there should no longer be any distinction between the different parts. Throughout, everything is subjected to the most exact and particular appointments; individual parts, and especially such as had formerly been undetermined, obtain now an immediate divine sanction.

so that every idea of any kind of arbitrariness must be altogether excluded from this temple. Accordingly, this sanctuary is the thoroughly sufficient, perfect manifestation of God for the salvation of his people, ch. xl.—xlii. 1. 2. From this sanctuary, as from the new centre of all religious life, there issues forth an unbounded fulness of blessings unto the people, who in consequence attain to a new condition. There come also into being a glorious worship, a truly acceptable priesthood and theocratic ruler, and equity and righteousness reign among the entire community. at the different thresholds may mark out our deliberate and gradual entrance into the visible and invisible church, and to fellowship with God; and our gradual increase in gifts and grace. The foundations and pavements represent Jesus Christ and his inspired oracles as the foundation of the church, of every true member, of all saving grace, and of every good work in it. The posts and pillars denote fundamental truths, gospel promises, faithful ministers, and zealous saints. Palm-trees alternately mingled with cherubims in the engravings, denote saints attended and assisted by angels and ministers. Windows represent ministers and ordinances, by which we obtain the light and air of life. The altar of burnt-offering and sacrifices are to be referred to Christ in his person and righteousness. The altar of incense represents him in his all-procuring intercession. The chamber for washing the sacrifices may denote baptism; in which saints, those spiritual oblations, are washed in the blood and Spirit of the Lamb. The eight tables of hewn stone, with the knives on them, may signify the divinely-appointed, permanent, and frequently dispensed ordinance of the Lord's supper; in which Christ crucified, and our sins as the cause of his death, are affectingly presented to our view. The chambers, built on the inside of the wall of the court and outside of the wall of the temple, may denote particular churches, worshipping assemblies, temple or shrine, with their gates, guard-rooms, store-chambers, and chambers for the attendant priests and Levites.

Here he directs attention to the temple itself. Sometimes the word temple is employed to denote the whole structure, including the courts; at other times it is restricted to the shrine or temple proper.

46 And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of Zadok,⁵ among the sons of Levi, which come near to the LORD to minister unto him.

47 So he measured the court, an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, four square, and the altar that was before the house.

48 ¶ And he brought me to the *porch*⁶ of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side.

49 Theⁿ length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits: and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it; and there were pillars⁷ by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

CHAPTER XLI.

The measures, parts, chambers, and ornaments of the temple.

AFTERWARD he^a brought me to the temple,¹ and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle.³

2 And the breadth of the door⁴ was ten cubits;⁵ and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side; and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits, and the breadth, twenty cubits.

3 Then went he inward,⁶ and measured the post of the door two cubits, and the door six cubits, and the breadth of the door seven cubits.⁷

and instituted ordinances, or evangelical offices, in which Christ's people are lodged, protected, taught, and comforted by him. The enlarging of some of these chambers, according to the height of their stories, by their jutting into the principal wall, imports that the more holy, heavenly, and dependent on God churches and Christians are, the more extensive is their gospel liberty. But the narrowing the priests' chambers in the outward court towards the north as they ascended, may denote, that the more eminent ministers are, they are the more exposed to persecution. The void places between and before the chambers may represent the abundant access there is to Christian churches and ordinances; and the light, liberty, and wholesome air of spiritual influence there enjoyed; and that our whole life ought to be an improvement of ordinances past, and preparation for what are in view. The equal size of the chambers, and the equality of the things and measures on different sides, gates, &c., may represent the equal privileges, power, and authority of churches and ministers, the identity of Christ, his Word, and ordinances, and the similarity of his people in every part of the world. The five hundred reeds of measure, for a vacant space on every side of the court, may denote the extent of the gospel church, and the remarkable distinction which ought to be kept up between her and the world. The whole limit thereof round about being most holy, imports that all her ordinances are holy and spiritual, not ceremonial and carnal; and that holiness ought to be the shining quality of every officer and member. The people's never returning by the gate at which they entered the court, but going out by that directly opposite, and with the prince in the midst of them, ch. 46. 9, 10, denotes that in fellowship with Christ we must go forward, from strength to strength, in all our attendance on ordinances, and never turn our back on God or his institutions. The appropriation of the east gate to the prince, ch. 44. 1-3; 46. 1-3, 8, may denote that Jesus alone approached to God directly and in the way of merit; and that it is only through him that we have access with boldness unto God. The singers and Levites may represent Christians as praising God and labouring in his service; and priests may denote ministers, who present Christ, the atoning sacrifice, to men, and attend on God's service; and saints, who by faith present him, themselves, and their services in him, to God.

Ver. 2, &c. This is confessedly one of the most obscure and difficult portions of the prophetic writings. The Jews forbade it to be read by any one under thirty years of age; and believe that many parts of it cannot be understood till Elias (whom they expect) comes to explain them, and the Messiah (for whom, after Elias, they look) shall come to carry the various regulations of the prophet into effect. Many Christian expositors have altogether refrained from comment. But as 'all Scripture is profitable,' it is right, in the spirit of humility and prayer, to attempt its elucidation. The chief sources of elucidation are two: (1) Particular internal statements affording a key to the rest. (2) Comparison with New Testament prophecies. Of the first kind is the appearance of 'the man,' ch. 43. 6, 7, who is evidently the same as in ch. 40. 3, 4, and who declares the house to be 'the place of his throne,' 'where he would dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever,' and to refer to a period when 'his holy name the house of Israel should no more defile.' This enthroned man (comp. ch. 1. 26; 2. 4); this immortal king, who as 'lively stones,' are church, which is 'God's building,' built upon the foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone, in whom all the building fully framed together, groweth up an holy temple to the Lord, Eze. 48. 35; 1 Co. 3. 9; Ep. 2. 21; 1 Pe. 2. 5. The second source of elucidation leads to the comparison of ch. 43. 7; 47. 1, 7, 12 with Re. 22. 1-3; also ch. 43. 2, 4 with Re. 21. 23; and ch. 48. 31-35 with Re. 21. 12; which, though but a part of the evidence, points of comparison, seem to identify the two visions beyond question. See 1s. 2. 2; Zec. 6. 12, 13; He. 12. 22; Re. 1. 12. C.

Ver. 10. The entrance to the outward court, ver. 17, seems to have been through a porch extending inward, ver. 9, with doors at each end; and on the right and left hand of this porch or passage were three lodges of a reed square each, for the use of the porters or guards, with a space of five cubits between them. C.

Ver. 11. The breadth of the entry—not the width of the entrance, but the thickness of the wall, see ver. 5. The length of the gate—the width of the entrance—thirteen cubits; probably in allusion to the thirteen tribes—the real number, Levi being included. C.

Ver. 12. The space before the little chambers—not before the three chambers inward, but before the two in front. The Hebrew word translated space, signifies also a border; and is, not improbably, a projecting cornice. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers have constant need to be taught by Christ, and carefully to attend to, believe, and practise themselves what they declare to others. Everything which they speak or act should be carefully compared with the measuring line and reed of God's Word: and scripture should be compared with scripture in order to understand it. Yea, and much earnest prayer and humility is requisite in searching and explaining the oracles of God. But how similar in substance is all the true worship of God in the world; in the most mysterious ceremonies of his institution, if properly considered, we behold the glory of the Redeemer, the method of his salvation, the graces of his Spirit, and the eternal blessings of his kingdom.

CHAPTER XLI. REFLECTIONS.—If I diligently improve the instructions given me in the Lord's courts on earth, I shall quickly be admitted into the temple eternal in the heavens. If I diligently attend to and profit by the plain parts of religion, I shall quickly be brought into further acquaintance with the mysteries of the kingdom. And the higher I build for glory, the more shall my heart be enlarged in faith, love, and heaven-mindedness. Let my stature, then, under all cubits, and the breadth ^atwenty cubits, before the temple; and he said unto me, This is the most holy place.

5 After he measured the ^awall of the house six cubits; and the breadth of ^aevery ^aside-chamber four cubits, round about the house on every side.

6 And the side-chambers ^awere three, one over another, ^aand thirty in order; ^aand they entered ^ainto the wall which ^awas of the house for the side-chambers round about, that they might have hold, ^abut they had not hold in the wall ^aof the house.

7 And ^athere was an enlarging and a winding ^aabout still upward to the side-chambers; for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house: therefore the breadth of the house ^awas still upward, and so ^aincreased ^afrom the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst.

8 I saw also the height of the house round about: the ^afoundations of the side-chambers were a ^afull reed of six great cubits.

9 The thickness of the wall, which ^awas for the side-chamber ^awithout, ^awas five cubits; ^aand that which ^awas left ^awas the place of the side-chambers that ^awere within.

10 And between the ^achambers ^awas the wilderness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side.

11 And the doors of the side-chambers were ^atoward ^athe place that ^awas left, ^aone door toward the north, and another door toward the south: and the breadth of the place that ^awas left ^awas five cubits round about.

12 Now the building that ^awas before the separate ^aplace, at the end toward the west, ^awas seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building ^awas five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof ninety cubits.

13 So he measured the house, an hundred cubits long; ^aand the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, an hundred cubits long;

14 Also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place ^atoward the east, an hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which ^awas behind it, and the galleries ^athereof on the one side, and on the other side, an hundred cubits,

CHAPTER XLII. REFLECTIONS.—Let me bless the Lord for his numerous but simple gospel ordinances, and the extensive enlargement of them; but especially for the many and large mansions in the Father's house above. Great is the privilege of converse with fellow-Christians, and of opportunity to attend on the Lord without distraction. A great difference ought to be put between common and sacred things. And alas! an impassable wall of separation excludes impenitent sinners from the blessings and benefits of Christ's church and kingdom, and will exclude them for ever from his presence in glory.

CHAPTER XLIII. Ver. 7-9. Their whoredom denotes their idolatry. The carcases of their kings, or Molech, denote their idols infinitely loathsome and detestable to God. Their thresholds and posts, erected in opposition to God's, are their temples, altars, and inventions in worship, which they set up in opposition to him.

REFLECTIONS.—The different visits which God makes to his people are much alike, and serve to confirm one another; and it is but for a small moment he withdraws, when he returns in kindness. His glory manifested in his church is her principal ornament, furniture, and source of felicity. But it is through Jesus Christ, as with us, that we can have communion with him, or hear his voice with comfort. And if his goodness lead us not to repentance, nothing will. Yea, his pardon of sins renders them peculiarly loathsome and detestable. But, alas! how often the greatest abominations are found placed by men in God's own temple, his church, his worship, and their heart! No wonder that he is highly provoked herewith. But such as improve his goodness, received to his glory, and to their own self-loathing and debasement, shall experience it more and more.—The whole of our salvation is

5 And the LORD said unto me, Son of man, mark well,² and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the LORD, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the sanctuary.

6 And thou shalt say to the rebellious, even to the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, O ye house of Israel, let it suffice you of all your abominations,

7 In¹ that ye have brought into my sanctuary strangers,³ uncircumcised^a in heart, and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my sanctuary, to pollute it, even my house, when ye offer my bread, the fat and the blood, and they have broken my covenant, because of all your abominations.

8 And ye have not kept the charge of mine holy things: but ye have set keepers of my charge⁴ in my sanctuary for yourselves.⁵

9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, No stranger, uncircumcised in heart,⁶ nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel.

10 And the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols; they shall even bear their iniquity.

11 Yet^a they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: they shall slay the burnt-offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto them.

12 Because⁹ they ministered unto them before their idols, and caused the house of Israel to fall into iniquity;⁷ therefore have I lifted up mine hand against them, saith the Lord God, and they shall bear their iniquity.

13 And^c they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my holy things, in the most holy place,⁸ but they shall bear their shame, and their abominations which they have committed:

14 But^e I will make them keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein.

15 ¶ But⁹ the priests the Levites, the sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and they shall stand before me to offer unto me the fat and the blood, saith the Lord God:

30 No possession. No exclusive possession, such as the other tribes received. And historically, it appears there was a mixture of secular and ecclesiastical possession. Thus David is found in possession of Hebron (2 Sa. 2.11), which was one of the Levitical cities, Jos. 21.11, 13. How this community of rights and properties does not appear, but it must have been well defined, as there is no record either of complaint or dispute arising from its existence.—C.

16 They shall enter into my sanctuary, and they shall come near to my table,⁹ to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge.

17 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that, when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, they shall be clothed with linen garments;¹ and no wool shall come upon them while they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within.

18 They shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves² with any thing that causeth sweat.³

19 And when they go forth into the outer court, even into the outer court to the people, they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered; and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments.

20 Neither^a shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long: they shall only poll their heads.

21 Neither shall any priest drink wine, when they enter into the inner court.

22 Neither shall they take for their wives a widow, nor her that is put away:⁴ but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow that had a priest before.⁵

23 And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean.

24 And^a in controversy⁶ they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according to my judgments: and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies; and they shall hallow my sabbaths.

25 And they shall come at no dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves.

26 And after he is cleansed they shall reckon unto him seven days.

27 And^e in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin-offering, saith the Lord God.

28 And it shall be unto them for an inheritance; I am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession⁷ in Israel; I am their possession.

and wantonness. Their not drinking wine, &c., imports that they must never indulge drunkenness, luxury, or carnal care; that they must marry only such women as are of good report, and never connect themselves with apostate and disorderly churches; that they must, by doctrine and example, faithfully teach their hearers, and compose differences among them; and must avoid immoderate sorrow for the loss of created enjoyments. The food, fields, &c., allotted them for a maintenance, import their continual living on Christ crucified and his new-covenant provision, and their being decently and commodiously supported by their hearers. Their having distinct chambers for themselves may denote their office circumscribed by the divine law, and that none ought to interfere with either their work or benefice without commission from Christ. Their offering the sacrifices of the people may denote their preaching Christ crucified among them, and leading their exercises in their public dedications of themselves to God.

REFLECTIONS.—It is highly reasonable and infinitely delightful that Jesus, our only Mediator, Prince, and High-priest, should in all things have the pre-eminence. And it is necessary that God's mercies should be always attended with the most cordial repentance and thorough reformation. How provoking to God, ruinous to the church, and damning to souls, 29 They^h shall eat the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; and every dedicated^s thing in Israel shall be theirs.

30 And the first^o of all the first-fruits of all things, and every oblation of all, of every sort of your oblations, shall be the priest's: ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, that he may cause the blessing to rest in thine house.

31 The^a priest shall not eat of any thing that is dead of itself, or torn, whether it be fowl or beast.

CHAPTER XLV.

1 The portion of land for the sanctuary, 6 for the city, 7 and for the prince. 9 Ordinances for the prince.

MOREOVER, when ye shall divide^a by lot the land^d for inheritance, ye shall offer^b an oblation unto the LORD, an holy portion² of the land: the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds,³ and the breadth shall be ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about.

2 Of this there shall be^c for the sanctuary five hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the suburbs⁴ thereof.

3 And of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand: and^e in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place.

4 The^e holy portion of the land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the LORD; and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary.

5 And the five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, for a possession for twenty chambers.

6 ¶ And^f ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole house of Israel.

7 ¶ And^g a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward,^h and the length shall be over against e Taking the reed at 105 feet, this oblation would constitute a square of nearly 50 miles on each side. From the north side was taken a lot of nearly 50 miles by 20 for the priests, in the midst of which was the site of the temple, about a mile square, ver. 1, 2. On the south lay the lot of the Levites, of the same extent as that of the priests, ver. 5; and south of this lay the lot of the city, of the same length as those of the priests and Levites, but only half the width, ver. 6. Now when it is recollected that Canaan was little more than 120 miles in length, by 80 in breadth, there can remain little doubt that the whole is an emblem of that glorious state when Zion shall enlarge the place of her tents, lengthen her cords, strengthen her stakes, and break forth on the right and the left, and her seed shall inherit the Gentiles, Is. 54.2, 3, 5, 6. The word "reeds" is not in the original, and several eminent expositors think "cubits" should have been supplied in its stead. But that "reeds" and not "cubits" is the proper word to be supplied, is evident from ch. 42. 16, which exactly corresponds with ch. 45.2.

uncertain, fluctuating, or local value, but fixed either to 20, 25, or 15 shekels. This may be well illustrated by a reference to avoid-possessions, apothecaries', and other weights, several of which vary in different districts, not according to any specific name, but according to the article sold, and which often becomes the source of inconvenience, litigation, or fraud. is it when persons apparently graceless are admitted to the seals of God's promise, and to the office of rulers in the church of Christ! Nor must ministers who have fallen into scandal be hastily or easily restored to their office. It is in vain to expect a flourishing church where government and discipline are neglected, and where ministers are not extremely regular in all their conduct. But while ministers give up worldly cares for the sake of their hearers' salvation, it becomes their hearers, as they regard the blessing of God, and their own temporal or spiritual welfare, to provide for them a decent subsistence.

CHAPTER XLV. Ver. 1-8; with ch. 47. 13-23; and xlviii. Canaan, on the west of Jordan, about 180 miles from north to south, and 50 from east to west, is represented as thus divided. Beginning from the north, Dan, Asher, Naphtali, Manasseh, Ephraim, Reuben, and Judah, had their portions, all of them extending from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. All along the south side of Judah's portion is represented a sacred portion of 25,000 reeds broad. Of this, in the middle of the country, a portion of 25,000 reeds from east to west, and 10,000 from north to south, is allotted for the priests, in the middle of which a square of 500 reeds is allotted for the temple and its appurtenances. On the south side of the priests' portion another of the same dimensions is allotted for the Levites. On the south of the Levites' portion, a portion equally long, but only half as broad as that of settle of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court.

20 And so thou shalt do the seventh day of the month for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple: so shall ye reconcile the house.

21 In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be eaten.

22 And upon that day shall the prince prepare for himself, and for all the people of the land, a bullock for a sin-offering.²

23 And seven days of the feast he shall prepare a burnt-offering to the LORD, seven bullocks and seven rams without blemish, daily the seven days; and a kid of the goats daily for a sin-offering.

24 And he shall prepare a meat-offering of an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and an hin of oil for an ephah.

25 In the seventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, shall he do the like in the feast of the seven days, according to the sin-offering, according to the burnt-offering, and according to the meat-offering, and according to the oil.

CHAPTER XLVI.

1 Ordinances for the prince in his worship, 9 and for the people. 16 An order for the prince's inheritance. 19 The courts for boiling and baking.

THUS saith the Lord God, The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days;¹ but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened.

2 And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priest shall prepare his burnt-offering and his peace-offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate; then he shall go forth; but the gate shall not be shut until the evening.

3 Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the LORD, on the sabbaths, and in the new moons.

4 And the burnt-offering that the prince shall offer unto the LORD in the sabbath-day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish.

x This may signify that every thing should be regulated in respect of divine worship, in that way which may most effectually prevent disorder and interruption; but it is generally supposed to be intended to exhort men to go forward, and make progress in religion, and go through with it, and not be superficial, hypocritical, or apostate.—J.

9 ¶ But when the people of the land shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate; he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it.⁷

the priests or Levites, is assigned for the holy city; i.e. a square of 5000 reeds for the city to stand on, and a portion of 10,000 reeds in length and 5000 in breadth on the east side, and another on the west side of the same extent assigned to the office-bearers in the city. All of the country that remained on the east side and on the west side of this sacred square of 25,000 reeds, divided between the priests, Levites, and city, is allotted to the prince. And southward of that portion, in the middle of which the city stood, and of the land appointed for the prince at the east and west sides, the tribes of Benjamin, Simeon, Issachar, Zebulun, and Gad, had their portions, each extending from Jordan to the Mediterranean Sea. This division is entirely different from that made by Joshua, Jos. xiii.—xxi.

Ver. 13-25. The oblations here mean Christ, as offered in sacrifice to God, and represented as a Saviour to sinners; and his people giving up themselves, and all that they have, to God through him. The sacred festivals may point out the seasons of Christ's incarnation, suffering, and pouring out of the Holy Ghost, and the solemn ordinances of gospel worship, in which Christ and his people hold solemn fellowship, to the honour of God.

REFLECTIONS.—God ought to be honoured with the first and best of our substance; and his ministers and magistrates should be so provided for as that they may constantly attend to their work. Wherever religion thrives true liberty and strict honesty will abound. Magistrates and people, as well as ministers, ought, in their places, to lay out all their influence in promoting true and practical religion; and none shall receive mercies from God without grateful returns, according to what they have received. Though our great sacrifice of atonement was offered but once for all, our spiritual sacrifices of thanksgiving to God through Christ ought to be daily continued, especially when he allows us the more solemn ordinances of his worship.

CHAPTER XLVI. REFLECTIONS.—All ranks of men should carefully concur in promoting the regular sanctification of the Sabbath, and the whole worship of God. And it is the greatest glory of princes to be patrons of true piety to their people. But all our attendance on ordinances ought to be in close fellowship with Jesus our Prince, who is ALL to, does all for, and works all in us. And in our whole course of religion we must never go back; but, forgetting the things that are behind, reach forward unto the things that are before. It is very graceful to behold great men reverently attending the ordinances of the gospel with their servants,

FISHERMAN'S HOUSE, BEYROUT—WHERE TITUS CELEBRATED HIS VICTORY OVER JERUSALEM. [Ezekiel, xlvii:16.]—"Hamath, Berothath, Sibraim." Some connect the Berothath mentioned in Ezekiel xlvii:16, with Beyrouth. The best authorities, however, think this connection very remote. This city became a Roman colony in the reign of Augustus. It was adorned and beautified with theatres, colonnades, porticoes and baths by Agrippa, the remains of which are still scattered over the city. There are said to be a great number of large columns of both gray and red granite which have been built into the quay here. Here it was that Titus celebrated his victory over Jerusalem, and also the birthday of his father by gladiatorial combats, in which the captives of Zion were forced to fight with wild beasts and with one another, according to Josephus.

A BANA RIVER AT TOLL-GATE, DAMASCUS. [Ezekiel, xlvii:16.]—We are standing here at the foot of the Anti-Libanus mountain. The rocks rise up directly from the bank of the river. This is about a mile above the city of Damascus. The two merchants in flowing robes we see standing upon the bridge are fit representatives of the old and wealthy city of Damascus. In no other city on earth is there seemingly so much of physical repose and rest as here. Damascus seems to meet that universal element in human life that longs for relaxation in some quiet retreat. Here in Damascus man seems to find an escape from the responsibilities and momentous issues of the world's hard work, and here, away from the storm and noise of life, he finds a deeply shaded landscape hidden from the glare of the sun and away from the thunder of the world's trouble.

15 Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat-offering, and the oil, every morning, for a continual burnt-offering.

16 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance.

17 But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them.

18 Moreover, the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession: but he shall give his sons' inheritance out of his own possession; that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

19 ¶ After he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward.

20 Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass-offering and the sin-offering; where they shall bake the meat-offering; that they bear them not out into the outer court, to sanctify the people.

21 Then he brought me forth into the outer court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court, and, behold, in every corner of the court there was a court.

22 In the four corners of the court there were courts joined of forty cubits long, and thirty broad: these four corners were of one measure.

23 And there was a row of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about.

24 Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, where the ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people.

AFTERWARD he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under, from the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar.

2 Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the outer gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

v The whole country from the parallel of Jerusalem eastward is desert. The chief cause of its barrenness is the want of water.

w Wherever there is a little streamlet or fountain there is vegetation; and scanty though the soil be, abundant irrigation would make it productive. The waters of the Dead Sea contain such a large proportion of salt that they are deleterious. They render a barren soil still more barren. The symbolic imagery in this passage is therefore very instructive. The waters issuing from the temple of God convert the wilderness into a garden, and heal the noxious waters of the Dead Sea. Such is the influence of true religion upon the moral desolations of this world.—P.

4 Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins.

5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

6 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

7 Now when I had returned, behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees on the one side and on the other.

8 Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed.

9 And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live: and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh.

10 And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto Engedaim: they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea, exceeding many.

11 But the miry places thereof and the marishes thereof shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt.

12 And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine.

13 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, This shall be the border whereby ye shall inherit the land, according to the twelve tribes of Israel: Joseph shall have two portions.

14 And ye shall inherit it, one as well as another; concerning the which I lifted up mine hand to give it unto your fathers; and this land shall fall unto you for inheritance.

15 And this shall be the border of the land

Moses represents the latter as running from Hazar-enan to Shepham, then to Kibbath, then to the Sea of Chinnereth or Galilee. The landmarks of Ezekiel are Damascus, Hauran, Gilead, and the East (or Dead) Sea. Ezekiel thus includes the kingdoms of Damascus and Bashan, with Gilead and Moab; while Moses excludes them.—P.

1 This division differs essentially from that of Joshua; and, as it did not take place on the return from Babylon, must point to a time still future. And though the whole prophecy seems emblematic of heavenly, rather than descriptive of earthly things, yet it is not improbable that it proceeds upon a principle of division, the simplicity of which may hereafter commend it to the adoption of Israel restored. Taking the length of the whole land at 280 miles, and deducting the allotment for the priests, Levites, and prince, see ch. 45. 1, there will remain for each tribe a parallelogram less than 20 miles in breadth by 100 in length from east to west. But, lest this appear an inadequate allotment, let it be remembered that each tribe has an equal share in the city, ver. 19, and must be common occupiers of the lands of the prince. And let this mathematical arrangement be viewed as the emblem of the covenant 'well ordered in all things,' and of 'all things done decently and in order' in the church, while the perfect equality that prevails among the tribes, and extends to all resident strangers, will appear equally descriptive of that state in which there is 'neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, but Christ is all in all.'—C.

9 The oblation that ye shall offer unto the LORD shall be of five and twenty thousand in length, and of ten thousand in breadth.

10 And for them, even for the priests, shall be this holy oblation: toward the north five and twenty thousand in length, and toward the west ten thousand in breadth, and toward the east five and twenty thousand in length: and the sanctuary of the LORD shall be in the midst thereof.

11 It shall be for the priests that are sanc-power of the truths which they are to preach, that their work is most useful and acceptable.

CHAPTER XLVII. Ver. 1-12. These waters, issuing forth from the temple at the south side of the altar, denote the purifying, refreshing, and fructifying oracles and ordinances of the gospel, and the Holy Ghost in his gifts and graces attending the same, issuing forth from Christ's person and through his righteousness. Their gradual increase denotes the gradual progress of gospel truths and influences till the whole earth be filled with the knowledge of the Lord; and that the further we search into divine truths the more mysterious we shall find them; and also that, by continued accessions of light and love from Jesus Christ, the work of grace in every believer's heart, and the church in general, increases with the increase of God. Their running into the Dead Sea of Sodom, and quickening or producing multitudes of fish, represents gospel truths and influences as running into the Gentile world, even the worst places of it, which had long lain in wickedness and under the curse of God, and spiritually quickening multitudes who had been dead in trespasses and sins. The fishers all over the Dead Sea denote multitudes of gospel preachers all over the world labouring to gain sinners to Christ. The many fishes, like the fishes of the Mediterranean Sea, are multitudes of sinners, in a thousand diversified forms of misery and guilt, attending gospel ordinances, and by means thereof drawn unto Christ. The miry places and marshes are obstinate sinners, Jews, Antichristians, &c., abandoned of God to their own lusts and to everlasting damnation. The ever-flourishing, fruitful, and medicinal trees on the bank of this river are Jesus the Tree of life, eternally glorious, and infinitely useful to his people; and his people themselves, as trees of righteousness, by the influence of his Word and Spirit, holding to their profession and grace, honouring God, and being useful to their neighbours around. 13-23. The Jews after their captivity never had the whole territory here mentioned. Few of the ten tribes then returned. Nor was the country ever parcelled out in the manner directed in this and the next chapter. While, therefore, these things may partly respect the state of the Jews when returned from their present dispersion, they chiefly respect the church of Christ, the boundaries of which are appointed by God, and in which all true Israelites, Jews and Gentiles, have their whole portion of blessedness assigned them by God.

Ver. 13-21. The partition of the land commenced with the endowment of the sanctuary, ch. 45. 1; then proceeded to the provision for the city, ch. 45. 6; then for the prince, ch. 45. 7; then followed several necessary religious ordinances; and now the partition of the land among the tribes is resumed. The land of Canaan as here described extends from about 31° to 37° N. lat., and from 34° to 37° E. lon., bounded on the north by a line from the Mediterranean to Hamath; on the east by Damascus, Hauran, Gilead, and the land of Israel east of Jordan to the south point of the East or Dead Sea; thence on the south by Tamar, Kadesh, and a line extending either to the river of Rhinacolora or the Nile, and on the west by the Mediterranean. C.

Ver. 22. The only condition upon which 'strangers' are to claim their freedom, adoption, and inheritance, is, sojourning and begetting children in the land—a condition of naturalization and endowment which no country has ever yet exhibited, but which, spiritually understood, is literally true of the church of Christ, which freely preaches the gospel to every creature, announces salvation to the chief of sinners, and admits to her choicest privileges the baptized believer of every nation under heaven. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a blessed source of oracles, ordinances, and influences is Jesus Christ, God-man, the Lord our righteousness. While divine truths are gradually manifested, and spiritual influences bestowed, it is proper to be carefully searching and applying them. And the more we contemplate or experience them, the more shall we be lost in wonder at their height, depth, length, and breadth. But let us always begin with what is more plain and practical, and admire what we cannot comprehend. Great is the wisdom of God in transmitting his blessings to the very worst of persons and places, and almighty the influence of his Word and Spirit! not even death—a death in trespasses and sins—can withstand it! But, alas! unhappy are they to whom it is a savour of death unto death and damnation! The gospel and its influences find the sinners of mankind in the most diversified and abominable forms of iniquity. But infinite power and grace can apprehend the most outrageous, and render the most ugly and deformed like unto Christ. And it is delightful for ministers, in multitudes, to administer the ordinances of the gospel when Jesus goeth forth with them conquering and to conquer. Glorious in character, persevering and fruitful in good works towards God and men, are his saints!—And there is tified⁴ of the sons of Zadok, which have kept my charge,⁵ which went not astray when the children of Israel went astray, ⁶as the Levites went astray.

12 And this oblation of the land that is offered shall be unto them a thing most holy,⁶ by the border of the Levites.

13 And over against the border of the priests the Levites shall have five and twenty thousand⁷ in length, and ten thousand in breadth: all the length shall be five and twenty thousand, and the breadth ten thousand.

each side (ver. 17), leaving 10,000 reeds or nearly 10 miles on the east and west, as a common for the servants of the city out of all the tribes, ver. 18. On the east and west sides of this square are the royal demesnes, each of which, taking the breadth of the land at 150 miles, would form a square of 50 miles. The calculation by cubits instead of reeds, proportionally reduces this calculation; which, it may be right to add, others have held to be vastly greater; some making the dimensions of the city greater than all Europe; others, perhaps, greater than the habitable portions of the earth. But the reed and the cubit being the only measures mentioned, it is obvious the calculation must be taken from the one or the other. But it matters not for any purpose of interpretation which is adopted. But in addition to what has been adduced (ch. 45. 1), the use of the reed in measuring the city (Re. 11. 1, 2; 15. 2), seems to favour the conclusion, that when the cubit is not mentioned, the reed was the measure intended by Ezekiel.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF EZEKIEL.

It is vain to speak of the distinctive mental qualities or peculiar styles of the prophets; seeing these 'holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost,' and as God severally gave them both thoughts and utterance. The only real distinctive characteristics of the prophets lie in the subjects and objects of their several commissions. Taking this view of Ezekiel, he stands conspicuous among his fellows by the splendour of the visions of God with which he was favoured; and has in this respect none that approach to equality, with the exception of Daniel and John the Divine. Cast over these visions, we, no doubt, find a veil of deep, perhaps of impenetrable, obscurity; which those who cannot lift must contemplate with humility, prayer, and patience, till 'the day dawn and the shadows flee away.' But if Ezekiel present to us some things that are thus obscure, he also sets before us much that is plain. His descriptions and denunciations of national idolatry are calculated for every understanding, and are truly so plain 'that he may run that readeth,' Hab. 2. 2. And they apply not to Judah and Israel alone, but to all generations; for though one form of idolatry has been totally banished from the reformed Christian churches, alas! other forms have disguisedly sprung up in its room; and the idolatry of the imagination or of the intellect, the idolatry of self-love or of self-will, with that 'covetousness that is (literally) idolatry,' have extensively occupied their room. On this ground Ezekiel was not merely a prophet for the Jews, but also for many contemporary nations. Upon these he poured out the judgments of God with remarkable clearness and minuteness of description; so that the records of travellers through these prophetic countries form the best commentary upon this part of the Scriptures.

A few miles to the south-east of the ruins of Babylon, a monument is still pointed out as the tomb of Ezekiel. That this is really the tomb of the prophet is the tradition of the Jews who have inhabited the country ever since the captivity; and who say that he died while on a visit to Babylon. This tomb was first described to Europeans by Benjamin of Tudela; and who adds that it was said to have been erected by the captive king Jeconiah. Benjamin adds that the prince of the captivity with multitudes of the Jews were accustomed to pay an annual visit to the tomb, for the purposes of devotion and trade, and that it was surrounded by several synagogues, and a public library that had subsisted since the time of the first as well as the second temple. It is also visited by Arabian pilgrims and the Jews of Media and Persia.

Those who know the difficulty, the frequent impossibility, of ascertaining the burying-places of eminent men, after the lapse of a few hundred years—and especially those who know how ready superstition is to admit of the slightest evidence that may minister to its morbid sensibilities—will be slow to attach much value to such traditions when found unsupported by contemporary history. It may or it may not be the tomb of the prophet; but would to God that the men who superstitiously visit his tomb, and venerate his dust, would rather study his writings and drink of his spirit. C.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

Ezekiel, a priest, had not begun prophesying to the poor captives in Babylon, when Daniel, a prince, begins to officiate as a prophet at court, and continued about seventy years. He was early famed for wisdom and piety, ch. i. ii.; Eze. 28. 3; 14. 14, 20; was one of the first who were carried captives to Babylon, and lived to see the deliverance. The first six chapters of this book are generally historical and plain, narrating his and his three companions' captivity and education at Babylon; his companions' advancement and deliverance from the fiery furnace; his own interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dreams and Belshazzar's handwriting, and his deliverance from the lions, ch. i. vi. The last six are generally prophetic, containing his four visions of the future state of the world and church of God, ch. vii. xii. [His prophecies contain some remarkable proof that Jesus is the Christ; for the Saviour came exactly at the time he had predicted. For New Testament references to Daniel, see Mat. 24. 2, 15, 30; 25. 46; 26. 23; Mar. 13. 14; Lu. 10. 20; Jn. 5. 28, 29; 16. 24; 1 Co. 15. 24, 41, 42; 2 Co. 5. 21; He. 9. 12; 11. 33; 1 Pe. 2. 21; Re. 5. 11; 15. 3; 20. 12. C.]

The book of Daniel has long been a battle-field for critics. Some of its prophecies detail events with a clearness and fulness which history can scarcely surpass. The date of the book has therefore become a subject of keen controversy. If the date ordinarily assigned to it be admitted, its inspiration cannot be questioned, for its prophetic visions embody an outline of the great events of the eastern world from the time of Nebuchadnezzar to the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes. Nor do they stop there. Other visions exhibit, though in a vista dimmer and more distant, the final establishment of the gospel kingdom, Christ's second coming, and the resurrection. It is thus true, as has recently been shown by Dr. Pusey, that let men assign to the book what date they will, it contains unmistakable prophecy. It is worthy of note that this book is written partly in Hebrew and partly in Chaldee. The reason of this will be obvious to the careful student of Bible history. Hebrew was still in Daniel's day the language of the Jews, and those portions of the book which concerned them and their nation were written in the language familiar to them. Chaldee was the language of the court of Babylon, and hence the officers of the court speak in that language. The first portion of the book, containing the story of Daniel and his companions, is in Hebrew; the answer of the magi to the king (ch. 2. 4) is in Chaldee, which continues to the end of Daniel's first vision, ch. 7. 28. Though the language is thus different, the book is manifestly one in authorship and design. It is arranged on a definite plan; and the languages are selected on an intelligible principle. There are also clear references from some portions of the book to others; thus from the Chaldee in ch. 2. 49; 3. 12, 16, 23, 30, to the Hebrew in ch. i.; and also from the Hebrew in ch. viii. xii., to the Chaldee in ch. vii. CHAPTER I.

1 Jehoiakim's captivity. 3 Ashpenaz taketh Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. 8 They refusing the king's portion, do prosper with pulse and water. 17 Their excellency in wisdom.

IN the third year¹ of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it. 2 And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God, which he carried² into the land of Shinar, to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his god.

CHAP. I.

1 Jehoiakim was raised to the throne of Judah by the king of Egypt, and remained his tributary during three years; but at the close of that period Nebuchadnezzar defeated the Egyptians, and Jehoiakim became tributary to Babylon. At the end of three years he rebelled, but Nebuchadnezzar being otherwise engaged did not depose him till three years after his rebellion, which was the eleventh and last of Jehoiakim's reign. 2 Ki. 23. 34-36; 24. 1, 2; Je. 25. 1, 46. 2. The chronological difficulties may be solved thus. Nebuchadnezzar came against Jerusalem in the third of Jehoiakim, and took it on the fourth. Three whole years after the fourth, Jehoiakim remained tributary to Babylon, and on the eighth rebelled; after which, during three whole years, he remained in rebellion, and in the end of the eleventh was carried captive.—C. 2 Ki. 24. 1. 2 Ch. 36. 6, 7; De. 28. 49-51. 2 Ju. 2. 14. 3 ¶ And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain³ of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

4 Children⁴ in whom was no blemish, but well-favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

5 And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat,⁴ and of the wine which he drank;⁵ so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king.

6 Now among these were of the children of Judah,⁶ Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah;⁶

7 Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah of Shadrach; and to Mishael of Meshach; and to Azariah of Abed-nego.⁸

8 ¶ But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9 Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, ¶ I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces worse liking than the children which are of your sort?²² then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king.

11 Then said Daniel to Melzar,³ whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 12 Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us pulse⁵ to eat,⁶ and water to drink.

13 Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat; and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

14 So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days.

15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

16 Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them pulse.⁷

17 ¶ As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding⁹ in all visions and dreams.

18 Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.

19 And the king communed with them: and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king.

20 And in all matters of wisdom and understanding,¹ that the king inquired of them, he same through the book, majestic in its noble simplicity. As a revealer of God in was educated in the highest wisdom of a people famed for its wisdom. Even this his wisdom but his power. Yet, as the

AND, in the second year² of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and his sleep brake from him.

2 Then the king commanded to call the magicians,³ and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to show the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king.

3 And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.⁴

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriac, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation.

5 The king answered and said to the Chal-deans, The thing is gone from me:⁵ if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dunghill:

6 But if ye show the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me gifts, and rewards, and great honour: therefore show me the dream, and the interpretation thereof.

7 They answered again, and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation of it.

8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would gain⁷ the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me.⁸

9 But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but one decree for you; for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me till the time be changed:
therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can show me the interpretation thereof.

10 ¶ The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can show the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean.

11 And it is a rare thing that the king requireth: and there is none other that can show it before the king, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

12 For this cause the king was angry and

REFLECTIONS.—When men profane God's temple by their sins, it is but just that he should profane it by his judgments. How exactly Hezekiah's pride is punished in the captivity of his seed! They who wish to serve their generation, must not spend their youth in idleness, but in study. And it is shameful for Christians to take less care of educating their children than heathens do of their slaves; and to show less regard to their God than heathens do to their idols. If we receive very furious, and commanded to 'destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

13 And 'the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they 'sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.

14 ¶ Then Daniel 'answered² with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the captain of the king's guard,³ which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

15 He answered⁴ and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel.

16 Then Daniel went in, and desired 'of the king that he would give him time, and that he would show the king the interpretation.

17 Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions;

18 That⁵ they would desire mercies of the God of heaven⁵ concerning this secret, that Daniel and his fellows 'should not perish⁶ with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.

19 Then^a was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

20 Daniel answered⁷ and said, 'Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever; for 'wisdom and might are his:

21 And 'he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he⁸ giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding.

22 He⁹ revealeth the deep and secret things: he^b knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him.

23 I^c thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers,⁸ who hast given me wisdom and might, and 'hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

24 ¶ Therefore Daniel 'went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him, 'Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will show unto the king the interpretation.

25 Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, I have found⁹ a man of the captives of Judah¹ that will make known unto the king the interpretation.

26 The king answered, and said to Daniel,

* The words of Daniel, though arranged in courtly style, are true. Nebuchadnezzar was at that time the first monarch of the earth. He was, as it were, the centre of power. From him, therefore, should all subsequent powers emanate. He was the golden head of that ideal image in which were embodied the successive empires of the world as parts of a whole. Three of these empires were to disappear, each being overthrown by its successor. The fourth was to be divided, and then another power was to arise, different from all others—not made with hands: superior to all others—crushing them to pieces: heavenly in its origin—the kingdom of God: a kingdom without end: it shall stand for ever. That this is the kingdom of Christ cannot be questioned.—F.

whose name was Belteshazzar, "Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?"

27 Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded, 'cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, show unto the king;

28 But 'there is a God in heaven² that revealeth secrets, and maketh³ known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be 'in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;

29 As for thee, O king, thy thoughts came into thy mind⁴ upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter; and 'he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass.

30 But as for me, 'this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but 'for their sakes⁵ that shall make known the interpretation⁶ to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.

31 ¶ Thou, O king, sawest,⁷ and, behold, "a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible.

32 This image's head⁸ was 'of fine gold, 'his breast and his arms of silver,⁹ 'his belly and his thighs² of brass, 33 His² legs of iron,³ his feet part of iron and part of clay.

34 Thou sawest till 'that a stone⁴ was cut out 'without hands,⁶ which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

35 Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became 'like the chaff of the summer thrashing-floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image 'became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

36 This is the dream; and 'we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

37 Thou, O king, art 'a king of kings: 'for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

38 And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. 'Thou art this 'head of gold.⁷

favours from men, let us always view them as the gift of God, and be the more careful to avoid every appearance of evil; and let us always be humble under humbling providences. Let us never be backward to that self-denial which tends to prevent sin: and for that end, let us improve whatever interest we have with the great. Whatever in diet, or anything else, we willingly lose for God's honour, will prove clear gain in the issue. Proper abstemiousness and temperance contribute to the improvement of our mind as well as the health of our body. God honours them that honour him, while they who despise him are lightly esteemed. And they who mourn much with Zion in her distress are, if for their good, spared to share with her in the joys of her deliverance.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 31-45. This great image, beheld in a quickly forgotten dream, represented the successive empires in the world as but an empty show, a terrible but quickly forgotten vision. The golden head was the Chaldean monarchy, extremely rich, and in appearance lasting, including the Assyrian; it continued about 240 years. The breast and arms of silver signified the Medo-Persian, established by Cyrus, which lasted about 204 years. The belly and thighs of brass represented the strong, though less rich, empire of the Greeks, which was chiefly continued in the two king-39 And¹ after thee shall arise ¹another kingdom inferior to thee, and ²another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

40 And the ³fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

41 And whereas thou sawest ⁴the feet and toes part of potter's clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

42 And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken.⁵

43 And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men;⁶ but they shall not cleave one to another,¹ even as iron is not mixed with clay.

44 And in the days² of these kings³ shall the God of heaven ⁴set up a kingdom⁴ which⁵ shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom⁵ shall not be left to other people, but it shall ⁶break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

45 Forasmuch as thou sawest that ⁷the stone was cut out of the mountain ⁸without hands,⁶ and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter:⁷ and the dream is ⁹certain, and the interpretation thereof sure.

46 ¶ Then the king Nebuchadnezzar ¹⁰fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel,⁸ and commanded that they should offer an oblation and sweet odours unto him.

47 The king answered unto Daniel, and said, Of¹¹ a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, and a ¹²revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldst reveal this secret.

48 Then the king made Daniel ¹³a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief¹⁴ of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon.

he set Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, over the affairs of the province of Babylon: but Daniel ¹sat in the gate of the king.

CHAPTER III.

¹ Nebuchadnezzar dedicateth a golden image in Dura. 8 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego are accused for not worshipping the image. 13 They, being threatened, make a good confession. 19 God delivereth them out of the furnace. 26 Nebuchadnezzar seeing the miracle blesseth God.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king ²made an image¹ of gold, whose height was three-score cubits,² and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent ³to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs,³ and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.⁴

3 Then ⁵the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

4 Then an herald cried aloud,⁵ To you it is commanded,⁶ O⁴ people, nations, and languages,

5 That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery,⁷ dulcimer, and all kinds of music,⁸ ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up:

6 And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth,⁹ shall the same hour⁹ be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

7 Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of music,⁹ all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

8 ¶ Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, and ¹⁰accused the Jews.

9 They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, ¹¹O king, live for ever.

doms of Egypt on the south and Syria on the north, lasting in all about 320 years. The legs of iron, and the feet ending in ten toes of iron and clay, never rightly joined, denote the Roman empire, very strong, and very destructive and conquering, which, after having two joint-consuls, and two conjunct emperors of east and west, was at last formed into ten different kingdoms, consisting partly of the old Roman subjects, and partly of the barbarous nations which invaded and ravaged the empire: it is not yet quite destroyed. The little stone, cut out of the mountain without hands, and breaking in pieces the remains of these empires, and becoming a great mountain, filling the whole earth, is the gospel church, supernaturally formed in the countries and on the ruins of these ancient empires, and which did, in the apostolic age, and will, especially in the millennium, extend over the whole habitable world. See Introduction, ch. iv. sect. xii.-xv. xix.

Ver. 35. A mountain filling the whole earth, has appeared to some an unintelligible figure. The difficulty, however, lies not in the image, but in the manner of picturing it. For example, Mount Sinai, Mount Hor, Mount Seir, are not single mountains, but vast mountain ranges, which it was easy to picture extended over the whole earth. C.

REFLECTIONS.—To what perplexing cares and anxieties are great men subjected by God! To what pangs, what sleepless hours, because of fear in the night! It is dreadful to be under the power of wicked and unreasonable men. Yet by the most unexpected means God can punish impostors and exalt the faithful. How inexpressibly valuable are friends mighty in prayer!—Fervent prayer is powerful to unlock the mysteries of Providence. And there is great need of earnestness in it when the faithful are in danger of suffering as evil-doers. God must be thankfully acknowledged as the bestower of wisdom and every good gift. But humble souls will rather attribute the obtaining of his favours to the prayers of their friends than their own: and distinguished abilities never appear so grand as when accompanied with uncommon humility. Whatever influence we have with great men should be improved in attempts to bring them to the true God; as no princes, no, not the greatest, have any power but from him. Earthly kingdoms do but overturn one another to make way for the fixed and everlasting kingdom of Christ. And as kings ought to advance to power the qualified children of God, so they whom Providence exalts ought never to forget their old friends.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—At what expense will proud men dare to affront JEHOVAH, and mark their gratitude to an idol which never showed them a favour! Sinners readily comply with the most wicked commands of terrible tyrants: and few can at 10 Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, shall fall down and worship the golden image:

11 And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

12 There are certain Jews,¹ whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, have not regarded thee;² they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

13 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar, in his rage and fury, commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Then they brought these men before the king.

14 Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up?

15 Now, if ye be ready, that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made, well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace: and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?

16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter.

17 If it be so, our God, whom we serve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king.⁶

18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

19 ¶ Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

20 And he commanded the most mighty men⁹ that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace.

21 Then these men were bound in their coats,¹ their hosen,² and their hats,³ and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

22 Therefore because the king's commandment⁴ was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame⁵ of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors,⁷ Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

25 He answered and said, Lo, I see⁸ four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt;⁹ and the form of the fourth is like the Son¹ of God.²

26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth³ of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of the midst of the fire.

27 And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

28 Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god except their own God.

29 Therefore I make a decree,⁵ That every people, nation, and language, which speak any thing amiss⁶ against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill; because there is no other god that can deliver after this sort.

once withstand the charms of music and the terrors of a fiery furnace. Everywhere there are villains ready to accuse the faithful servants of God. But it is honourable to the cause of God when, in the way of duty, we avoid all parleying with temptation, and drop all care about the consequences; when faith in God casts out slavish fears; and when self-denial prepares for the severest conflicts. How terrible and violent the passions of proud men become when they are indulged! they bid defiance to everything human! and it is dangerous to be the instruments of persecution and cruelty to tyrannical princes; but always safe and honourable to suffer for Jesus Christ. He will walk with his people in that fiery furnace, and they shall reign with him on his throne. God can easily convince the proudest, that wherein they deal proudly he is above them; and can extort confessions of his Godhead from such as had been just ready to curse him to his face. But he greatly honours those who obey, and seek praise of him rather than of men: and it is a mercy to his church to have the mouths of her enemies stopped, even when their hearts are not turned to God. And princes should prudently prefer those to places of power and trust whom they have found faithful to God.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 13. A watcher and an holy one. By consulting Ge. 31. 49; Job 14. 16; Je. 31. 28; 44. 27, the providence of God will be found explained by God's 'watching' over human affairs either in relation to good or evil; and as it is evident from ver. 17 that 'the decree of the watchers' is the purpose of providence; and as from ver. 8, 18 it appears that Nebuchadnezzar directly ascribes 'holiness' to God; therefore the conclusion seems manifest, that by 'watcher and holy one,' he meant some such visible manifestation of God, ever watchful in providence, ever holy in nature, as that to which he had previously referred in the miraculous preservation of the three confessors, ch. 3. 25. C. Ver. 30. He had not founded, but he had extended the city, and greatly beautified it. It might truly be called 'great,' being fifty miles in circumference, surrounded by walls 200 royal cubits high by 50 in breadth, and entered by 100 gates of solid brass, CHAPTER IV.

1 Nebuchadnezzar acknowledgeth God's eternal dominion, 4 maketh relation of his dream, which the magicians could not interpret. 8 Daniel heareth the dream. 19 He interpreteth it. 28 The story of the event.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king, ^aunto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace¹ be multiplied unto you.

2 I thought it good² to show the signs and wonders that the high God hath wrought toward me.

3 How³ great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders! his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.

4 ¶ I Nebuchadnezzar was ^aat rest³ in mine house, and flourishing in my palace:

5 I saw a dream⁴ which made me afraid, and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me.

6 Therefore made I a decree⁵ to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.

7 Then⁶ came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers: and I told the dream before them; but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.

8 ¶ But at the last⁷ Daniel came in before me, whose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, and in whom is the spirit of the holy gods:⁴ and before him I told the dream, saying,

9 O Belteshazzar, master of the magicians, because I know that the spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret⁸ troubleth thee, tell me⁶ the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.

10 Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed: I saw,⁷ and, behold, a tree in the midst of the earth,⁸ and the height thereof was great.

11 The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth.

12 The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: the beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it.

13 I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, and, behold, a watcher⁹ and an holy one came down from heaven.

14 He cried aloud,¹ and said thus, Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches.²

4 The original is plural; but may, according to the probability of the language, be translated 'Holy God.'—See Wine's Translation. Is it not, however, more than probable that the king, having provided for the instructions of Daniel, makes reference to the plural form of the name of God in the 1. 1, 2, &c. and to the Trinity of persons in the divine Unity, with which the Jews were at all times well acquainted, and many traces of which, though blotted, obscured, and perverted, are also to be found amongst the heathen poets and philosophers? This view is the more confirmed by the fact, that Nebuchadnezzar employs the word 'Spirit' in the uniform sense of the Old and New Testaments.

15 Nevertheless, leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass,³ in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth:

16 Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times⁴ pass over him.

17 This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones;⁵ to the intent that the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest⁶ of men.

18 This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation: but thou art able; for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee.

19 ¶ Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.⁷

21 Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation:

22 It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven,⁸ and thy dominion to the end of the earth.

23 And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him;

24 This is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the Most High, which is come upon my lord the king:

25 That they shall drive thee¹ from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass² as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of

has ever been ranked as one of the chief wonders of the world, and its ruins still remain to attest its former greatness—a melancholy example of the vanity of man—an incontestable evidence of the providence of God. C.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY IN CAIRO. [Daniel, iv.]—The picturesqueness of Oriental civilization strikes with great force every one upon his first visit to the East. There is much of color everywhere. The people seem to be slow and dull and to possess a large share of physical inertia and repose, but if we look outside to the material elements of Eastern civilization, everything is so highly colored as would naturally lead one to suppose that they were the expressions of excited imagination. The scene which we give above of a marriage ceremony in Cairo is of a piece with the whole of Egyptian civilization. The scene is festive and picturesque to the last degree. One would suppose from seeing such a procession go by that the parties were playing at marriage. The procession is headed by a body of musicians, and amid it all there is laughter and shouting and the jingle of tambourines.

28 ¶ All⁵ this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.

29 At the end of twelve months⁵ he walked in⁶ the palace of the kingdom of Babylon.

30 The⁶ king spake and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?

31 While⁷ the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, ²to thee it is spoken; The kingdom is departed from thee:

33 The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar:⁷ and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen,⁸ and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.

34 And ²at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar ¹lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned⁹ unto me; and I blessed⁶ the Most High; and I praised and honoured him that ¹liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation:

35 And⁷ all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and ¹he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?

In this disease the patient sometimes fancies himself a piece of furniture, a beast, &c. 1 This is a very difficult portion of chronology. The common account closes Nebuchadnezzar's reign in B.C. 562, succeeded by Evil-merodach in B.C. 561, who succeeded by Neriglissar, B.C. 560, and who perished in battle against Cyrus, and whose son succeeded by his son Labrosarchod, B.C. 555, and being assassinated by Gobrias, was succeeded by Belshazzar, B.C. 554, in whose reign the city was taken by Cyrus, B.C. 538. But, according to Hales, the succession was thus:—Nebuchadnezzar, who ascended the throne B.C. 604, was succeeded by his son Evil-merodach, B.C. 561. He was succeeded by Belshazzar, B.C. 554, who was killed by conspirators on the night of the feast, leaving a son, Labrosarchod, who, after a reign of nine months, was peacefully succeeded by Darius the Mede, whose viceroy, Nabonius, revolting, Cyrus marched against Babylon and took it, as foretold by Jeremiah, ch. li.—C.

CHAPTER V.

1 Belshazzar's impious feast. 5 A hand-writing, unknown to the magicians, troubleth the king. 10 At the recommendation of the queen, Daniel is brought. 17 He, reproving the king of pride and idolatry, readeth and interpreteth the writing. 30 Belshazzar slain; the kingdom translated to the Medes.

BELSHAZZAR¹ the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand.

2 Belshazzar, whiles he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels which his father² Nebuchadnezzar had taken out³ of the temple which was in Jerusalem; that the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, might drink therein.

3 Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem; and the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank in them.

4 They drank wine, and ⁴praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone.

5 ¶ In⁵ the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall of the king's palace; and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote.

6 Then⁶ the king's countenance⁴ was ⁵changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the ⁶joints⁷ of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another.

7 The king cried aloud ²to bring in the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers. And the king spake, and said to the wise men of Babylon, Whosoever shall read this writing, and show me the interpretation thereof, ¹shall be clothed with scarlet,⁹ and have a chain of gold about his neck, and shall be the ³third ruler in the kingdom.

8 Then came in all the king's wise men:⁸ but markedly rebuke or deliver us, we ought to manifest his dealings to those around us. And the more wisdom and power we discern in his works of creation or providence, the more wonderful will they be in our eyes. God can easily reach the greatest, and make the terrors of mankind tormentors to themselves amidst their nightly repose. It is common for wicked men to apply to the devil, or to anything, rather than to God, for instruction and comfort. But what is the chaff to the wheat? What amazing pomp and grandeur sinners sometimes arrive at on earth! yet saints, angels, and divine persons shall concur to debase them. With deep concern faithful ministers observe ruin impending on the heads of many quite unaffected with it themselves. And with great freedom and prudence ought they to give warning of it; for sinners must be often courted to secure their own mercies. And they who wish to know God's mind, ought to encourage ministers in an unrestrained freedom with them. Perhaps they may have time for repentance allotted them before they are ruined. And in repentance, it is not enough to cease from doing evil; we must also learn to do well.—How strangely pride prevails after the most humbling warnings! and few sins more certainly or fearfully provoke God's judgments than extravagant pride. Easily he can render the self-fancied deity a mad and senseless brute! But if we return to him by penitential acknowledgments, he is ready to restore us our dignity and honour. Our afflictions last no longer than to accomplish God's end of their mission. And therefore all the accounts which we give or receive of God's marvellous works ought to begin and end with his praise.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how mad is it to riot in luxury and carnal security—in drunkenness and uncleanness; when death and hell stand ready to receive us! But awfully criminal is that mirth in which men profane or jest with sacred things. Immorality and impiety, drunkenness and idolatry, greatly promote one another. And indeed drunken worshippers are good enough for dunghill gods. How easily

2 And over these, three presidents, of whom Daniel was first; that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

3 Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

4 ¶ Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him.

5 Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

6 Then these presidents and princes assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, King Darius, live for ever.

7 All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any God or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions.

8 Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.⁵

9 Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree.

10 ¶ Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber towards Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.⁶

11 Then these men assembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

12 Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true,⁸ according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

13 Then answered they, and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

14 Then the king, when he heard these words,

The Jews turned in prayer towards the most holy place in the temple, where the ark of the covenant long indicated the presence of Jehovah. In exile Daniel followed the same custom. He might have prayed in secret, but this would have been a compromise of principle, and he was determined at whatever risk to maintain the honour of his God, and in faith to show to all his entire devotion to and trust in him. His position now was analogous to that of his brethren in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and his conduct was equally noble. — P.

The den is generally represented as a natural cavern with a single opening covered by a stone. But nothing can be more unsuited to the habits of the lion and the means of its comfortable and healthy preservation. Besides, if the den was at Babylon, the existence of a natural cavern in an alluvial plain is very improbable — scarcely conceivable. But whether at Babylon or elsewhere, it seems most natural to imagine the den either a building after the manner of a Roman amphitheatre, where it is well known that criminals, yea and martyrs of Jesus as faithful as Daniel, were wont to be cast to the lions; or else a natural valley, and not a cave, surrounded by a wall, and entered by a single door. — C.

Though an absolute monarch in some departments, he was equally limited in others, and thus unable to prevail with his perverse counsellors to stay his inconsiderate decree. — Note.

This example strongly exemplifies the danger of one bad principle — a danger that extends equally to legislation, morals, or theology.

The law of the Medes and Persians altereth not. The statute which the king establisheth may not be changed. Flattery must endow human wisdom and power with the perfection of Deity, to guard against uncertainty, immutability is adopted; and Daniel must die — not that guilt may be punished, but that a bad principle may be observed. — C.

was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him; and he laboured till the going down of the sun to deliver him.

15 Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, that no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

16 Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God, whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

17 And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords, that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

18 ¶ Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were instruments of music brought before him; and his sleep went from him.

19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

20 And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel; and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?

21 Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever.

22 My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

23 Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God.

24 ¶ And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions; and them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

25 ¶ Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you.

26 I make a decree, that in every dominion

ous pride and profaneness, and what they may expect for their punishment: and God will procure honour to such, even from them who condemn his own word.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 9. How contrary to reason; how mad this decree! The thing would seem impossible, were not the effects of pride and flattery so sadly exhibited every day. These wicked conspirators may have chosen their time when the wine and the viol had dethroned the understanding; for man reduced below the level of the beast is the ready dupe and instrument of every Satanic device. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Steadfast uprightness is the best method of retaining favour and honour in courts, however wicked: by that men may preserve their places amidst strange revolutions. And the more our neighbours wait for our halting, let us be the more circumspect. It is extremely honourable if they can find nothing to accuse us of but the regular worshipping of God. If we thus suffer, we need neither be afraid nor founder was discovered from an inscription beneath the entrance arch at the east end of the circus dedicating it to Divus Romulus. The walls which enclosed the circus have been preserved almost entirely. In length they were 1574 feet, in breadth 269 feet. The circus was large enough to accommodate 18,000 spectators. The two towers we see were supposed to have been the seats of the judges. There is a gate in the right side of the wall through which the dead were carried out.

CIRCUS OF ROMULUS—BY WHICH ST. PAUL PASSED AS HE WALKED IN CHAINS ALONG THE APPIAN WAY TO ROME. [Daniel, vii.]—As illustrating the great worldly Roman empire which Daniel saw in a vision under the figure of a beast, we give a picture of the Circus of Romulus. This stands on the left of the Appian Way, passing out from Rome about three miles from the city. This circus was built by Maxentius in honor of his son Romulus. The name of the

of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the living God, and steadfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

27 He^c delivereth and rescueth, and he^d worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power^e of the lions.

28 So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of 'Cyrus the Persian.'

CHAPTER VII.

1 Daniel's vision of the four beasts, 9 and of God's kingdom. 15 The interpretation thereof.

IN the first year of 'Belshazzar' king of Babylon, 'Daniel had' a dream, and visions of his head upon his bed: then he 'wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.'

2 Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, 'the four winds' of the heaven strove upon the 'great sea.'

3 And 'four great 'beasts' came 'up from the sea, diverse one from another.

4 The first was 'like a lion,' and had eagles' wings: I beheld till the wings thereof 'were plucked, and' it 'was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.

5 And, behold, 'another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side,' and it had 'three ribs' in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.

6 After this I beheld, and, lo, 'another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it 'four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

7 After this I saw in the night visions, and, behold, 'a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it 'was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.'

8 I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them 'another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were 'eyes like the eyes of man, and 'a mouth speaking great things.

9 I beheld till the thrones were 'cast down, and the 'Ancient of days did sit, whose 'garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: 'his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire.

10 A 'fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: 'thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: 'the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

11 I beheld then, because of 'the voice of the great words which the horn spake; I beheld, even till 'the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.

12 As concerning 'the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged^a for a season and time.

13 I saw in the night visions, and, behold, ashamed. And it is highly honourable to have our habitations temples for God, and houses of daily, of frequent prayer; and never to omit duty for fear of suffering. But, alas! how unhappy are most princes in the information and advices which they receive! What is done from a conscientious regard to God is represented as done in contempt of their authority: and they are often deceived into that which is farthest from their intentions. Their flatterers, and their vain-glorious humour, plunge them into fearful depths of vexation and torment. But God wonderfully preserves his faithful worshippers: he is a present help in their trouble, and will stand by them in the hour of temptation. And it is kind in such as share his bounty readily to overlook the fault of their unwilling injurers. But dreadful is the danger of their malicious accusers and persecutors. They shall fall into the pit which they had digged for others. The Lord is known by the judgments which he executes; and can make even heathens publish his honours.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1, 8, 11, 12, 17–25. The tempestuous SEA denotes this world filled with contention, violence, and confusion. To represent their emptiness and gradual decay, the four successive monarchies had been represented by a terrible image seen in a forgotten dream. Here, to represent their mischievous nature, they are represented as ravenous beasts. The LION, with eagle's wings soon plucked, and his heart turned into the heart of a man, represents the Chaldean monarchy, strong and despotic, rapid in its conquests; but quickly after Nebuchadnezzar's death all dismembered, weakened, and dispirited. The BEAR, raising itself on one side, having three ribs in its mouth, and devouring much flesh, represents the Medo-Persian monarchy, fierce and savage, but at last lazy and luxurious, raising up itself on the side of Persia, carrying its conquests almost only to the westward, conquering the three kingdoms of Lydia, Chaldaea, and Egypt, and making fearful slaughter and spoil, especially among the Chaldeans. The LEOPARD, with four wings and four heads, marked the Grecian monarchy, agile, crafty, and spotted by a mixture of vices and virtues;—under Alexander, astonishingly rapid in its conquests; and, after his death, parted into the four kingdoms of Macedonia, Lesser Asia, Syria, and Egypt. The fourth beast, different in form, and dreadfully terrible and strong, with iron teeth, and ten horns, represented the Roman empire, which, in a most fearful manner, by powerful armies, conquered and tyrannized over the known world for many ages, and at last was divided into ten different kingdoms or states. The LITTLE HORN, which sprung up after the rest, and plucked up three of the former, and which had eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things, is the Papal authority, which arose from small beginnings, and, dispossessing three of the Italian powers, became a civil as well as an ecclesiastical principality; and which is noted for craft, circumspection, and vigilance; for blasphemous boasting of their own excellencies and prerogatives, even against God, his laws, and ordinances; for making proud decrees to bind men's consciences; and for the persecution of his people.—It continues 1260 years, or three times, or years, and a half, in prophetic language;—and on account of it, Rome, the seat thereof, will be at last destroyed: whereas, though the Chaldeans, Persians, and Greeks had their imperial power taken from them, they long remained a people.

Ver. 9, 10, 13, 14, 18, 22, 26, 27 represent JEHOVAH as judging and condemning to ruin these monarchies, especially the Roman, that the gospel kingdom of his Son might be established in the world. His white robes denote his unspotted righteousness and holiness in all his proceedings. His white hairs represent his eternity, venerable majesty, and the ripeness of his counsels. His fiery throne his awful scrutiny and fearful condemnations. Its burning wheels and fiery stream denote the swift execution of his sentences and fearful severity of his judgments. His numerous ministers are his angels, and the agents in his providence. The opening of the books denotes the exact discovery he makes of men's works, and the infinite equity and regularity of his decisions. The power here given to the Son of man implies not only his ascension into heaven, but his authority to destroy the Roman and Antichristian powers, in order that his gospel church may fill the whole world, especially in the millennium.

Ver. 6. A leopard—a beast of great swiftness, that springs upon its prey—a striking emblem of the rapid conquests of Alexander of Macedon. Wings—four heads—the four kingdoms of Macedon and Greece, Thrace and Bithynia, Egypt, Syria, into which the Grecian empire was divided on the death of Alexander. C.

Ver. 7. A fourth beast—the Roman empire—'diverse from all the beasts that were before it'—not in language (for in that it was akin to the Greek); nor in religion, for it was idolatrous; nor in form of government, for in that it was in common with all the others; but it was 'diverse' chiefly in this characteristic—its predecessors all openly professed conquest, that they might enslave; Rome always professed reluctant interference, that she might extend popular liberty; and under this mask became, in the language of her flatterers, 'the mistress of the world.' While, in the end, she left not one shred of liberty beyond the privilege of 'Roman citizenship,' most sparingly bestowed upon favoured individuals or cities. Ten horns—ten kingdoms, ver. 24. As 'seven' is the emblem of completeness in relation to progressive time, so 'ten' is the emblem of completeness in relation to co-existent property. C.

Ver. 9. Cast down. Rather, till they were placed or set up for judgment.—Ancient of days. God the Father, on the throne of power, in the process of putting all things under the feet of Jesus, 1 Co. 15. 27. C.

Ver. 11. Great words—such as the assumption of 'infallibility,' power to absolve from oaths: to impose new laws: to sell deliverance from purgatory, and grant titles even in heaven.—Till the beast was slain. Till the western Roman monarchy, in all its forms, was destroyed—an awful warning to Europe! *Be

GATE OF HADRIAN—IN THE GREAT GRECIAN EMPIRE WHICH AP-PEARED IN THE VISION OF DANIEL. [Daniel, vii.]—In this seventh chapter of Daniel he has visions of four great worldly empires, viewed in their religious aspects, under the figure of four beasts. These empires are the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian and the Roman. We give as an illustration of the great Grecian empire that for a time ruled the world, a picture of the Gate of Hadrian from the Acropolis in Athens. This arch stands to the northwest of the temple of Jupiter Olympus, and in the above view we are looking toward the northwest. The building is supposed to have served no other purpose than that of a sort of triumphal landmark. On the west side toward the Acropolis this inscription is written over the arch: "This is Athens, the old city of Theseus." On the east side is the inscription: "This is the city of Hadrian, and not of Theseus."

one¹ like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the 'Ancient of days, and ²they brought him near before him.

14 And there ¹was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion ^{is} ²an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom ^{that} which shall not be destroyed.³

15 ¶ I Daniel ¹was grieved in my spirit in the midst of ^{my} body,⁴ and the visions of my head troubled me.

16 I came near unto ¹one of them that stood by, and ²asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

17 These great beasts, which are four, are four⁵ kings, ^{which} shall arise ¹out of the earth.

18 But the saints of the Most High⁵ shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.⁶

19 Then I would know the truth⁷ of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others,⁸ exceeding dreadful, whose teeth ^{were} of iron, and his nails of brass; ^{which} devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

20 And of the ten horns that ^{were} in his head, and ^{of} the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even ^{of} that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose⁹ look ^{was} more stout than his fellows.

21 I beheld, and the same horn ¹made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

6 To understand the full force of this promise, we must connect it with the vision of the Son of Man. All power is conferred upon him. He assumes it not for himself merely, but as the model, the representative, the head of his church. The saints of the Most High rule in the person of their Redeemer. Through him they are made kings and priests; they shall reign with him for ever and ever.—P.

10 This is a grand and most instructive vision in ver. 13, 14. It is especially important as throwing light upon that name—Son of Man—which our Lord so commonly takes to himself. It illustrates also many of those passages in the Gospels in which the name is used in a peculiar and emphatic manner. The first thing that strikes us in comparing this with the other parts of the vision is that we have here the symbol of intellect and reason as opposed to, and triumphing over, mere brute force. We have next indicated the origin and nature of his dignity. It is not of earth like the others. Its source is in heaven; its emblems of glory and power are heavenly. We have next the introduction of the Son of Man, the symbol and model of regenerated humanity, into the presence of the pure and holy God. We have next—and this is the main, the culminating point of the vision—we have the confession upon the part of Man of omnipotent and everlasting power—a power absolutely without limit and without end. In this respect the vision may be compared with our Lord's own glorious words in Mat. 28. 18; and with Paul's statement in Ep. 1.20-22.—P.

23 Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be ¹the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth,⁹ and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

24 And the ¹ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings ^{that} shall arise: and ¹another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Daniel's vision of the ram and he-goat. 13 The days of suspension of the daily sacrifice, and desolation of the sanctuary. 15 Gabriel comforteth Daniel, and interpreteth the vision.

IN the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, ^{even} unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me ¹at the first.

2 And I saw ¹in a vision; and it came to wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth; kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish: blessed are all they that put their trust in him." Ps. 2. 10. C.

Ver. 12. Had their dominion taken away. The Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, and Grecian monarchies were successively destroyed, as influential powers; but they are still in being under different names, and continue to drag out a dependent and merely tolerated existence, of which the only security is, not their own internal strength, but the mutual jealousy of the great European powers. C.

Ver. 18. Saints of the Most High may literally be rendered, 'But the righteous ones of the holy ones (or holy places, see Ep. 2. 6) shall receive the kingdom.' The idea of 'places' is not merely sustained by the marginal authority and Ep. 2. 6, but by the words translated 'most high God,' ch. 3. 26; and 'high God,' ch. 3. 32, which are the same in both, and literally signify 'God of the high, or highest, place.' C.

Ver. 24. The Heruli, Ostrogoths, and Lombards were successively overcome, and their territory annexed to the Papacy, under pretence, nay, perhaps at first, with the sincere intention of being used as means for extending the gospel—and thus the popedom became a temporal kingdom among the ten kingdoms of the West. C.

Ver. 25. Shall wear out the saints. By persecutions; thus the early crusades nearly extirpated the Waldenses and Albigenses; thus the Inquisition suppressed, and for many years seemed to have annihilated, every seed of the Reformation in Italy and Spain: while in Germany, France, Great Britain, and Ireland, massacres, martyrdoms, and dragonades were successively employed to 'wear out' the patience of the saints, extinguish their light, and leave the earth in darkness.—Until a time and times and the dividing of time. 'Time,' a year; 'times,' two years; 'dividing,' half a year: 1260 prophetic days, a day for a year, Eze. 4. 6. At what time these years commence is matter of most serious question. They have generally been dated from 533, when Justinian issued his first edict in favour of the popedom; but others commence as high as 756. Time will reveal it, for the word is sure. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy is that retirement from business and courts which is filled up with intimate fellowship with God, and with discoveries of the secrets of his covenant and providence! What a troubled, unsettled, ever-changing, and noisy world is ours, made by the ambitious and contentious men who dwell in it! But all their empires, established by iniquity, are but contemptible things before the eternal God, and mischievous and destructive to one another! Infinite is the glory and majesty, the power and equity, of the Most High; and certain, but tremendous, his appearance for the ruin of his opposers and the establishment of his church! Yea, the reproach of Jesus' cross is effectually wiped away in his solemn exaltation to glory; and shall be in the glory of his church, especially in the millennial and heavenly state. O how affecting are noted revelations from God! There is great need to search into their meaning by prayer and meditation; and, conscious of our weakness, to consult such as can instruct us. And if we ask we shall find. If we run to and fro in diligent search, we shall understand knowledge.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 3-8, 20-22. The RAM with two horns, of which the last sprung was the highest, pushing westward, northward, and southward, and without any effectual resistance, denotes the empire of the Medes and more powerful Persians, which pushed its conquests all along from the Euxine Sea and the Hellespont on the north, to the river Indus on the south, and as far as African Ethiopia and Lydia on the west, containing in all about 1,600,000 square miles. The he-goat, which came flying from the west, and had a notable horn between his eyes, denotes the Grecian monarchy under Alexander marching forces with prodigious rapidity into Persia, conquering it, and erecting a still greater empire on the ruins of it. The four horns which sprung up after the notable horn of the he-goat was broken, refer to the four generals which, after Alexander's death, parted his empire into four kingdoms, of Macedonia, Lesser Asia, Syria, and Egypt. 9-14, 23-25. The little horn which sprung from one of the four horns, and waxed exceeding great, cast down the host of heaven, and magnified himself against their prince, abolished the daily sacrifice, and trode the sanctuary under foot, 2300 days, mornings and evenings, till at last it was broken without hand, denotes Antiochus Epiphanes, a Syro-Grecian king, who, by craft, and by the assistance of some neighbours, obtained the kingdom instead of his nephew; and, becoming strong, persecuted the Jews, profaned their sanctuary, set their high-priesthood to sale, abolished their daily sacrifices about three years, murdered multitudes of them, and, after vowing to extirpate them, was cut off by the fearful vengeance of God. He may also be considered as typical of the popish Antichrist, that chief corrupter and destroyer of the Christian church.

Ver. 3. A ram. The emblem of the Medo-Persian empire was, in the former vision, a 'bear,' ch. 7. 5, emerged from its forest—from a state of savage and uncivilized life; now the emblem is a 'ram'—the empire more civilized, but not the less bent upon universal conquest.—Two horns. The Medes and Persians, ver. 20, of which Persia, that rose into notice last, soon became the greatest, and gave name to the whole empire, which never persecuted the Jews, and abides, though in weakness, till this day. See ch. 7. 12. C.

Ver. 9. A little horn—applied by some to Antiochus Epiphanes; by others to the Romans; by others to Mahomet. That it cannot prefigure Antiochus seems evident from the fact that the power of 'the little horn' was to continue unto 2300 days, ver. 14, which, if literal days, were not fulfilled in the case of Antiochus, for he first took Jerusalem and profaned the temple in 170 B.C., and commenced his persecution of their religion in 168 B.C. But his army was conquered by Judas in 165 B.C., when the sanctuary was cleansed, and the worship restored by Judas;

THE PLACE DE LA CONSTITUTION, ATHENS—ATHENS WAS A FLOURISHING CITY AT THE TIME DANIEL THE PROPHET WROTE HIS BOOK, AND HE REFERS TO GREECE AS THE GREAT POWER WHICH IS TO STRUGGLE WITH PERSIA. [Daniel, viii.]—In the eighth chapter of Daniel the struggle is predicted between the Persian and the Grecian powers. The animals under which these powers were represented were the ram and the he-goat. At the time this prophecy was written the Corinthian order of architecture was invented in Greece by Callimachus. Anacreon, the poet, was alive, as well as Pythagoras, the philosopher, and the third tyranny of Pisistratus was being endured at Athens. We give as illustrating the Grecian side of this history a picture of the Place de la Constitution. In the center of these grounds is the residence of King George the first. This king was placed on the throne of Greece in 1863. He is the son of the king of Denmark, and brother-in-law to the Prince of Wales. He is popular with his people, and in times of distress and calamity he leads in relieving the suffering, and in giving comfort and encouragement to the people.

26 And ⁷the vision of the evening and the morning⁶ which was told is true: wherefore ⁸shut thou up the vision; for it shall be for many days.

27 And I Daniel ⁹fainted, and was sick certain days: afterward I rose up, and ¹⁰did the king's business; and I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Daniel considering the time of the captivity, 3 maketh confession of his people's sins. 16 And prayeth for the restoration of Jerusalem. 20 Gabriel informeth him of the seventy weeks.

IN the first year of ¹Darius, the son of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the Medes,¹ which² was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans;

8 O LORD, ¹¹to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee.

ANCIENT STONE DOORS, TIBERIAS—A CITY ON LAKE GALILEE, IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF WHICH OUR SAVIOR PERFORMED MOST OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [DANIEL, ix: 24.]—"Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy." The prophecy contained in the 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th verses of the ninth chapter of Daniel is one of the most remarkable found in the Scriptures. There isn't space enough here to explain this prophecy, but it is generally conceded to refer to Christ, and many authorities claim that the exact time of his coming was foreseen and calculated by Daniel. This furnishes an interesting study. We give here as an illustration a picture of ancient stone doors found in Tiberias, a city upon Lake Galilee, around which our Savior performed so many of His miracles and uttered so many of His remarkable discourses. The women we see in the door belong to the Jewish race.

21 Yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man 'Gabriel,⁵ whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to 'fly swiftly,⁶ touched⁷ me 'about the time of the evening oblation.

22 And he 'informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and⁷ understanding.

26 And after threescore and two weeks 'shall Messiah be cut off, but not⁹ for himself: and the people of the prince that shall come 'shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a 'flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined.¹

CHAPTER X.

1 Daniel, having humbled himself, seeth a glorious vision. 10 Being troubled with fear, he is comforted by the angel.

IN the third year of 'Cyrus king of Persia, a thing was 'revealed unto Daniel, whose name was called Belteshazzar; and the thing was 'true, but the time appointed was long:¹ and 'he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision.

2 In^e those days I Daniel was mourning three full weeks.²

3 I⁹ ate no pleasant bread,³ neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks⁴ were fulfilled.

4 And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, 'as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel;⁵

5 Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, 'behold, 'a certain man⁷ clothed^j in linen, whose loins were 'girded with 'fine gold of Uphaz.

6 His^a body also was like the beryl, and 'his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and 'his arms and his feet like in colour to polished brass, and 'the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude.

7 And I Daniel 'alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves.

8 Therefore I was left alone, and saw this he might have the more leisure to make war against the Jews; by which their temple was destroyed, their civil and ecclesiastical constitution overthrown, and themselves generally murdered or driven from the country; under the dreadful effects of which they have remained for above 1700 years past. [See Introduction, ch. iv. sec. xviii.]

Ver. 25. This was not the 'commandment' of Cyrus, which related merely to the temple, Ezr. 1. 1-3; nor of Darius, which only confirmed the former, Ezr. vi. 1; nor of the 7th of Artaxerxes, which merely confirmed the decrees of his predecessors, Ezr. 7. 1, 13, 31; but is the decree of the 20th Artaxerxes, Ne. 2. 1, 6-8, and from this date the 70 weeks are to be computed. Now the 20th Artaxerxes was 445 B.C. Then take 70 Chaldee years, equal to 69 Julian; and so 478 Julian years, making 483 Chaldee years, will terminate A.D. 33, the date of Messiah's death. If the time be reckoned from the 7th Artaxerxes, the result is the same. Thus, Artaxerxes' 7th is 457 B.C., which, taken from 490, the whole 70 weeks, arrives at the same date, A.D. 33. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The near fulfilment of God's promises animates the believing mind to earnest prayer for it. But, alas! how shameful and criminal is the conduct that exposes God's people to his righteous judgments, which so exactly correspond with his threatenings! The desolations of God's sanctuary are a great grief to gracious souls. But it is an animating encouragement to prayer to consider his readiness to forgive sins, his ability to supply our wants, and that he has done so much for his people in former times, and can glorify his name, his Christ, his justice and mercy, and his relation to us, in our deliverance! Yea, God sometimes makes immediate and sensible returns to the prayers of his people, and gives them more than they ask. And with great humility and serious consideration ought such favours to be received! Necessary, great, and glorious, and fixed in every circumstance, is Jesus' incarnation, his union with the Holy Ghost, his labours and death for sinners; and terrible the judgment incurred by his obstinate despisers. But great is the mercy that, when some circumstances in Scripture are left in great obscurity, the principal things are expressed so plainly that he that runs may read and understand them.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 5, 6. Christ's clothing of fine linen denotes his righteousness as our Saviour, and his holy and righteous government. His golden girdle denotes his excellency, faithfulness, and readiness to fulfil his work. His body as the beryl denotes him as beautiful, the Lord from heaven. His countenance as lightning denotes his awful majesty. His eyes as lamps of fire denote his infinite knowledge, terrible to the wicked. His arms and feet as polished brass denote his almighty power to uphold his church, and tread down her enemies. His loud voice, his terrible judgments, and powerful spread of his gospel. 13, 20. The angel Gabriel had to baffle the attempts of Cambyses, Cyrus' son, or of some evil angel at the Persian court, who laboured to stir up mischief against the Jews, and had none to assist him herein but Jesus Christ, or some principal angel.

Ver. 1. True. No conjecture of his own, but a revelation from God; and, the time appointed long, the prophecy extending over a long period of future history. C.

Ver. 2. Mourning—because of the interruption to the building of the temple; the contentment of the rich Jews to remain among the Gentiles; and their niggardly aid to their returning brethren, and their sad insensibility and blindness. C.

Ver. 3. The prince of the kingdom of Persia. 'The accuser of the brethren,' Job 1. 9. The withstander of good men and good purposes, Zec. 3. 1, 3; Jude 9. 'The prince, yea, the god of this world,' In. 12. 31; 14. 30; 2 Co. 4. 4. 'The spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience,' Ep. 2. 2.—One and twenty days. The period of Daniel's mourning.—Michael. 'One like God'—even Christ, who alone was 'in the form of God;' he, in that form, joined with him who now appeared in 'fashion as a man,' ver. 5. 'The man' and 'Michael' being one and the same, in different characters.—I remained there. Christ is 'wherever two or three are met together in his name;' and with them, as men like-minded with Daniel, he remained with the king of Persia, to counteract, mediately by them, the evil influences of their enemies; but immediately, by his own presence, whereby he 'filtheth all things,' and 'worketh all things according to the counsel of his own will.' C.

Ver. 21. None that holdeth with me. 'None that strengtheneth himself with me (appearing as man) but Michael' (the visible image of the invisible God). My personal strength, and your deliverance, is Godhead sustaining manhood. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The slow advances of God's work of deliverance in his church deeply affect the minds of his faithful saints. And let God turn back our captivity on earth as he will, this world will be still a valley of tears. But Jesus kindly manifests his glory to humble, importunate, and solemn supplicants. Oh, how unnumbered are his excellencies! And the faith and sense of his love ought to banish all slavish dread, which would indispose us for hearing his words. What insignificant and polluted nothings are the best of men before God, and in their own view, when they behold him! But graciously his power and promises support his people under their terrors and grievances. As the entrance of their prayers is pleasant to him, so the entrance of his word is quickening to them. And we ought to be patient under present trials, lest God should send heavier ones. Though kings on earth and devils from hell be against us, it is enough if JEHOVAH, if Jesus, and his angels, care for and protect us.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1 should have stood in the preceding chapter; and means that Gabriel had encouraged and excited Darius the Mede and Cyrus to release the Jews, notwithstanding the great opposition that design met with from devils and wicked courtiers. 2-4. After Cyrus, Cambyses, and Darius Hystaspes, Xerxes, being extremely wealthy, shall attempt to great¹ vision, and there remained no strength in me: for my 'comeliness' was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength.

9 Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I 'in a deep sleep on my face, and "my face toward the ground.

10 ¶ And, behold, "an hand touched me, which set⁹ me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands:

11 And he¹ said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved,² understand³ the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright:³ for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling.

12 Then said he unto me, "Fear not, Daniel; for "from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were 'heard, and I am come for thy words.⁴

13 But the prince⁵ of the kingdom of Persia⁶ withstood me one and twenty days: but, lo, Michael,⁷ one⁷ of the chief princes, came to help me; and I remained there with the kings of Persia.

14 Now I am come "to make thee understand what shall befall thy people 'in the latter days: for yet the vision is for many days.

15 And when he had spoken such words unto me, "I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb.

16 And, behold, one ^{like} the similitude of the sons of men 'touched my lips: then I opened my mouth and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, 'by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.

17 For⁸ how can the servant of this my lord⁸ talk with this my lord? 'for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me.

18 Then there came "again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me, 19 And said, "O man greatly beloved, 'fear not; peace be unto thee; 'be strong, yea, be strong. And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, Let my lord speak; for 'thou hast strengthened me.⁹

5 Cambyes, Ezr. 4.5, 6. ver. 20. Ep. 6.12.
6 A comparison of this passage with ver. 20, 21 shows that an angel is here referred to. Before the age of Daniel, angelic beings are not mentioned, but always either in connection with God, whom they serve, or with God's chosen people, whom they defend, and to whose minister. Ge. 22.1, 4, 16. Ex. 23.20-23. Nu. 16.16. In this book another department of angelic work is indicated. Some of them are appointed to rule or preside over heathen nations. We read of the 'prince of the kingdom of Persia', and the 'prince of Grecia'. The nature and character of these angels are not distinctly stated. Dr. Pusey believes they were 'good angels, since they desired the welfare of their people, and they contended with Gabriel and Michael before God, each, in submission to the divine will, desiring what seemed for the good of his people, while since their apparent interests were diverse, seemed to be contrary. This view is open to grave question. I cannot well see how any pure and holy spirit should oppose a true servant of God, when engaged in God's own work. But be this as it may, there can be no doubt that one of these angels was some mysterious way appointed to watch over, succour, and defend each nation. We also know from the New Testament that each Christian is assigned to the care of a guardian angel.—P.

CHAPTER XI.

1 The overthrow of Persia by the king of Grecia. 5 Leagues and conflicts between the kings of the south and of the north. 30 The invasion and tyranny of the Romans.

ALSO I, in the first year of "Darius the Mede, ^{even} I, stood to confirm and to strengthen him.¹

2 And now will I 'show thee the truth.² Behold, there shall stand up yet 'three kings in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than they all: and by his strength 'through his riches he 'shall stir up all³ against the realm of Grecia.

3 And 'a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will.

4 And 'when he shall stand up, his kingdom 'shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven;⁴ and not to his posterity, nor according to his dominion which he ruled: for his kingdom shall be plucked up, even for others beside those.

5 ¶ And the 'king⁶ of the south⁷ shall be strong, and 'one of his princes;⁹ and he shall be strong above him, and have dominion; his dominion shall be a great dominion.

6 And in the end of years they shall 'join themselves together; for the king's daughter² of the south shall come to the 'king of the 'north to make an agreement:⁵ but she shall 'not retain the power of the arm; neither shall he stand, nor his arm: but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and he that begat her,⁶ and he⁷ that strengthened her in these times.

7 But out of a branch⁸ of her root shall one stand up in his estate,⁹ which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and 'shall prevail:

8 And shall also carry captives into Egypt 'their gods, with their princes, and with their precious vessels¹ of silver and of gold;² and 'he shall continue more years than the king of the north.³

north-east border of Egypt, where Ptolemy Philopater's troops shall give him a terrible defeat; which, issuing in Ptolemy's rage against the Jews, and his abandoning himself to luxury, shall conduce to the hurt of his kingdom. Ptolemy dying, and leaving his son Epiphanes an infant, Antiochus, assisted by part of the Jews, shall march a great army into Egypt, and ravage the country; and after bribing his daughter Cleopatra to murder him, he shall marry her to young Ptolemy Epiphanes of Egypt: but she proving faithful to her husband, her father, disappointed of his designs on the kingdom of Egypt, shall in his rage, attack and take 9 So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his own land.

10 But his ⁴sons⁵ shall be stirred up,⁶ and shall assemble a multitude of great forces: and ^{one}⁷ shall certainly come, and ^{overflow}, and pass through; then shall he return, and be stirred up, even to his fortress.⁸

11 And the king of the south⁹ shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north: and he shall set forth a great multitude; ^{but} the multitude shall ^{be} given into his² hand.

12 And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart ^{shall} be lifted up; and he shall cast down many ten thousands: but he shall not be strengthened by it.

13 For the king of the north³ shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come after certain years⁴ with a great army and with much riches.

14 And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south: also the ⁵robbers of thy people⁶ shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall ^{fall}.

15 So the king of the north shall come, and cast⁷ up a mount, and take the most fenced cities;⁷ and the arms of the south ^{shall} not withstand, neither his chosen people,⁸ neither ^{shall} there be any strength to withstand.

16 But he that cometh against him ^{shall} do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him; and he shall stand in the glorious land,⁹ which by his hand shall be consumed.¹

17 He shall also set his ^{face} to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and upright ones² with him; thus shall he do: and he shall give him the ^{daughter} of women,⁴ corrupting⁵ her: but she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him.⁶

18 After this shall he turn his face unto the isles,⁷ and shall take many; but a ^{prince}⁸ for his own behalf⁹ shall cause the reproach¹ offered by him to cease; without his own reproach² he shall cause it to turn upon him.

19 Then he³ shall turn his face toward the fort³ of his own land: but he shall stumble and fall, and ^{not} be found.

20 Then shall stand up in his estate⁴ a raiser of taxes *in*⁵ the glory of the kingdom:⁶ but within few days he shall be destroyed, neither in anger,⁷ nor in battle.⁸

21 ¶ And in his estate⁹ shall stand up a ^{vile} person,² to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by ^{flatteries}.

22 And ^{with} the arms of a flood shall they be overflowed from before him, and shall be broken; yea, also the ^{prince} of the covenant.⁴

23 And after the league made with him ^{he} shall work deceitfully; for ^{he} shall come up, and shall become strong, with a small people.

24 He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest⁵ places of the province;⁶ and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall ^{scatter} among them the prey, and spoil, and riches; yea, and he shall forecast his devices⁷ against the strong holds, even for a time.

25 And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south⁸ with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army: but he shall not stand: for they shall forecast devices against him.

26 Yea, ^{they} that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him, and his¹ army shall overflow; and many shall fall down slain.

27 And both these kings' hearts² shall be to do mischief, and they shall ^{speak} lies at one table; but ^{it} shall not prosper: for yet the end shall be at the ^{time} appointed.³

28 Then shall he return into his land⁴ with great riches; and his heart shall be against the ^{holy} covenant;⁶ and he shall do exploits, and return to his own land.

29 At the time appointed he shall ^{return}, and come toward the south: but it shall not be as the former, or as the latter.⁸

30 For the ^{ships} of Chittim¹ shall come against him; therefore he shall be grieved, and return, and ^{have} indignation against the holy covenant: so shall he do; he shall even return, and ^{have} intelligence with ^{them} that ^{forsake} the holy covenant.

31 And ^{arms} shall stand on his part, and many of the isles and coasts of the Ægean Sea, now the east part of the Mediterranean. But the Romans, whom he now insults in invading their allies and treating their ambassadors with contempt, shall stop his career; and after many shameful defeats, oblige him to quit Lesser Asia, pay all the expenses of the war, and give his own son for a pledge of the payment. Retiring into his kingdom, he shall be murdered at Elymais, in his attempt to rob a temple of Jupiter. His elder son Seleucus Philopater shall be famous for nothing but for oppressing his people with taxes to pay the Roman debts; and shall, after a short reign, be poisoned by Heliodorus his treasurer. 21-29. He shall be succeeded by his despicable, debauched, and frantic brother, Antiochus Epiphanes, who shall have long lived at Rome as a hostage for the payment of his father's debt. Not by right, but by flattering the Syrians, Romans, Pergamenians, and others, he shall procure the Syrian crown, and get the better of all his opposers. And by scattering among his subjects the spoils taken from his opposers, he shall firmly attach them to his interests. After fixing himself on his throne, he shall march his mighty army against Ptolemy of Egypt, his cousin; and, by the help of traitors, shall rout his forces. And after making a league with him, which neither party intend to keep, he shall return home to Syria, terribly murdering the Jews and ravaging their country in his way. Not long after he shall again invade Egypt with a formidable army, but without success. 30-35. For the Roman ambassadors, arriving in Macedonian ships, shall prohibit him from proceeding against Ptolemy, whom they shall have taken into their protection. Enraged herewith, he shall return home; and, by fearful murder and persecutions, shall attempt to abolish the Jewish religion, or extirpate their nation. And, assisted by apostate Jews, he shall abolish the daily sacrifice, and make their temple a sink of idolatry, whoredom, and other wickedness.—While many of the Jews suffer for their religion, Matthias and his sons, called Maccabees, shall take arms; and, by a multitude of violent encounters, shall defeat the Syro-Grecians, retake and purify the temple, and restore the true worship of God.—But some understand these six verses of the Romish heathens, and their persecution of the Christians, they shall pollute the 'sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the 'abomination that maketh desolate.⁶

32 And such as do wickedly against the covenant⁷ shall he corrupt⁸ by flatteries:⁹ but the 'people that do 'know their God² shall be strong, and do exploits.

33 And they that understand among the people shall instruct many; yet 'they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days.

34 Now when they shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help:³ but many shall cleave to them with flatteries.

35 And some of them of understanding shall fall, 'to try them,⁴ and to purge, and to make them white, even to 'the time of the end: because it is yet for a 'time appointed.

36 ¶ And the 'king 'shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper 'till the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done.

37 Neither shall he regard the 'God of his fathers,⁷ nor 'the desire of women, nor regard any god: 'for he shall magnify himself above all.

38 But⁸ in his estate⁹ shall he honour the God of 'forces,² and 'a god whom his fathers knew not shall he honour with gold, and silver, and with precious stones,³ and pleasant things.⁴

39 Thus shall he do in the most strong holds⁵ with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory: and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land⁶ for gain.⁷

40 ¶ And at the time of the end shall the king of the south⁸ push at him: and the king of the north⁹ shall come against him 'like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Michael shall deliver Israel from their troubles. 5 Daniel is informed of the times.

AND at¹ that time shall 'Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be 'a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people 'shall be delivered, every one that shall be found 'written in the book.¹

2 And 'many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.²

3 And they that be wise³ shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.

4 But thou, O Daniel, 'shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; 'many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

5 ¶ Then I Daniel looked, and, behold, there stood 'other two, the one on this side of the bank⁴ of the river, and the other on that side of the bank of the river.

36-45. Some understand these verses also of Antiochus' pride, insolence, blasphemy, introduction of new deities, and his brutal murder of women and children; and of his ravaging Canaan, Egypt, and the countries about; till at length he was embarrassed by a Parthian war from the east, and at last miserably destroyed by God. But they, at least, chiefly represent the Romish Antichrist as exalting himself above magistrates, angels, and even the Divine Persons; prohibiting marriage, and regardless alike of the God of primitive Christians and of heathen idols, setting up angels and departed saints, or consecrated waters, as protectors of countries, cities, and societies; and as harassed by the Saracens, and afterwards more terribly by the Turks, who have conquered the west of Asia, north of Africa, and south-east of Europe; and who will be ruined in their attempt to dispossess the returned Jews of their country in the beginning of the millennium, about the very time that the Lord shall destroy Antichrist.

Ver. 31. And arms, &c. 'And armies shall stand up after him'—the armies of the Roman power, newly introduced, ver. 30, to whose acting the prophecy now turns. With them alone does the description agree; for though Antiochus polluted the temple, he did not make it 'desolate,' the last state of the 'indignation,' ver. 36, to which our Lord referred when lamenting over the incorrigible Jerusalem, or warning his disciples of the time to escape, Mat. 23. 37, 38; 24. 15-18. C.

Ver. 40. Time of the end. At the time when the dissolution of the Roman empire shall commence, the prelude to the division into ten kingdoms, and the final overthrow of the Papacy and Mohammedanism—which have the same prophetic name, 'little horns'—which rose together, and together are doomed to fall.—King of the south, &c. According to scriptural geography, all southerly points from east and west of Jerusalem are called 'the south.' Thus explained, this verse represents the northern hordes of Huns, Goths, Vandals, &c., and the southern tribes of Saracens, Tartars, Turks, &c., by whom the Roman empire was overrun, and foretells the rise of some great northern power that is finally to invade the kingdoms, and settle his proud throne 'upon the glorious holy mountains,' and there perish where 'none shall help him.' What this power shall be God only knows; for one man, at any time (as witness the case of Mohammed), is capable of raising up a power sufficient to revolutionize and (like Napoleon) to terrify monarchies in his fall. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinitely perfect is God's insight into futurities. Often riches are kept for the hurt of the owners. Yea, all things here are but vanity and vexation of spirit. While God in his providences sets up one and pulls down another, exactly answerable to his purpose, men's lusts render this world a tremendous scene of ravage and murder. And God often exalts the worst of men to render them scourges to sinners, and especially his own people. And none are more bitter persecutors than apostates from the truth. While God singularly honours those that cleave to him in an evil day, he permits their opponents to rush forward in wickedness, till, becoming impudent in impiety, he can no longer delay their tremendous destruction. And how marvellous a confirmation of our faith it is to find some scripture predictions of contingent events more particularly circumstantiated than in any particular history of them.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1-3. Jesus Christ shall preserve his people under, and at last deliver them from, the terrible harassments of Antiochus, Romish heathens, Antichrist, Turks, &c., and at the last day he will reward them according to their faithfulness and usefulness. 4, 9, 10. These predictions shall never be ANCIENT MARKET PLACE, ATHENS—SHOWING THE SITE OF FAMOUS TEMPLES AND OTHER STRUCTURES. [Daniel, xii:3.]—Pericles, the Athenian statesman, was born 499 B. C. Daniel, the Hebrew prophet, ceased to prophesy about 534 B. C. There is a difference of thirty-five years between the birth of the one and the death of the other. Greece flowered in the art of Athens during the seventy years of Pericles' life. In the third verse of the twelfth chapter of Daniel it is said, "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever." So we find the market place, adorned and beautified in the time of Pericles, most famous now because of its connection with Paul, the apostle, who went to Greece with the hope of turning many to righteousness. In the picture above we are looking upon the site of the famous temples, senate house, kings' hall and other ancient structures of Athens. They have all perished, but the life of the apostle who stood and preached in this neighborhood, is more influential to-day than ever before.

fully understood before the fulfilment. And as there will be then a mixture of persons good and bad, it will be only the former who will be bettered by these troubles, or who, by diligent observation, will understand the fulfilled predictions. 7, 11, 12. The time, times, and a half, or 1260 days, denote the 1260 years reign of wickedness. Thirty years of terrible wars at the destruction of Antichrist bring it to 1290; and by the end of 1335 we expect the millennium will be introduced in its full glory. 9, 13. Daniel must rest contented with the discoveries which he had obtained, and prepare for the eternal state, in the assurance of happiness and honour in it.

REFLECTIONS.—Seasonable and effectual are Jesus' assistance, protection, deliverances, and comforts. He is a present help in times of trouble to his people. And to all his chosen sheep he gives eternal life, and none shall pluck them out of his hand. O how great is the happiness of saints, and especially of faithful ministers, in the resurrection and in the eternal state! But, on the contrary, inexpressible the infamy and ruin of the wicked! Neither angels nor saints know anything more of future events but as God is pleased to reveal them. Yet, by humble searching of the Scriptures, and careful observation of providences, every prediction will at length appear plain. And it is Christ to whom we must apply for all necessary illumination. Never must we, except by death and the last judgment, expect complete deliverances all at once. And it is not the curious scrutinizer into God's secrets, but the firm believer of his promises and observer of his laws, who may then expect safety and happiness.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

1. In Daniel we may observe a glorious example of the power of early religious impressions in resisting subsequent temptations. He was one of the Jewish captives selected, according to eastern custom, for the courtly education in Babylon. His religious distinction between ^{clean} and ^{unclean} food, and his fixed objections against wine offered to idols, conducted him to a course of temperance as favourable to the health of his body as to the development of his mind.

2. We observe the blessed influence of his principles and example upon his three friends—from which every pious youth should take courage to be decided in his profession of religion, as he shall thereby not only save his own soul, but may be the happy and blessed instrument of saving the souls of his youthful companions, 1 Ti. 4. 16.

3. Daniel presents us with a striking example of the worldly advancement that often accompanies or flows from the sincere profession of religion. No doubt his success exposed him to envy, and his religious principles were readily turned into instruments for his overthrow; but the God whom he served delivered him out of ^{the} snare, not merely to display his miraculous power over the ravenous lions, but to exhibit, in the most striking manner, the watchful care of his providence, and the all-sufficiency of his grace; and practically to exemplify the consolatory fact, that ^{godliness} is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and also of that which is to come.²

4. In Daniel there is also exhibited the importance of an early education in secular knowledge, when combined with piety; and the duty, advantage, and necessity of the continued studying of the Holy Scriptures, which is not superseded even by prophetic inspiration. Daniel, though a man so pre-eminent that the Spirit ranks him with Noah and Job—a man ^{greatly} beloved¹ of Heaven, and favoured with the visions of futurity—has yet left upon record that ^{he} knew by books—the books he had read and prayerfully studied—and not by any immediate revelation, the things that God designed, and the times of their accomplishment. But while this fact affords a gracious encouragement to the study of the Sacred Scriptures in general, it guides to the study of the prophecies in particular. Of the profitableness of the study of fulfilled prophecy there can be no question. Were it true, which it is not, that the evidence of testimony diminishes in proportion to the lapse and distance of time, the evidence from fulfilled and fulfilling prophecy would constantly supply the deficiency; for if the one did decrease, the other is constantly on the increase. And every traveller who returns from the great field of prophetic vision, furnishes—even where he intends it not—some new illustration of the historic accuracy with which the Spirit that was in the prophets foretold the events to come. But does not the record of Daniel's successful study of the prophetic books furnish a light and encouragement to the study of unfulfilled prophecy also? The record of his success is not a mere fact, but a fact intended to teach its own peculiar lesson; and that lesson is, the hopefulness of studying unfulfilled prophecy. This, like every other department of sacred study, must be undertaken, not in the spirit of an eager and anxious curiosity, but in the spirit of deep humility, childlike teachableness, earnest prayer, and patient waiting. And were it so, that every attempt to penetrate the future ended but in the conviction of the weakness of our vision, and the depth of the darkness that shrouds it, still the deep thoughtfulness and prayer into which the attempt has conducted, would alone repay the time and pains bestowed. But a total want of success in such studies we hold to be unexampled, if not impossible. Taking the language of prophecy fulfilled as the key to what is still future; and taking the attitude, not of a dogmatizing teacher, but of a humble learner, the student of unfulfilled prophecy, though he may be utterly unable to fill up the minor details, will yet discover the great outlines so broad and distinct, that he can have as little hesitation about anticipating the future as about verifying the past. Indeed one of the chief errors to be avoided in the study of unfulfilled prophecy, is the attempt at filling up those minor details which the Spirit of God has been pleased to withhold. Let the student of prophecy never attempt to pass the barriers of the written Word, nor endeavour to supply by imagination one image which the Spirit has not drawn. That Spirit best knew how much should be revealed for the establishment of faith, the encouragement of hope, and the support of patience; and wise are they who follow where the Spirit leads, but pause and stand still where he commands to ^{shut up} the words, and seal the book.²

The prophecies of Daniel, being chiefly visional, should be studied in conjunction with the visional portions of Isaiah, Ezekiel, Amos, and Zechariah, but particularly in the light of the ^{Revelation} of John, which may justly be regarded as an expansion of Daniel, and a supply of as much detail as the Spirit wills or the church requires. C.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET HOSEA.

This book and the eleven following were, by the Jews, comprehended in one volume, called the Lesser Prophets. Hosea began his public work about A. M. 3196; and lived to see most of what he had foretold fulfilled in the misery and ruin of the ten tribes of Israel. His style is concise and sententious; in some places very obscure, and in others clear and pathetic. His general scope is to convince the Hebrews of their sins, excite them to repent, and prevent their own destruction, and to denounce the judgments of God against such as should remain obstinate. But with these he intermixes some very evangelical promises, ch. 1. 7, 10, 11; 2. 1, 7, 14-23; 3. 5; 5. 15; 6. 1-3, 11; 11. 8, 9; 13. 4, 9, 10, 14; 14. 1-8; which indeed almost all respect the happy restoration of the Jews in the glorious millennium. In the first three chapters he instructs by signs; in the rest by discourses only.—N.B. In this and other prophecies, Ephraim and Israel denote the ten tribes, as distinguished from the kingdom of Judah and Benjamin.

[Hosea is placed at the head of the twelve 'Lesser Prophets,' who are so called, not from any inferiority in their character, authority, or matter, but merely on account of their brevity when compared with Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Hosea was contemporary with Isaiah, Joel, Amos, and Jonah; and prophesied, instructed, reprov'd, or comforted the people, during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah—in all above sixty years. His prophecies, however, are chiefly directed to the ten tribes, before their captivity. His book is quoted or referred to in the New Testament in, at least, the following passages:—Mat. 2. 15; 9. 13; 12. 7; Lu. 15. 18; 23. 30; Jn. 7. 34; Ro. 9. 25, 26; 1 Co. 15. 54-56; Ga. 6. 7, 8; He. 4. 12; 1 Pe. 2. 9, 10; Re. 6. 16. C.]

It would seem that the twelve minor prophets are grouped in chronological order. The first group of them prophesied in Israel during the reign of Jeroboam II., and in Judah during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, and Ahaz; following very closely upon the ministry of Elisha. The last group, consisting of Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, closed the prophetic cycle. Hosea's prophetic ministry was the longest on record. It could scarcely have been less than seventy years. It embraced the darkest period of the kingdom of Israel. Towards its close there was in reality no government. 'Kings made their way to the throne through the murder of their predecessors. Shallum slew Zechariah; Menahem slew Shallum; Pekah slew the son of Menahem; Hoshea slew Pekah.' The religious state of the kingdom was even worse than the political. The worship of God was entirely ignored. Idolatry in its worst forms was universally practised. The grossest immorality prevailed. People, priests, and rulers vied in debauchery. It was in such times and under such circumstances Hosea prophesied to Israel. It was because of such sins he was commissioned to warn and threaten:—'I will cause the kingdom of the house of Israel to cease;' 'I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel;' 'They shall be wanderers among the nations;' 'Israel is swallowed up,' &c. The greater part of the book is one continuous dirge of woe, in which the guilt and the punishment of Israel are depicted with terrible minuteness. Almost every prophetic utterance is the voice of a judge pronouncing sentence upon a guilty people. At the close, however, the dark cloud of wrath clears away; a bright future is revealed; the people repent in response to God's gracious invitation; and promises of mercy and grace are given.

Nothing is known of the family or personal history of Hosea beyond what is recorded in this book. His language and the general scope of his prophecies show that he belonged to the northern kingdom; though as a loyal servant of God he only acknowledges in the beginning of his book the legitimate, because divinely appointed, rulers of Judah. CHAPTER I. Ver. 4. In executing God's judgment on the family of Ahab, 2 Ki. 9. 10, Jehu only aimed at gratifying his own ambition and cruelty; and therefore his conduct is justly punished, as murder, upon his own family, and the throne of Israel taken from them.

Ver. 2. The 'whoredom' here described consisted in the people of Israel having 'departed from the LORD,' and gone after the idolatry of the nations. This command, when interpreted by the second chapter—which evidently describes the kingdom of Israel under the emblem of a faithless but reclaimed, reformed, and penitent wife—will clearly appear to be itself, not an actual command for God's prophet to marry an adulteress, but an emblem of what grace and mercy must do in bringing back faithless rebels to the covenant and kingdom of God.

Ver. 5. Break the bow. Nations, like an elastic bow, often make sudden and wonderful recoveries after defeats apparently ruinous: but as the 'broken bow' recovers no more, so Israel now falls, never again to rise till the judgment is completed. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God can easily preserve his ministers in the very worst of times, and make them steadily to serve him either in honour or dishonour. And it becomes them to use very diversified methods in order to convince hardened sinners, and warn them to flee from the wrath which is to come. God will reward men according to their deeds when his work with them is finished. And there is no warding off the strokes of his judgment. They who depart from him weaken and bring certain ruin on themselves. If God's mercy be once taken from men, they are irrecoverably miserable. And they who in works deny God may expect to be disowned by him at last. But

JENIN BY EARLY MORNING LIGHT, WHERE THE BOW OF ISRAEL WAS TO BE BROKEN. [HOSEA, i : 5.]—"And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel." The city of Jenin lies on the frontier of Samaria, at the southern edge of the plain of Jezreel. This is supposed to be the ancient En-gannin which was a Levitical city of Issachar, referred to in Joshua xix : 21, and xxi : 29. Here was the borderland between the provinces of Galilee and Samaria in the time of Christ. It is a beautiful situation, well watered, and its name signifies "a fountain of gardens." The springs rise in the hills behind the garden, and the water is conducted by an aqueduct to a reservoir in the center of the town, said to have been built in the first half of the present century. This place is the seat of Kaima Kam, a governor appointed by the Sultan at Constantinople to rule over it.

2 Plead³ with your mother, plead; for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband: let her therefore put away her⁴ whoredoms out of her sight, and her adulteries from between her breasts;

3 Lest I strip her naked, and set her as in the day that she was born, and make her⁵ as a wilderness, and set her like a dry land, and slay her with thirst.

4 And I will not have mercy upon her children; for they be the children of whoredoms.

5 For their mother hath played the harlot; she that conceived them hath done shamefully: for she said, I will go after my⁶ lovers, that give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, mine oil and my drink.³

6 Therefore, behold, I will⁷ hedge up thy way with thorns, and make a wall,⁴ that she shall not find her paths.

7 And she shall follow after her lovers, but she shall not overtake them; and she shall seek them, but shall not find them: then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband, for then was it better with me than now.

8 For she did not know that I gave her corn, and wine,⁵ and oil, and multiplied her silver and gold, which they prepared for Baal.⁶

9 Therefore will I return, and take away my

* This is a historical figure. God led Israel out of the bondage of Egypt into the wilderness. They were free there. They could serve him without fear and without restraint. He taught them there, revealing a holy law and an instructive ritual. He manifested there alike his love, his wisdom, and his power. In all these ways the constrained Israel to honour and serve him. So we are to understand the words of this passage.

Leading into the wilderness is not a curse; it is a blessing. It is not a punishment; it is a redemption from slavery. The wilderness is to be the scene of divine instruction, guidance, and mercy. It is to be the way to the heavenly Canaan.—P.

²² The meaning seems to be that as soon as the border of the wilderness, through which it is necessary to lead her, is reached, I shall give her from that spot new and everlasting possessions in the spiritual Canaan.

The words which follow survey a very cheering promise.

Israel had sinned in the person of Achan, and was severely punished. But the Lord showed Joshua how the guilt was to be removed, and the lost favour of God regained.

* Through this name Achor this valley became a memorial, how the Lord restores his favour to the sinner after the explanation of the guilt by the punishment of the transgressor.

our salvation is solely owing to his loving grace. And if we cleave to God in a day of defection, he will save us in a day of trouble. Thrice happy are they who, adopted into his family, have Jesus for their spiritual head, and go up from this world to their heavenly rest. Happy are the apostolic and coming periods, and especially that of the last judgment, in which multitudes of Jews and Gentiles shall follow after him as the head of his redeemed church.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1 might have been connected with the preceding chapter, intimating that, at that general restoration, the Hebrews will again be adopted as God's people, and share his peculiar favour. 2-4. And let the pious Israelites, or Jewish converts to Christianity, earnestly plead with their nation, which have practically abandoned my worship and service, and which I am just ejecting from their peculiar relation to me, to repent of and reform from their idolatries and other beloved abominations, lest I quickly deprive them of all their privileges, render their country desolate, themselves miserable captives, and without mercy continue my judgment upon their posterity for many generations. 5-13. For since they, with impudent obstinacy, depend on heathen alliances and idols, as if these had procured them their enjoyments, they shall be brought into inextricable perplexities and miseries, that they shall not be able to accomplish their idolatrous or wicked designs. And neither idols nor idolatrous allies being able to help them, they shall return to their God, who anciently heaped so many favours on their ancestors. And because they refuse to own me as the bestower of those outward things, wherewith they make and worship idols, I will deprive them of these things; and, by my fearful judgments, effectually and uncontrollably manifest their fearful wickedness to all the nations around, turn all their joy into mourning, all their plenty into miserable poverty, and give their substance to furious enemies, render their country desolate, and thus severely punish their idolatries. 14-18. Nevertheless I, who brought their fathers out of Egypt into the wilderness, and entered into covenant with them, will at last deliver them from their captivity and dispersion, and to their great comfort bring them through all difficulties into their own land, and make them to rejoice in my salvation, as their fathers did on their having passed through the Red Sea; and I will strive to lead them to renounce their idolatry and apostasy, and solemnly and cordially to acknowledge me alone as the Lord their gracious God. I will graciously protect them from every temporal or spirit-

I¹ will hear, saith the LORD, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth;

22 And the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil; and they shall hear Jezreel.

23 And^a I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I^a will say to them which were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, *Thou art my God.*⁹

CHAPTER III.

1 By the prophet taking unto him an adulteress, is showed the desolation of Israel, and their restoration.

THEN said the LORD unto me, Go yet, love a woman beloved of her friend, yet an adulteress, according to the love of the LORD toward the children of Israel, who look to other gods, and love flagons of wine.²

2 So I bought her³ to me for fifteen pieces⁴ of silver, and for an homer⁵ of barley, and an half homer⁶ of barley:

3 And I said unto her, Thou shalt abide for me many days; thou shalt not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be for another man:⁷ so will I also be for thee.

4 For the children of Israel shall abide many days⁸ without a king,⁹ and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image,¹ and without an ephod, and without teraphim.

CHAPTER IV.

1 God's judgments against the sins of the people, 6 and of the priests, 12 and against their idolatry. 15 Judah is exhorted to take warning by Israel's calamity.

HEAR the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel: for the LORD hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God, in the land.

2 By^a swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood¹ toucheth^a blood.²

3 Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.

4 Yet^b let no man strive, nor reprove another: for thy people are^a as they that strive with the priest.

5 Therefore shalt thou fall in the day, and the prophet also shall fall with thee in the night, and I will destroy³ thy mother.⁴

6 My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected know-ual enemy and danger; 19-23, and through sacrificial love and compassion, I will, in infinite equity, wisdom, love, mercy, and faithfulness, render them my people by an everlasting promise, and help them to know and acknowledge me as their God, fulfilling all my gracious promises. I will make all things in heaven and earth to concur in promoting their temporal, spiritual, and eternal welfare. Yea, I will graciously multiply their children; and, notwithstanding their long and fearful rejection, both Jews and Gentiles shall be rendered my peculiar people, sincere, bold, and open professors of the gospel of Christ.

Ver. 2. She is not my wife, &c. Having ceased to be loving and faithful, she ceased to be a wife—for these two principles are implied in that holy character and relation; and he ceased to be her husband, not by any fault of his, but because her infidelity had dissolved the marriage tie. C.

Ver. 7. I will go, &c. This is the exact parallel of the younger son, Lu. 15. 18, who, having wasted his substance, and having been reduced to the degrading employment of feeding swine, at last, through grace, 'came to himself,' and said, 'I will arise and go unto my father.' C.

Ver. 8. She did not know. Either to be ignorant of God, or altogether to overlook or deny him, is the constant characteristic of irreligion. The prophet here draws his evidence of this fact from agriculture and commerce—corn, oil, wine, wool, flax, silver, and gold—the produce, possessions, and emblems of a prosperous people; all naturally calculated to lead the heart to the Giver, but all, through sin, leading to neglect or ignorance both of his providence and grace. C.

Ver. 9. Therefore will I . . . take away my corn, &c. By drought, rain, wind, mildew, or those inexplicable causes of unfruitfulness which God sends, from time to time, to teach the ignorant, stir up the thoughtless, and convince the gainsayer, of a truth the most simple, yet so little understood and less felt—the Lord reigneth. C.

Ver. 12. The march of improvement in agriculture, manufactures, and the various useful or ornamental arts, ought to be accompanied with similar advancement in the public feeling of gratitude to God. But, alas! experience discovers that improvements in temporal are too often attained at the expense of spiritual things. Israel had greatly advanced in the cultivation of the vine and the fig—two inexhaustible sources of national employment and prosperity—but having derived her improvements chiefly from the example and instruction of her idolatrous neighbours, she not merely adopts their improvements, but conforms to their idolatry, and records her success as 'rewards' from them, and forgets or denies that they are mercies from God. O that Britain may take warning, and never be seduced after this sad example of national unbelief! C.

Ver. 14. Allure. Not by mere arbitrary requirement without any reason assigned beyond the divine will; nor yet by any penalty imposed upon neglect or infraction; but by such tenderness as a father employs, because he feels; and such alluring hopes as he sets before his child when he would lead him to sacrifice the present to the future, and pursue the course of self-denial, and study that he may attain a character and a position of emolument and honour. C.

Ver. 15. Achan was the place [Jos. 7. 25] where Achan was put to death for his covetousness of gold and silver and a Babylonish garment. Now 'covetousness is idolatry,' and until that principle is destroyed by the mortifying spirit, Ro. 8. 13, some form of idolatry will still reign in the heart; but when 'covetousness' is destroyed, then the believer is 'saved by hope,' 'because the love of God is shed abroad in his heart,' just in proportion as the love of the world is expelled, Ro. 5. 5; 8. 24; 1 Jn. 2. 15, 16. C.

Ver. 16. Ishi—that is, my husband, bounded by the oath of the covenant to faithfulness and love, He. 6. 16-19.—Baali, that is, my lord; claiming superiority as a right, and exacting obedience as a debt. C.

Ver. 21. I will hear the heavens—while angels rejoice over sinners that repent, Lu. 15. 7, 10; and they shall hear the earth—as believers cry, 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.' C. Mat. 13. 3, 23.—If corn, the seed of the word as it falls or ripens, 5. 5.—Old, the unity of brethren in the bond of peace, produced by his effectual teaching, Ps. 133. 3; Ep. 4. 3; 1 Jn. 2. 20.—Jezreel, the dispersed seed of God returning with joy to Messiah, ch. 1. 10, 11. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Our relation to God, and dependence on him, exceedingly aggravate our rebellion against him; and yet God will renew his grant of that relation. O how loath he is to give up his professing people! They who love him ought therefore with great earnestness to expostulate with backsliding brethren, in order to convince them of their sin, warn them of their danger, and persuade them to repent of, and reform from, their sins; and not only to put away the grosser acts, but even the most inward and beloved abominations. If men abuse God's temporal favours in the service of idols, or accept them as received from such, it is but just that he should deprive them of them; and that he should mar the fields and flocks of those who have profaned his ordinances. But how tender are his mercies! Where sin and its punishments had abounded, grace much more abounds. God allures those by his gospel grace who justly deserve his everlasting destruction. And distress and fear, as well as foretastes of his kindness, promote spiritual gladness and detestation of idols. And, O, thrice-blessed is it to have JEHOVAH our reviver and comforter, our cleanser from all idols, our protector from every enemy, our gracious, faithful, and everlasting husband, our enricher, our God, and our ALL! In view of this, let my soul, hedged in by his providence, and all allured by his kindness, cast out her idols, and claim JEHOVAH as my own; that, in Christ, I may have his grace, mercy, and peace multiplied unto me! Adoring the grace which first chose, espoused, and drew my heart, let me, in communion with his people, cordially and solemnly take him to be my God for ever, and my guide even unto death.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 2. Hosea's purchasing back his whorish wife at the price of a slave, denotes that base and disgraceful bondage in which the Israelites should long continue. 3, 4. This shows that the Israelites and Jews should, in the most deplorable manner, continue many ages without either civil or ecclesiastical establishment, neither worshipping the true God aright, nor professing regard to the idols of the nations. 5. But after the captivity, and especially in the beginning of the spiritual kingdom, shall all the Hebrew tribes, through the marvellous kindness of God, be converted to the Christian faith and true worship and fear of God.

Ver. 1. Go yet—go again. The former parable of the unfaithful wife, ch. 1. 2-9, related to 'the house of Israel,' ch. 1. 4; that is, to the ten tribes as a kingdom. This parable relates to 'the children of Israel,' ch. 2. 10, 11; 3. 2, which name includes the whole 'twelve tribes scattered abroad.'—Beloved of her friend—her husband, Je. 3. 20; Ca. 5. 16.—Yet an adulteress. Though an adulteress, the emblem of Israel, 'beloved for the fathers' sakes,' notwithstanding all their unfaithfulness. C.

Ver. 3. The dispersion of Israel was to cure them of idolatry—justly characterized as adultery, because idolatry and licentiousness have, in all ages, been intimately, if not inseparably, united. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very difficult to instruct or reclaim hardened professors. Precept must be upon precept, and sign upon sign. And the kindness of God seems long lost upon obstinate sinners. Sharply he must afflict them, even while he waits to be gracious; and long and disgraceful distress must teach them to value his kind returns. But happy are those afflictions which restrain us from using sinful means of relief, or which restrain us from following after idols. And thrice happy is it when both favours and frowns effectually draw us to Jesus Christ and his service. It is only in him that we can find JEHOVAH as ours, or taste of his heart-constraining goodness.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1-5. Let the ten tribes of Israel know assuredly that God, highly provoked with their hypocrisy, fraud, and falsehood, their uncharitableness and cruelty, their wilful or slothful ignorance of KHAN JUBB-YUSUF—IN THE COUNTRY WHICH, ACCORDING TO HOSEA, WAS TO LANGUISH AND MOURN. [Hosea, iv:1, 2, 3.]—"Hear ye the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel: for the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By sweating, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood. Therefore shall the land mourn, and everyone that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven." Khan Jubb-Yusuf is a few miles north of Capernaum. The Khan derives its name from a tradition current among old Arab geographers that the pit into which Joseph was thrown was situated here. It is a desolate region, and one riding from Capernaum to this place will be impressed with the truth of this third verse: "The land shall mourn and everyone that dwelleth therein shall languish."

7 As they were increased, so they sinned against me: therefore will I change their glory into shame.

8 They eat up the sin of my people, and they set their heart on their iniquity.

9 And there shall be, like people, like priest: and I will punish them for their ways, and reward them their doings.

10 For they shall eat, and not have enough: they shall commit whoredom, and shall not increase: because they have left off to take heed to the LORD.

11 Whoredom, and wine, and new wine, take away the heart.

shadow thereof is good: therefore your daughters shall commit whoredom, and your spouses shall commit adultery.

divine things, and by their presumptuous profane swearing, perjury, murder, theft, and adultery, the repeated, and everywhere frequent, murders of their kings and others, will, by sword, famine, and pestilence, render their country most miserable and desolate. But it is to no purpose to warn or reprove them, they are so hardened and obstinate, and are ready to flee in the face of the best authorized reprovers. Therefore they and their false prophets shall be destroyed together, and their civil constitution shall be utterly broken, and the people murdered or dragged into captivity. 6-11. Since the priests neglect to instruct the people, and reject or forget the law of God, I will exclude them and their children from the office and benefit of the priesthood; and since, as their numbers, wealth, and power increase, they become more daring in their impieties, I will strip them of all their possessions and honours, and render them miserable and contemptible captives. And since they, with eagerness and pleasure, pamper themselves with the flesh of the people's sin-offerings, and even encourage them to sin, that their gain may abound; therefore shall priests and people, already alike in ignorance, intemperance, and profaneness, be quickly alike involved in fearful punishments. Their food being withdrawn or cursed, they shall be pinched with hunger. Their whoredoms shall not increase their families, nor their idolatries nor sinful alliances their strength.—For they have openly cast off all regard to me and my law; their whoredoms, idolatries, drunkenness, and luxury rendering them quite stupid and besotted. 12-14. Though they profess to be my people, they consult their wooden idols, and divins things by the falling of their staves. Instigated by the devil and their own idolatrous inclinations, they have renounced their dependence on me; and so abandoned themselves to idolatry, that there is scarcely the top of a hill, or a cluster of trees, where they do not worship some idol; and therefore will I give them up to the basest uncleanness and whoredoms, even in the worship of their idols, their daughters and wives being encouraged thereto by the example of their fathers and husbands:—in consequence of which, this besotted nation shall plunge themselves into ruin. 15-19. But though the Israelites have abandoned themselves to idolatry, let not the Jews copy their example, nor come near any of their idolatrous temples at Gilgal or Bethel, nor profane the name of the Lord by using it lightly, or attributing it to idols, or any way mixing his worship with idolatry or superstition;—for these Israelites are become quite headstrong and untractable in their apostasy from God to idols; and therefore shall their short-lived prosperity, under Jeroboam II. and Pekah, quickly issue in a miserable dispersion through the Assyrian empire. They are so violently addicted to idolatry, that it is needless for ministers to rebuke, conscience to check, Providence to restrain or afflict, or my Spirit to strive any more with them. Their drink-offerings and other services are quite abominable to me: and the wine which they have intemperately drunk turns sour on their stomach. They are perpetually occupied in whoredom and idolatry; and nothing can be obtained from their judges but by the force of shameful bribery: therefore shall the Assyrians hurry them into a miserable captivity and lasting dispersion, in which they shall with shame see their folly in trusting to idols and departing from God.

Ver. 1. 'The spiritual adultery of Israel, with its consequences, which the prophet has exposed in the first part, and chiefly in a symbolical mode, is more elaborately detailed here, not only with regard to its true nature, viz. the religious apostasy and moral depravity which prevailed throughout the ten tribes, but also in its inevitable consequences, the destruction of the kingdom and rejection of the people; and this is done with a repeated sidelong glance at Judah. To this there is appended a solemn appeal to return to the Lord, and a promise that the Lord will have compassion upon the penitent and renew his covenant of grace with them.' In these words Keil has well summarized the contents of the second part or division of this book, and its connection with the first. P.—A controversy. A phrase taken from a suit at law for injury inflicted on the person or damage done to property. C.

Ver. 2. Break out—as water bursts through banks and overflows the land. C.

Ver. 3. The fishes of the sea shall be taken away. Sea, in Hebrew, is put for any considerable extent of water;—and by drought in their tributary streams the supply of fish might be destroyed. Or, if the Great Sea be understood, the depredations of foreign fishermen might soon take away the supply from the feeble and unprotected Israelites. C.

Ver. 5. Therefore shall thou fall. The address is to the idolatrous priest, see ver. 4, 6, but includes the whole people as a church, whose office and dignity was 'a kingdom of priests,' Ex. 19:6, C.

Ver. 6. Thy children. The address is to the church as a mother, ver. 4; that is, to the church as intrusted with the education of her children. C.

Ver. 8. Eat up the sin. Not the sin-offering, but the sin itself, which they countenanced by their erroneous teaching, ver. 6, and which they were not desirous of correcting: because, as lawyers, judges, and magistrates, they derived their support from the fees, bribes, and fines arising from the public criminality. See ver. 18. C.

Ver. 11. Take away the heart of the rational and immortal man, and reduce him to the level of the beasts that perish, Ps. 49:20. C.

Ver. 14. I will not punish, &c. This is contrary to both the tenor of God's law and providence. It should be translated, 'Shall not I punish,' &c.—Harlots. Such as prostituted themselves in idol temples in honour of the idol, as the word signifies. C.

Ver. 15. Gilgal. Famous for the renewal of the covenant of circumcision, Jos. 5:1-9; infamous for the idolatry set up by Jeroboam.—Beth-aven—the same as Beth-el. 'The house of God,' in the days of faithful Abraham—'the house of iniquity, in the days of his faithless descendants. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas, what unhappy discord sin sows between God and men! But they who have lost the true knowledge of God, generally proceed from evil to worse. And profane ministers and magistrates are ordinarily ringleaders in guilt, and will rejoice in the wickedness of those under their charge, if it but add to their gain.—But it is just that God should withdraw his mercies from such as abuse them, and heap upon obstinate transgressors one plague after another;—that rebels against the light of his word should perish in their ignorance;—that ignorant and scandalous ministers should be exposed to peculiar misery and shame;—that what is unlawfully gained should be blasted with a curse, and that with which we have dishonoured God should be turned to our shame;—and that sharers in sin should be sharers in punishment! Men will go the most dreadful lengths in sin when abandoned to their own hearts' lusts: every one will then keep another in countenance, and their dreadful crimes will at last be made a distinguished branch of their punishment. And when apostasy is general, there is great need to guard against the most distant compliance with it. It is hard to forbear the devil's service if we walk on his ground, or lose a proper reverence for God. And dreadful is the danger of complying with that which so quickly hurries men into sudden, unavoidable, and everlasting ruin.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1, 2. Seriously take warning, ye priests, Israelites, and princes, of the fearful but just judgments of God impending over you, because, like hunters and fowlers upon the mountains, ye have endeavoured by all means to ensnare men to idolatry and ruin; and notwithstanding manifold rebukes by my prophets and providences, have, by subtle contrivances and specious pretences, oppressed and murdered your opposers. 3-7. But I am fully acquainted with all your wickedness, your idolatries and whoredoms, and how, through ignorance of me, ye are obstinately addicted to your apostasy and wickedness. Your pride is openly avowed, and your insolence in sin is manifested in your very looks; therefore shall ye be quickly destroyed by civil wars, and at last ruined by the Assyrians, in which the Jews shall partly share along with you. Nor shall either multitudes of sacrifices or of prayers avail to appease or turn away my wrath from you: but since you have treacherously transgressed my command in marrying heathens, and bringing up your children as heathens, the Assyrians shall, in a short time, devour both you and your estates. 8-10. Be warned, O ye Jews, that the Assyrians, having desolated the country of the ten tribes, will render you miserable. They shall be utterly ruined, as I have often warned them by my prophets. And since the princes of Judah have disregarded the bounds fixed by my law, and seized on their neighbours' property, therefore shall the Assyrians and others, as instruments of

TEMPLE OF ÆSCULAPIUS—A TEMPLE BUILT BY THE GREEKS TO THE GOD OF MEDICINE. [Hosea, iv:13.]—"They sacrifice upon the tops of the mountains, and burn incense upon the hills, under oaks and poplars and eims, because the shadow thereof is good. This prophecy of Hosea is supposed to have been uttered about 785 B. C. We are taught from this and other prophecies that God's chosen people had learned from their neighbors the practices of idolatry so completely that they did not differ very much religiously from the heathen around them. At the very time that Hosea was charging his people with asking counsel at their stocks, and with sacrificing upon the tops of the mountains, and burning incense upon the hills, the Greeks were giving themselves up to different forms of idolatrous worship. The temple of Æsculapius stands at the foot of the Acropolis in Athens, and was built in honor of the god of Medicine.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TABLE, NAZARETH—IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE CHRIST LIVED THIRTY YEARS. [Zechariah, xiii:6.]—
 “And one shall say unto Him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then He shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.”
 Tradition makes the rock which we see in the picture the place where Christ and His disciples often ate together. This rock is in the interior of the Church of the Holy Table in Nazareth. It is about three feet high, ten feet long, and three feet wide. We are standing in the front of the church and are looking toward the altar. This is a small church, but very beautifully kept. This chapel was built in 1861, and belongs to the Latin Christians.

CHAPTER V.

1 God's judgments against the priests, the people, and the princes of Israel, for their manifold sins, 15 until they repent.

HEAR ye^a this, O priests; and hearken, ye house of Israel; and give ye ear, O house of the king; for judgment is toward you because ye have been a snare on Mizpah, and a net spread upon Tabor.

2 And the revolvers are profound to make slaughter,¹ though² I have been a rebuker³ of them all.

3 I know Ephraim,⁴ and Israel is not hid from me: for now, O Ephraim, thou committest whoredom, and Israel is defiled.

4 They will not frame⁵ their doings⁶ to turn unto their God: for the spirit of whoredoms is in the midst of them, and they have not known the LORD.

5 And the pride of Israel doth testify to his face: therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity; Judah also shall fall with them.

6 They shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the LORD; but they shall not find him; he hath withdrawn himself from them.⁷

7 They have dealt treacherously against the LORD: for they have begotten strange children: now shall a man devour them with their portions.

8 Blow ye the cornet in Gibeah, and the trumpet in Ramah: cry aloud at Beth-aven, after thee, O Benjamin.

9 Ephraim shall be desolate in the day of rebuke: among the tribes of Israel have I made known that which shall surely be.

10 The princes of Judah were like them that remove the bound: therefore I will pour out my wrath upon them like water.

11 Ephraim is oppressed, and broken in judgment, because he willingly walked after the commandment.⁹

12 Therefore will I be unto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Judah as rottenness.⁹

13 When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to king Jereb:⁴ yet could he not heal you, nor cure you of your wound.

14 For I will be unto Ephraim as a lion, and as a young lion to the house of Judah: I, even I, will tear and go away; I will take away, and none shall rescue him.

15 ¶ I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence,⁵ and seek my face: in their affliction they will seek me early.

CHAPTER VI.

1 An exhortation to repentance. 4 A complaint against Israel and Judah for persisting still in their wickedness.

COME, and let us return unto the LORD: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up.

2 After two days will he revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight.

3 Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the LORD: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth.

4 ¶ O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto thee? for your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away.

5 Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets; I have slain them by the words of my mouth: and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth.

6 For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt-offerings.

7 But they, like men,⁸ have transgressed the covenant: there have they dealt treacherously against me.

my wrath, overflow and sweep them away. 11-15. As a just punishment of the Israelites' ready compliance with the idolatrous laws of Jeroboam and his successors, they are terribly oppressed by their unrighteous and tyrannical magistrates; and my judgments shall gradually and insensibly waste the kingdoms of Israel and Judah; and, perceiving their weakness, they shall apply to the Assyrians for help; who will distress and ruin, instead of helping them. And I, by their means, will, in the most fearless and furious manner, destroy them, and bereave them of their wealth. And, forbearing to help them, I will, for a time, leave them under the power of their troubles, till at last they be made candidly to acknowledge their offences, and earnestly supplicate my favour.

Ver. 1. Mizpah. A mountain and city of Gilead, Ju. 11. 29.—Tabor, a mountain of Zebulun; in both of which, it would appear, hunters and fowlers assembled with snares and nets, which are here employed as the emblems of those arts and influences which the idolatrous kings of Israel employed to seduce the people from the worship of Jehovah. C.

Ver. 2. Revolvers.—hunters. Applied to those who rode upon horses to drive the beasts into the toils.—Profound. Either they have dug deep pits to make slaughter, or they have made deep slaughter. C.

Ver. 3. Ephraim, the chief of the ten tribes.—Israel, the ten tribes collectively. C.

Ver. 7. Strange children. Idolaters whom God will not acknowledge.—Their portion for the year shall be devoured in a month—they shall be reduced to hopeless famine, either of bread or of the Word. C.

Ver. 10. The princes of Israel had not only passed the bounds of law, but utterly removed every distinction between right and wrong, except their own will and pleasure. See De. 19. 14; 27. 17. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No station can protect men from God's judgment, and no secrecy can conceal sin from his notice. But as they who allure men to sin are plagues to all around them, they may expect redoubled judgments. And none are more subtle and barbarous oppressors and persecutors than apostates, who sin against much light and love. They who treacherously revolt from God, and educate their children in idolatry, may expect to have themselves, and all they have, quickly destroyed. And nothing more certainly prefigures destruction than pride and impudence in sinning. If men will not be humbled for their sins, they must perish in them. If men will make this world their portion, they may expect to have it rendered a means of their ruin. The destruction of one sinful nation should, but seldom does, make all their neighbours repent of their wickedness. God's threatenings become serious and awful in their fulfilment: and it forebodes ill when wicked laws are readily obeyed: when judgments are discerned, but not their cause; and when, under lesser judgments, men are not reformed, but flee to human aids. All means of relief prove fruitless except God bless them: and to trust to them but draws on heavier judgments. It is only in fellowship with God that men can be truly happy; and it is only in the way of acknowledging our offences, and of earnest prayer, that we can expect the returns of his favour.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1-3. Come, let us, by faith and repentance, return to the Lord who hath afflicted us, in the firm assurance of his graciously, seasonably, and speedily delivering us, and restoring us to happiness and comfort through the resurrection of Christ. And in the persevering exercise of these graces we shall experience his instruction, the clear and gradual manifestation of his favour, and his refreshing and fruitifying comforts. 4-6. But ye hypocritical Israelites and Jews, what favour can be granted you? for those pretences of reformation under Hoshea, Jehu, and Hezekiah were but hypocritical: all is quickly blown over; therefore have I sharply rebuked them by the prophets, and by my threatenings devoted them to ruin; and in a little time my judgments, manifestly just, shall unavoidably overtake them. For it is inward and practical holiness and virtue, not ceremonial forms of service, that I chiefly regard. 7-11. But they, notwithstanding favours unnumbered, have, like Adam, broken my covenant, and lived as corruptly as the very heathens; even in the land which I gave them to encourage them to obedience; yea, in their very acts of devotion they have treacherously played the hypocrite.

with unavoidable calamities. 3. By ready compliance with their wicked laws, by acting wickedly, by uttering flattery, or by slander of the godly, they please their kings. 4. They all are adulterers and idolaters; their bodies and minds being inflamed, and their hearts entertaining corrupt desires, they contrive how to gratify them. 5. In their royal feasts they and their king besot themselves with drunkenness, and deride the oracles, ordinances, or judgments of God. 6. Heated by wine, inflamed by lust, eagerly attached to idolatry, and infuriated with hatred of one another, they greedily wait for, and seize on, the first opportunity to execute their sinful purposes. 7. Thus inflamed, they murder their magistrates one after another. But in all their calamities they never request my pity or help. 8. By marriages and alliances with heathens they have learned their manners. They are zealous for their idols, but indifferent about the true worship of God, and at best halt between him and their idols. 9. Therefore heathen enemies have wasted their country, and everywhere symptoms of their approaching destruction appear; but they never regard it, nor take any proper means to prevent it. 10. So notorious is the pride and obstinacy of their hearts, that notwithstanding all the calamities which they have felt, or may see impending, they do not in the least repent or reform, or even request my assistance. 11. Nay, without any attention to the true method of relief, they, by turns, apply for help to their implacable enemies of Egypt and Assyria. 12. But I will entangle and disappoint them in all their designs; and will, as I have publicly warned them by my

SHIPS AT SMYRNA—A CITY OF THE GENTILES, IN WHICH THE JEWS WERE SWALLOWED UP. [Hosea, viii:8.]—"Israel is swallowed up; now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel wherein is no pleasure." Smyrna is a great city on the coast of Asia Minor, whose leading merchants are Jews. Perhaps there is no city upon earth where the Jews have more influence in a commercial way than in this city. Not only in the time of Hosea was it true that Israel was swallowed up in Assyria and Babylon, but it continues to this day true that they are scattered among the Gentiles. The harbor of Smyrna is one of the most beautiful in the world. It is about two miles wide, and about six or eight miles long, lying due west from the city. Large numbers of vessels are always to be seen here, and because of the great trade of this city with the world it has come to have cosmopolitan modes of thought and manners.

WALLS, ACRO-CORINTH—OVERLOOKING THE RUINS OF THE ONCE SPLENDID CITY OF CORINTH NOW OBLITERATED. [HOSEA, ix: 17.]—"My God will cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him: and they shall be wanderers among the nations." This prophecy of Hosea was uttered about 760 B. C. Its fulfillment began when Israel was carried away to Assyria and Media by Sargon, 722. B. C. From that time forward it remained true that God's chosen people were wanderers among the nations. When St. Paul came to Corinth from Athens, in A. D. 51, he found here a synagogue and a great many Jews. The walls of Acro-Corinth are built around the sides of a mountain overlooking the ancient city of Corinth. Upon the brow of this mountain there was a temple of Venus, and at the time St. Paul was here it was, perhaps, the most wicked and licentious city on the earth. To-day it is in ruins, showing that heathen cities no less than those of the chosen people could not sin without suffering the consequences.

pinning for want. 3. No longer shall ye continue in Canaan; but part of you, as fugitives and vagabonds, shall retire into Egypt, and the rest be carried captive into Assyria, to live in slavery and idolatry. 4. Nor shall ye be qualified nor have any opportunity to present any offerings to God that will be accepted; for ye shall have no access to bring your meat offerings or sacrifices for your sins into my temple. 5. Under your cruel oppression, ye shall have neither time nor liberty to keep any of your solemn feasts. 6. And while such of you as flee into Egypt, or the countries adjacent, are cut off by sword, famine, and pestilence, your stately and expensive houses shall be turned into heaps of rubbish. 7. Quickly ye shall see and feel those dreadful but richly-deserved judgments. Ye who mocked the prophets of God as fools and madmen, shall find that your false prophets were such, when ye are abandoned of God for your inexpressible wickedness and great hatred of him and his worship, and even of one another. 8. Once ye had prophets who were zealous for me, and faithfully declared my messages; but now, whatever they pretend, your false prophets do, by their doctrine and example, insnare you into sin and punishment, being haters of and hated by God, as they seduce and deter men from his worship and service; nay, are detested in the very temple of their idols. 9. Like the miscreants of Gibeah, ye are generally arrived at the highest pitch of lewdness, cruelty, and contempt of me, therefore will I speedily punish you in an exemplary manner. 10. Once I delighted in your fathers in the wilderness, blessed and watched over them as my chosen people; but they ungratefully apostatized to the shameful worship of Baal-peor, drawn into the snare by whorish women; and ever since ye and your fathers have multiplied and worshipped idols, as your lusts and fancies directed you. 11, 12. Your present blossoms of prosperity shall quickly leave you; and partly by miscarriages, early deaths, ravage, and murders of the enemy, your multitudes, of which ye boast, shall be almost utterly destroyed; and dreadful and lasting shall be your miseries when I withdraw my protection. 13. Your country seems as well replenished and fortified as Tyre itself; but your children shall be destroyed by the Assyrians. 14. Ye had therefore better have no children than bring them up for the slaughter. 15. Gilgal where I so remarkably blessed your fathers, and where my tabernacle once stood, is become notorious for idolatry and other wickedness. Therefore I hate them, and will expel them from my land and church, and will for many ages pursue them with the tokens of my vengeance. Their princes are revolvers from my worship, and break through all the rules of justice and honesty. 16, 17. I will therefore utterly destroy them, root and branch; and for their obstinate rebellion cast them away into a miserable captivity and dispersion among the heathens.

Ver. 4. For their bread, &c. Their bread-offerings, either on the table of show-bread, or meat-offering, Lu. 2. 4; 6. 16, presented in typical expiation of the sins of their souls, God will not accept. C.

Ver. 7. There seems no reason for interpreting either this or ver. 8 of false prophets. Is it not rather to be understood thus:—Such is your iniquity, you pronounce God's prophet a fool: such your hatred of God (Ro. 8. 7), you pronounce the spiritual man mad? C.

Ver. 8. The prophet is a snare, &c. 'The prophet is (esteemed) a snare in all his ways, and (an object of) hatred in the house of his God;' that is, the true prophet of the true God; for had he been a false prophet of a false god, he would have flattered the people, and they would have praised him. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is absurd to rejoice when sin reigns in us, guilt burdens our consciences, and God's wrath hangs over our heads. If we idolize our created enjoyments, or bestow them upon the service of the devil, it is but just that God should deprive us of them. It is but just that apostates from God's service should be expelled from his land; that they who despise his ordinances should be deprived of them. And if sin turn populous countries into desolations, the sinful inhabitants may expect destruction, flee where they will. The appointed season of God's judgments will bring to light and punish their abominations. Nor have any a more awful influence in ripening nations for ruin than villanous clergymen. If sinners will imitate their fathers in wickedness, they may expect to draw on themselves the most fearful destruction. If they separate themselves to wickedness, God will separate them to punishment. If they follow their lusts, God will withdraw his protection, and usher in a flood of calamities. If they educate their children in sin, God will destroy them in wrath. The crosses which children often occasion more than counterbalance the comfort of them. And no misery is greater than to be deserted, hated, and rejected by God. But thrice happy are they, in the worst of times, who have God for their God and their ALL.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1. The Israelites, destitute of true goodness, have done nothing for my glory, but have been intent only upon gratifying their own lusts; and the more their wealth increased the more they multiplied their idolatries. 2. Their heart is divided between me and their idols, and mutual contentions rage among them; but their guilt shall quickly issue in their desolation, and the Assyrians shall destroy their altars and images. 3. Their contempt of my authority shall issue in their having no government of their own that can do them any good in their distressed circumstances. 4. They quite disregard their vows to God and oaths to the Assyrians or to one another; and instead of just judgments, injustice, oppression, and violence overspread the whole land. 5, 6. Dreadfully shall the worshippers mourn, and especially the priests, who lived merrily on their incomes, when their golden calves at Beth-el shall be disgracefully seized by the Assyrians, and sent as a present to their king, and themselves exposed to shame, for their obstinate worshipping of an insignificant idol which cannot protect itself. 7. Their king, in whom they also trusted, shall be quickly and easily murdered. 8. Their high places of Beth-el, where they have committed so much wickedness, and their altars, shall be turned into heaps of rubbish; and their worshippers shall earnestly wish the mountains and hills, on which they had worshipped their idols, to fall on and crush them to death. 9. From the war against the Benjamites, who protected the miscreants of Gibeah, to the present time, ye have sinned in a like or in a more notorious manner. There your fathers were preserved, and became conquerors over the wicked Benjamites. Nay, there the wicked Benjamites stood in their own defence, and gained two battles over your slothful and inactive ancestors. 10. But now I intend effectually to punish you by the Assyrian armies for your attachment to your calves of Dan and Beth-el, and for your revolting from my worship and allegiance to the family of David. 11. And since, notwithstanding all my pains to instruct and engage you to keep my laws, ye love only your own ease, pleasure, and profit, and since lesser judgments do not avail to reform you,

GENERAL VIEW OF POMPEII—NEAR THE SO-CALLED RIVER OF STYX, MADE FAMOUS IN CLASSIC POETRY. [Hosea, x:8.]—"The high places also of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed: the thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars; and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; and to the hills, Fall on us." Some take the word Aven in the above verse to stand for Bamoth-Aven, which signifies the high places of iniquity. It is a significant fact that the high places the Israelites used for idolatrous worship are totally waste and desolate. But we notice the same laws that brought ruin and desolation to the Israelites for unholy sacrifices were at work among the heathen nations by which they were surrounded. Pompeii was founded, perhaps, in the same century in which this prophecy was written, and no city at the time of its destruction was more given up to a refined idolatry than this. The thorn and the thistle now grow upon their altars.

taught, and loveth to tread out the corn; but I passed over upon her fair neck: I will make Ephraim to ride; Judah shall plow, and Jacob shall break his clods.

12 Sow² to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; break up your fallow ground: for it is time to seek the LORD, till he come and rain righteousness upon you.

13 Ye⁶ have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity; ye have eaten the fruit of lies: because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men.

14 Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, as Shalman spoiled Beth-arbel in the day of battle: the mother was dashed in pieces upon her children.

15 So⁴ shall Beth-el do unto you⁹ because of your great wickedness: in a morning shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.

CHAPTER XI.

1 The ingratitude of Israel unto God for his benefits. 5 His judgment upon them. 8 God's mercy toward them.

WHEN Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt.

2 As² they called them, so they went from them: they sacrificed unto Baalim, and burned incense to graven images.¹

3 I¹ taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their arms; but they knew not that I healed them.

4 I¹ drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love: and I was to them as they that take off² the yoke on their jaws, and I laid meat unto them.

I will make you the miserable slaves of the Assyrians; and even the Jews shall be terribly harassed by them, and afterwards more so by the Chaldeans—though both shall issue in a harvest of joyful deliverances. 12. Applying the imparted righteousness of the Messiah, in his strength, live soberly, righteously, and godly, that in due time ye may enjoy the gracious reward of eternal life. Study to have your hearts convinced and renewed. It is high time now, when troubles are so near, to cry mightily to God for the gracious bestowal of his righteousness and grace. 13. Ye have, with great pains, laboured in wickedness, and thereby ripened yourselves for destructions and disappointments, because ye trusted in your idols and heathen alliances, and in your carnal projects and numerous armies. 14. Therefore shall your intestine divisions, and the invasion of the Assyrian army, throw you into the most terrible perplexity; and all your forts shall be taken and cruelly destroyed, as at the taking of Beth-arbel, where even the women and children were inhumanly butchered. 15. Your idolatry committed at Beth-el shall draw down the like vengeance upon you. Suddenly, and while ye expect quite other things, shall Hoshea your king be deprived of his authority, and imprisoned or murdered, and your whole civil constitution broken in pieces.

Ver. 9. Gibeah. The scene of the war with Benjamin on account of the infamous outrage on the Levite's concubine; in which case Benjamin doubly sinned—first, in committing the sin, then in protecting the guilty; and then all Israel sinned—first, in exterminating revenge, and, secondly, in a passionate and unbrotherly oath. C.

REFLECTIONS.—A selfish spirit defrauds God of his due honours. Nothing can be more criminal than to multiply our sins as God increases his favours; and nothing more just than for God to deprive us of that which we employ in the service of Satan. No inward treachery or dissimulation escapes his notice; highly he detests all deceit in oaths, covenants, and vows, and all injustice in civil dealings or judgments.—If we make creatures our idols it but hastens their destruction. And if God's grace destroy not the love of sin in us, his providence will destroy the fuel of sinful lusts around us. It is kind in God to chastise men that he may not destroy them. He often punishes with hardships those who have indulged themselves in luxurious pleasures. And men's rewards or punishments are framed answerably to their virtue or vice. But, alas, what barbarous work, what dreadful and unexpected calamities, hath sin introduced!

CHAPTER XI. When your nation was extremely debased, and unable to help themselves, I fixed upon it for my peculiar people, and by my special providence brought them out of Egypt by the hand of Moses and Aaron; and I will hereafter bring forth my Son Jesus Christ from thence. Ver. 2. But such was their ingratitude, that the more my prophets exhorted and invited them to repentance and holy obedience, the more contrarily they walked, and obstinately abandoned themselves to heathenish idolatries. 3. I tenderly conducted them through the Arabian wilderness, and supported and carried them through every difficulty: but they seemed insensible of, and never cordially acknowledged, my kind removal of judgments which they had deserved, and my preservation from dangers. 4. By every endearing motive and constraining influence, suited to their rational nature, I allured them to a steadfast obedience; I delivered them from their repeated oppressions by the Egyptians and under the judges; and, both in the wilderness and in Canaan, provided them with every necessary enjoyment. 5, 6.

But since, notwithstanding my favours, they obstinately persist in their wickedness, and trust to their own devices, I will put an end to their alliances with, or their fleeing for shelter to, the Egyptians, by giving them into the hand of the Assyrians, who shall desolate their cities and villages, and carry the survivors into a miserable captivity. 7. For they are so obstinate in their idolatries that, let my prophets invite and entreat them as they will to forsake their idols and return to me, scarcely any regard either me or them. 8. But though their enormous wickedness richly deserves the most tremendous ruin, my own bowels of mercy towards them call for my pity. 9. I will not therefore inflict on them all that they deserve; nor will I redouble my strokes to their utter destruction; nor shall their cities, like Sodom, be perpetual monuments of my wrath; for I am infinitely tender in my mercy, and unchangeably faithful to my promise made with Abraham. 10. After the captivity, and especially in the apostolic and coming periods, the Lord shall, by the powerful voice of his gospel, cause them to own Jesus Christ, and walk in his ways. 11. Trembling under a sense of their sinfulness and misery, they shall come to him from every quarter; and with fear and trembling shall they return to their own land, and be placed in the church. 12. The Israelites compass me about with a deceitful profession and hypocritical services; but the tribes of Judah and Benjamin are yet governed by my laws, and faithfully walk in the steps of their progenitors.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the kindness of God in preserving, supporting, and directing us in childhood. But how much greater his kindness in bringing his Son into and through our Egyptian world, and in delivering our souls from our worse than Egyptian bondage to Satan and our lusts, drawing us to himself, and making 9 And I, ⁷that am the LORD thy God from the land of Egypt, ⁸will yet make thee to dwell in tabernacles, as in the days of the solemn feast.

10 I have also ⁹spoken⁸ by the prophets, and I have multiplied visions, and used ¹⁰similitudes, by the ministry⁹ of the prophets.

11 *Is^u there iniquity in Gilead?*¹ surely they are vanity: they sacrifice bullocks in Gilgal; yea, ²their altars are as heaps in the furrows of the fields.

14 Ephraim^z provoked him to anger most ¹bitterly: ²therefore shall he leave his ³blood us heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ! Awfully criminal and ruinous is it to contemn his counsels or offers, and to persist obstinately in idolatry or ingratitude. But O how unbounded is his tender compassion! how slow is he to wrath! how averse to abandon or destroy his professed people! It is impossible then that he will ever abandon a saint! And when he speaks powerfully in his word and providence, with the most solemn awe ought we to turn from our evil ways, and follow him as our God and Guide. Thrice happy millennium, when both Jews and Gentiles shall, from all the ends of the earth, be converted to Christ! And happy are they who, amidst general apostasy, remain faithful to God and his people!

CHAPTER XII. The Israelites flatter themselves that their idols, or their Assyrian or Egyptian allies, will help and protect them; whereas, notwithstanding the labour and expense they cost them, they will at last be the instruments of ruin to their kingdom. Ver. 2. Yea, even the kingdom of Judah shall, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans, share a punishment similar to that of the Israelites, on account of their wickedness. 3-6. And since ye have so degenerated from the piety of Jacob your father, who at Peniel wrestled with God himself, the Angel of the promise, the infinite Father, who gives being to all his promises, and by strong faith and earnest supplications obtained a remarkable blessing, and at Beth-el had the covenant of God confirmed to himself, and to you in him, see that, by faith and repentance, ye turn to this God as your God: and while ye believe his mercy, wisdom, and equity, study to imitate him therein, and wait upon him in all the ordinances of his grace, for whatever is necessary to enable you to fulfil your duty. 7. 8. But ye Israelites, like the heathen Canaanites, make a trade of cheating, and take delight in oppressing your neighbours; and yet ye impudently pretend that your success and wealth are an evidence of your being chargeable with no gross iniquity. 9, 10. Nevertheless, I, the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, will, after the captivity in Babylon, and especially in the apostolic and coming periods, bring you into my church, give you the ordinances thereof; and, as I have, so will I instruct you by my prophets and gospel ministers in divers forms. 11. And yet now, after all my instructions, not only Ramoth-gilead, a city of priests and refuge; and Gilgal, once so famous for the mercies and tabernacle of God, and tents of his people; but all the country, on both sides of Jordan, are polluted with the worship of useless idols and their altars, as numerous and as much contemned by God as heaps of stones in the furrows. 12-14. Yea, notwithstanding God has raised you up from so low an origin as a mere keeper of sheep, who was obliged to serve like a slave for his wife; and miraculously, by Moses, conducted you from Egypt and through the wilderness; ye have bitterly provoked him to anger with your wickedness; and therefore shall he avenge all your reproaches against him and his prophets upon you, in rendering you base and contemptible.

Ver. 1. The meaning is that the Israelites, feeling their own weakness, instead of looking to God for help, look to other nations. First they apply to Assyria, and enter into alliance with it; then for some reason they turn to Egypt, and in order to propitiate its king they send presents of the choice products of their land. Oil is abundant in Palestine, and is greatly prized throughout the East. It is probably taken here as the representative of all presents. P.

Ver. 4. The reference to Beth-el conveys a tacit but most intelligible rebuke to those descendants of Jacob who had converted the place into a scene of idolatry. There Jacob had met and prevailed with the Angel of the presence—'the LORD of hosts.' There his degenerate children bowed down to a calf! C.

Ver. 7. A merchant. Rather, a Canaanite. Having degenerated from the heir of the blessing, and passed, by his own selection, into the family of the curse. C.

Ver. 8. There are certain practices claiming to be tolerated in almost every class and profession which others condemn, but the perpetrators excuse, palliate, or justify. Among these rank certain commercial practices both of the buyer and seller, which Ephraim, by aid of his own peculiar code, complacently and confidently denies to be sins, but which God threatens with exile from his commercial cities into a state as poor, unsettled, and profitless as that of his fathers in the wilderness. See ch. 13. 5; and Chalmers' Commercial Discourses. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! what a cheat many put upon their own souls, and what vexation and misery they prepare for themselves, who make creatures their confidence! God often sharply corrects those who are right in the main, that he may draw and keep them still nearer to himself: and great and lasting is that honour which is obtained by intimacy with him; and glorious the victories which saints obtain by their prayers and tears. Thrice happy are they who have august memorials of God inscribed on their heart, and who can improve his declared relation to them as an effectual spur to a genuine repentance. But alarming is the situation,

HOUSE OF ROMULUS, POMPEII—NEAR THE CLASSIC ELYSIAN FIELDS, WHERE, ACCORDING TO HEATHEN POETS, THE BLESSED RESIDED. [Hosea, xii:2].—"The Lord hath also a controversy with Judah, and will punish Jacob according to his ways; according to his doings will he recompense him." It is not only true that the Lord punishes Israel according to his ways, and recompenses him according to his doings, but he treats all other nations and races and peoples the same way. In Pompeii we have a city arrested and preserved by the eruption of Vesuvius from the year A. D. 79. And there is no better place to study the history of sin and requital than in this city. Here are all the evidences of the people's guilt and abominable idolatry and licentiousness exposed to view. This city was surrounded by walls nearly two miles in circumference. Its area is about 160 acres. Nearly one-half of this has been excavated. In the above scene we are permitted to view a private house where we may see the pictures still bright and clear upon the walls.

AMPHITHEATER OF HEROD, THE CITY HOSEA DECLARED WOULD BECOME DESOLATE. [HOSEA xiii:16.]—"Samaria shall become desolate; for she hath rebelled against her God: they shall fall by the sword." The prophecy quoted above is literally fulfilled in this city. The remains of what is called the Amphitheater may be seen in the level place in the picture where there are pillars, that appear to be black pegs about the eighth of an inch in height. There are 12 of these. The reason why they seem to be so small is because our artist was at a considerable distance from them when this view was taken. The site of this ancient city of Ahab is still marked by the ruins of buildings which climb the side of the hill on which it stood. There is a narrow terrace which runs around this hill like a girdle. Below this terrace the declivity inclines gradually toward the valley. Higher up there are traces of other terraces along which it has been supposed the sides of the ancient city ran.

CHAPTER XIII.

¹ Ephraim's glory, by reason of idolatry, vanisheth. ⁵ God's anger for their unkindness. ⁹ A promise of God's mercy. ¹⁵ A judgment for rebellion.

WHEN Ephraim^a spake trembling, he exalted himself in Israel; but when he ^boffended in Baal, he died.

2 And^c now they sin more and more,¹ and have made them molten images of their silver, and idols according to their own understanding, all of it the work of the craftsmen: ^dthey say of them, Let the men that sacrifice² kiss^e the calves.³

3 Therefore ^fthey shall be as the morning cloud, and as the early dew that passeth away; as the chaff ^gthat is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor, and as the smoke out of the chimney.

5 I did ^jknow thee in ^kthe wilderness, in the land of great ^ldrought.⁴

6 According¹ to their pasture, so were they filled; they were filled, and their heart was exalted; therefore have they forgotten me.

7 Therefore^a I will be unto them as a lion; as a leopard by the way will I observe ^bthem:

8 I will meet them as a bear ^cthat is bereaved of ^dher whelps, and will rend the caul of their heart, and there will I devour them like a lion: the wild beast⁵ shall tear them.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 An exhortation to repentance. 4 A promise of God's blessing.

O ISRAEL, return^a unto the LORD thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity.

2 Take^b with you words, and turn to the LORD: say unto him, ^cTake away all iniquity, and receive ^dus graciously:¹ so will we render the ^ecalves of our lips.

3 Ashur^a shall not save us; we will not ride and societies, sin is the shame, and will be the ruin, of any people. No solid or lasting comfort is anywhere to be found but in God himself: and his help, in the time of need, is doubly kind and useful, and never to be forgotten. But, alas! his mercies are often fearfully abused, to the terrible and irresistible ruin of the impenitent! Obstinacy in sin is the grossest self-murder: but in JEHOVAH our God, our Saviour, our King, the very worst may find abundant relief. And sad would be our case if he were not better to us than we are to ourselves. Unprofitable is everything that we get without his blessing. And exact is the account he keeps of our sins against the time of his judgments. With great care he chastens his people that they may not be destroyed. And sinners do but foolishly rush forward into dreadful and everlasting ruin by delaying their repentance. But O how astonishing is the freedom and fulness of salvation! May our hearts for ever glow with gratitude, and our lips for ever utter praise, to that kind Redeemer who so loved us, and gave himself to death and the grave for us!

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1. But, notwithstanding all the misery ye have brought upon yourselves by your sins, return, by faith and repentance, to me, who have granted myself to you in the gospel, as your reconciled God. 2. Earnestly beg that I may pardon your guilt, mortify your corruptions, accept you into favour, adopt you into my family, and bestow upon you all necessary blessings, that may fill your hearts and mouths with grateful praise. 3. Solemnly renounce all carnal confidence in foreign forces, military preparations, or lying idols, and trust only in me as the helper of the helpless outcasts. 4. And I, as one graciously reconciled in Christ, will, in free mercy, pardon your iniquities, when neither the kindness of God, nor the example of pious progenitors, animate us to a holy conversation: and awful is it to consider that, in mercantile dealings, men should be so rarely honest in God's sight. Most men think all is well if they grow rich and retain a fair character before the world. But infinite is the mercy of God: for his grace abounds where sin had abounded! Strict is the account which God keeps of all the mercies that he bestows on us, and of our improvement of them. And all our education and advancements are his free gifts. But if we employ our grandeur and wealth to his dishonour, it is but just that he should strip us of them, and punish our shameful transgressions with shameful punishments.

CHAPTER XIII. While you Israelites retained any fear of the true God, and awful regard to his messages, ye prospered, and were revered. But since ye abandoned yourselves to the grossest idolatries, ye have been in a declining condition. Ver. 2. And yet ye are still racking your minds, and exhausting your wealth, to make and serve new idols; and your rulers are making new laws as to their worship. 3. Therefore shall ye, as utterly despicable and worthless, be quickly, easily, and universally ruined, murdered, and carried captive by the Assyrians. 4. And however ungratefully ye have disowned me, the gracious God and Saviour of your fathers, ye shall find at last that none else can avail you as a God to protect and deliver you. 5. In the wilderness, where was nothing but dangers and wants, I carefully supplied your fathers with everything necessary and comfortable, and adopted them for my peculiar people. 6. But they had scarcely entered Canaan, and enjoyed its plentiful product, when they attended to nothing but the gratification of their proud and sensual lusts. 7, 8. Therefore will come to you the furious, irresistible, unavoidable, sudden, barbarous, and ruinous ravages of the Assyrian troops. 9. By your sins ye have brought all this misery on yourselves: but in and by me, your almighty God and Saviour, and no other, can ye have protection, support, or deliverance. 10, 11. What avail now your kings and other magistrates, of whom ye were once so fond, as if better governors than me? Both the giving and the removing of your kings have been generally the fruits of my displeasure with you, and contributed to ruin you. 12. And your iniquities have all been kept in reserve by me, to be brought forth and punished in due season. 13. Dreadful distress and anguish shall therefore suddenly come upon you. And yet, alas! stupid and thoughtless, ye take no more pains than a still-born child, by an earnest repentance, to extricate yourselves from the troubles which you feel, or have reason to fear. 14. In tender sympathy I will therefore prevent your utter destruction, and will seek to fully restore you from the lowest depths of misery. Nay, by my own death, I will save multitudes of mankind from all their misery of every form, if they will only accept Christ by faith. 15, 16. But, before this take place, the Assyrians shall invade your populous and wealthy country, shall lay it desolate, seize on your wealth, destroy your wicked capital, and, in the most barbarous and inhuman manner, murder the inhabitants.

REFLECTIONS.—Humility, especially towards God, is the infallible road to honour and happiness; but forsaking God, and following idols, the certain path to death and destruction. When men have once set off in a course of sin, they generally wax worse and worse. And as holiness is the honour and stability of persons

BEIT JENN WATERFALL—A BEAUTIFUL SCENE UNDER THE LEBANON MOUNTAINS. [Hosea, xiv:5.]—"I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon." We give a picture of a waterfall in the neighborhood and in sight of the Lebanon range of mountains. The picture was taken by our artist at noon. The meaning of the word Beit Jenn is the Garden House, or the House of Paradise. There was once a dense population here, for there are many rock tombs in this neighborhood. The picture above presents a charming waterfall caused by the stream Jennani plunging over precipitous rocks. It comes in delicate streamlets, and now in rushing torrents among moss covered rocks, among which shrubs and grasses grow. This Jennani is one of the main tributaries. of the ancient River Pharpar, referred to in II Kings, v:12.

reform you from your evil courses, remove the judgments which ye have deserved, and confer upon you unmerited favours. 5-7. And not only will I, by my favourable dispensations of providence, after the captivity in Babylon, and especially in compassion, render you glorious, well established, numerous, and every way prosperous, useful, and respected as a nation; but by the gracious influences of my Word and Spirit, will render you fruitful, flourishing, and well established in the beauties of holiness. Your converts shall greatly increase in number, and grow in knowledge and grace; and their gracious endowments, and holy conversation, shall be steady, persevering, delightful, and engaging to all around. They who enjoy the ordinances of my grace shall be thereby converted; and after their afflictions, become more fruitful in holiness, to the edification and comfort of all around them. 8. While ye with abhorrence shall renounce all your idolatries, I will graciously hear your prayers, bless, protect, and save you; and from me shall all your happiness and holiness be derived. 9. But it is only they who, being taught of God, seriously inquire into these things that shall understand them: for his oracles and ordinances, and dispensations of providence, are all right, holy, just, and good; and the righteous will walk in them, obedient to his will, and submissive to his providence, but proud, obstinate, and inconsiderate sinners will take occasion from them to fall into wickedness and ruin.

Ver. 2. Calves were offered as thank-offerings for signal mercies. Ex. 24.5; they were therefore symbols of thanksgiving. 'The calves of the lips' is thus a figurative expression for the 'thanks or praises of the lips,' which the people would render unto God for his pardoning mercy. P.

Ver. 3. Ride upon horses. Allusion is here made to Egypt. The strength of the Egyptian army consisted in cavalry and chariots. P.—Ye are our gods. This resolution against idolatry includes, not merely the renunciation of idols, properly so called; but also of that covetousness which is idolatry; and by which, since their dispersion, the Jews have mainly sinned and suffered. C.

Ver. 4. This is the Lord's response to the prayer which the prophet puts in the mouths of the Israelites. The whole structure of this closing section is dramatic; and the impression which it was calculated to leave on the minds of those to whom it was addressed was deep and solemn. P.—Backsliding is the translation of a Hebrew word descriptive of the restiveness of an ox or other animal unwilling to bear the yoke, and which generally draws back when it should go forward; and is truly emblematic of man when murmuring or repining at the ways of Providence, refusing to take upon him the yoke of Jesus, adopt his precepts, or bear his cross. C.

Ver. 7. The various images here employed are intended to illustrate the manifold grace of God. Rosenmüller has explained with force and clearness the meaning of the figures:—'The rooting indicates stability; the spreading of the branches, propagation and the multitude of inhabitants; the splendour of the olive, beauty and glory, and that constant and lasting; the fragrance, hilarity and loveliness.' To the same effect, but with still greater richness of expression, Dr. Pusey says: 'So the prophet adds one image after another, each supplying a distinct likeness of a distinct grace or excellence. The lily is the emblem of the beauty and purity of the soul in grace; the cedar of Lebanon, of its strength and deep-rootedness, its immovableness and uprightness; the evergreen olive-tree, which remaineth in its beauty both winter and summer, of the unvarying presence of divine grace, continually supplying an ever-sustained freshness, and issuing in fruit; and the fragrance of the aromatic plants with which the lower parts of Mount Lebanon are decked, of its loveliness and sweetness.' P.

REFLECTIONS.—Awfully ruinous is sin; and very necessary a gospel repentance for it; and nothing more effectually leads to this than a firm faith in God's gospel grant of himself to us as our God. Great is the condescension that God should instruct us what to pray for, and how to pray, as well as readily grant our requests. And happy and delightful is it to deal with a God of infinite mercy and goodness: for all his promises are answerable to the necessities and prayers of those whom he instructs. Marvellous is the change made on persons and societies by his all-powerful grace, and kind the notice which he takes of his people's penitential resolutions! He is the gracious fountain and root of all blessings and spiritual influences to them. And there is great need therefore seriously to consider his oracles and providences, and what different use is made thereof. To the humble inquirer they are the savour of life unto life—but of death unto death to every impenitent transgressor.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF HOSEA.

While the books of Scripture form a uniform whole, uniformly contributing to one great object—the development of the character, vindication of the judgments, and commendation of the love and mercy of God in Christ—the several books may yet be generally distinguished by some special part and object assigned by the Spirit to each historian, prophet, evangelist, or apostle. Like the workmen in Solomon's temple—all are engaged in the erection of one dwelling-place for the glory of God; but some hew timber in the mountains, others square the stones in the quarry, some convey them to Jerusalem, while others rear the walls, or shape and ornament the sacred furniture. To each there is a several and appropriate part; but all are actuated by one spirit, concur in one design, and perfect one result. Accordingly, to Hosea the Spirit seems, in a peculiar manner, to have assigned the subject of national sin and national repentance; with those sharp rebukes that smite the one, and those gracious promises that encourage the other. The prophet lived in a day when all public principle was sunk in idolatry, and its sure companion, licentiousness, ch. 1. 2; 3. 1; yet, during their downward course, the nation had been steadily advancing in agriculture, manufactures, commerce, and riches, as is evident from ch. 2. 5, 8, 9, 12. Yet this prosperity, so far from leading the nation to God as its author, became the incentive to that idolatry (ch. 13. 2), and that dissolution of morals, which the prophet was commissioned to denounce under the name of adultery (ch. 2. 2), the complicated crime of lewdness and of perjury; while, in addition to this general indictment, the destructive sins of profane swearing, lying, stealing, and murder are successively alleged against them, ch. 4. 2; 7. 1. Nor is any rank exempt from the national guilt. The princes, the prophets, the priests, are all included under one common charge, and threatened with one common judgment, ch. 5. 1, 10. Yet, in the midst of all these delinquents, is the prophet commissioned to preach repentance, and to promise pardon. And in this announcement and promise he exhibits the true character of God, who is ever 'long-suffering, slow to wrath, and plenteous in mercy,' while he exemplifies the only way in which a sinful man or sinful nation can ever be brought to repentance—the simple and faithful deliverance of the gospel of the grace of God, the word of reconciliation. The reformation of national manners has been attempted by mere moral instruction; but the philosophers of Greece and Rome utterly failed. It has been attempted by the satire of poets—their strains have been equally unsuccessful. It has been attempted by coercive laws, and by every form of severe and mitigated punishment; and if, by such means, public crime has for a little been restrained, it has only been effectual in producing a temporary calm, and preparing for the more terrible outburst of popular and ruinous commotion. It has been attempted in Christian lands by preaching all the precepts of a holy law, and all the terrors of approaching judgment, and the remedy has no doubt often affrighted the patient, but uniformly aggravated the disease; because it merely discovered the taint of the constitution and the depth of the guilt, Ro. 3. 20; 8. 3, 6-8. The preaching of the gospel in repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, has alone been ever effective in producing real and effective reformation of public principles and morals.

Of this fact the Bible affords the most striking of all examples—the apostolic reforms of heathenism, merely through the preaching of the cross of Christ, and the freeness and fulness of his grace. Nor is modern missionary history wanting in similar examples. The experience of the Moravians in Greenland has borne ample testimony to the fact, that the instruction that reaches the heart is 'the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ' in dying for us, and that pardon and remission of guilt which sinners find in his blood. And wherever else (as in Africa, the East Indies, or the South Seas) the grace of the gospel has been simply and zealously preached, there either local or national reformation has followed. It may not and it should not be denied, that by means of law, whether of human or divine origin, civilization may be extensively effected and long sustained. But civilization is so far from melioration, that it is often concurrent with the deepest moral depravity. Such was the case of the Jews when Hosea preached; and the remedy he brought to their deadly disease was a faithful exposure of all its horrors, and a faithful proclamation of the gospel of promise and grace. Such is now the case in not a few of the classes of European Christianity. The fact may be witnessed on the broad scale of cities or kingdoms, where civilization and depravity seem to go hand in hand; and where, unless God totally change the current of his providence—a thing impossible with him who changes not—judgments, either from internal commotion or external foes, with the ruin of that national prosperity which God bestows and man abuses, must speedily and heavily fall. And for all this disease, what is the remedy? Simply the faithful preaching of that gospel of grace which Hosea addressed to the Jews, in which they are invited to 'return unto the Lord,' while the Lord promises to 'heal their backslidings, and love them freely,' ch. 14. 1, 4. C.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JOEL.

Whether Joel prophesied in Judea before Hosea and Amos prophesied in Israel, and foretells the plagues of locusts and drought which Amos laments, ch. vii., or after the Israelites were carried captive into Assyria, we cannot determine. His prophecy contains (1) A representation of Judea, as terribly plagued by swarms of locusts and other insects, and great drought, intermixed with calls to solemn repentance and promises of deliverance, ch. i. ii. 1-17. (2) Predictions of the glorious blessings to the gospel church in the apostolic and millennial periods, and of ruin to her and the Jews' enemies, ch. ii. 28-32; iii.

[The date of JOEL's prophecy is uncertain; but its continued recognition in the Hebrew canon is unquestioned, while the references to it and the quotations from it in the New Testament afford all that can be necessary to commend it as the Word of the Lord (see Mat. 24. 29; Ac. 2. 16-21; Ro. 10. 13-16; Re. 21. 27; 22. 1). The occasion of the prophecy appears to have been a dreadful famine caused by the ravages of locusts and other destructive insects (for whose powers of destruction, see Kirby and Spence's Entomology), upon which calamity the prophet founds an exhortation to priests and people to repent with prayer and fasting, and earnestly intercedes with God on their behalf. But, in the foresight of their impenitence, he foretells still greater judgments by an army of locusts, and exhorts them again to fasting, prayer, and repentance; on which, not as meritorious purchases of deliverance, but as witnesses of their renewal by grace, and acknowledgments and vindications of the being and providence of God, he promises, not only deliverance from their calamities, but increase of temporal and spiritual blessings. But foreseeing still the hardened impenitence of his people, he predicts the ruin of Jerusalem and the Jewish nation, while he intersperses promises of safety to the believing remnant of 'the election of grace.' He then predicts the divine judgments upon the enemies of God's people, with the peace, prosperity, and purity of Israel, when again grafted into the tree from which, as a barren branch, it had in judgment been broken.

His remarkable prediction of the effusion of the Holy Spirit in tongues, and prophecies, and visions, formed one of the original evidences of Christianity; and still affords the only means of accounting for the rapid propagation of the gospel through so many nations during the first century of the Christian era. C.

The date of this prophecy, though not directly stated, may be approximately inferred from one or two facts. Amos commences his book with a passage from Joel 3. 16. He embodies too the same promises in ch. 9. 13 which we find in Joel 3. 18. Isaiah likewise appears to have been acquainted with the writings of Joel (comp. Is. 13. 6; Joel 1. 15). We therefore infer that Joel prophesied before Amos and Isaiah; and it seems highly probable that when Hosea in his early years prophesied in Israel, Joel was God's commissioned messenger in Jerusalem. f The canker-worm. This cannot be the ordinary canker-worm, for in Na. 3. 15 it is described as a winged creature. Some think it a species of locust, others an insect that ravages vineyards, Jerem. (ch. 51. 27) describes it as rough, and some species of locusts have their heads covered with hairs. See Re. 9. 8.-C.

10 The^c field is wasted, the land mourneth; for the corn is wasted: the new wine is dried up,^d the oil languisheth.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 5. Drunkards. Every period and every nation has its own peculiar, favourite, and prevailing sin, that seems to swallow up all others. And it is not improbable that as the 'drunkards' are first called to awake to repentance, the sin of drunkenness had become the prevalent sin of the day. C.

Ver. 19. An invading enemy wasting the country with 'fire' and sword; or 'fires' kindled in the dry grass and the branches of the withered trees, as often happens in forest countries. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's judgments and mercies ought to be carefully observed and remembered. Nor need we wonder if he deprive us of the mercies which we have sinfully abused, or make even the weakest insects victorious instruments of his wrath. It is hard to part with created comforts, once idolized. But certain is their shame who labour only for perishing provision; and sad their sorrow at last who place all their happiness in the delights of sense! Alas! how wide-spread is the havoc made by men's sins! and it is a lamentable case when poverty disqualifies for the public service of God. National judgments call for national humiliation and importunate prayers. And in the way of our duty we may hope that God will meet us in mercy. But hardened must that heart be which trembles not when God's judgments are everywhere before our eyes; and the very animals around us bewail the disaster. Yet God's ministers must be deeply affected themselves, even though they cannot affect their hearers.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1, 2, 10, 11, 30, 31. The devastations of the locusts, and the dreadful destruction of the Jews by the Romans, are described in this awful manner, because the former presaged the invasions of the Assyrians, and the latter were preludes of Christ's awful appearance to the last judgment.

Ver. 4. Horses. Many writers mention the resemblance which the head of the locust bears to the head of the horse; whence the Italians call them 'cavallette.' See Re. 9. 7. C.

Ver. 5. Noise. Bochart adduces many authorities to show that the locusts fly with a great noise, that may be heard six miles off; and that when eating the sound is like that of a flame driven by the wind.—Battle-array. The locusts follow a leader; and in this respect resemble the array of an army. C.

Ver. 10. The sun and the moon shall be dark. The swarms of locusts are so great that they often darken the sun for the space of several square miles (Bochart specifies twelve); and when they alight will, in a short time, consume the entire verdure of some hundreds of acres. C.

Ver. 13. Repenteth him. God is 'not the son of man, that he should repent.' Man repents either because he has resolved or acted ignorantly or foolishly, and changes his purpose, and expresses his sorrow when better informed; or man has resolved or acted wickedly, and changes his purpose, and expresses his sorrow, when he has learned the evil of sin, and felt the love of God. But when God is said to 'repent,' it means, not that he changes his purpose absolutely, but relatively. His purpose was, and ever will be, to punish the unbelieving and the impenitent; but it equally is, and ever will be, to have mercy on those who, through grace, have learned to tremble at his word, and turn from their sins to God 'with full purpose of, and endeavour after, new obedience.' See ver. 18, where repentance in God is expressed by pity. Ps. 106. 45; Ex. 32. 14; Je. 18. 8. C.

Ver. 25. My great army. All these creatures—the locust, the canker-worm, the palmer-worm, and caterpillar—being ranked 11 Be^a ye ashamed, O ye husbandmen; howl, O ye vine-dressers, for the wheat and for the barley; because the harvest of the field is perished.

12 The vine is dried up, and the fig-tree languisheth; the pomegranate-tree, the palm-tree also, and the apple-tree, even all the trees of the field, are withered; because "joy is withered away from the sons of men.

13 Gird^a yourselves, and lament, ye priests; howl, ye "ministers of the altar; come, lie "all night in sackcloth, ye ministers of my God: for the meat-offering and the drink-offering is withholden from the house of your God.

14 ¶ Sanctify^a ye a fast, call a solemn assembly,⁸ gather the elders, and all the inhabitants of the land, into the house of the LORD your God, and cry unto the LORD, 15 Alas^b for the day! for the day of the LORD⁹ is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come.

16 Is^c not the meat cut off before our eyes, yea, joy and gladness from the house of our God?

17 The seed¹ is rotten² under their clods, the^a garners are laid desolate, the barns are broken down; for the corn is withered.

18 How do "the beasts groan! the herds of cattle are perplexed, because they have no pasture; yea, the flocks of sheep are made desolate.

19 O LORD, to thee "will I cry: for "the fire hath devoured the pastures³ of the "wilderness, and the flame hath burned all the trees of the field.

20 The beasts of the field "cry also⁴ unto thee: for "the rivers of waters are dried up, and the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness.

CHAPTER II.

1 The prophet showeth unto Zion the terribleness of God's judgments. 12 He exhorteth to repentance, 13 prescribeth a fast, 18 promisseth a blessing thereon. 21 He comforteth Zion with present, 28 and future blessings.

BLow^a ye¹ the trumpet² in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for "the day of the LORD cometh, for it is nigh at hand:

2 A^c day of darkness and of gloominess, a day of clouds and of thick darkness, as the morning spread upon the mountains:³ a "great people and a strong; "there hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it, even to the years of many generations⁴

3 A^a fire devoureth⁵ before them; and behind them⁶ a flame burneth: the land is "as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them "a desolate wilderness; yea, and nothing shall escape them.

4 The appearance of them is "as the appearance of horses; and as horsemen, so shall they run.

5 Like the noise of chariots on the tops of mountains shall they leap, like the noise of a flame of fire that devoureth the stubble, as a strong people set in battle-array.

6 Before^k their face the people shall be much pained; all faces shall gather blackness.⁷

7 They shall run like mighty men; they "shall climb the wall like men of war; and they shall "march every one on his ways, and they shall not break their ranks:

8 Neither^c shall one thrust another, they shall walk every one in his path: and when they fall upon the sword,⁸ they shall not be wounded.

9 They shall run to and fro in the city; they shall run upon the wall; they shall climb up upon the houses; they shall enter "in at the windows like a thief.

10 The^a earth shall quake before them; the heavens shall tremble: "the sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining:

11 And the LORD "shall utter his voice⁹ before his army; for his camp is very great: for he is strong that executeth his word: for the "day of the LORD is great and very terrible; and who can abide it?

12 ¶ Therefore also now, saith the LORD, "Turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning;

13 And "rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God: for he is "gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and "repenteth him of the evil.

pent, and leave a blessing behind him; "even a meat-offering, and a drink-offering, unto the LORD your God?

15 ¶ Blow^b the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly:

16 Gather the people, "sanctify the congregation, "assemble the elders, gather the children, under the one common name of 'army,' renders it highly probable that they were all but different species of the same genus, or different varieties of the same species—all locusts, or at least winged insects—each contemptible in itself, but terrible and irresistible in their combination. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very needful that ministers should warn sinners of the fatal consequences of their conduct. But the rareness of tremendous judgments wonderfully discovers the infinite patience and mercy of God. How dangerous is it to rebel against JEHOVAH, who by a nod can muster even an army of insects able to ruin the mightiest nations on earth! No one can either withstand, support under, or flee from his incensed wrath. And but little comfort can the luminaries of heaven afford us when their Maker frowns.—Extraordinary judgments call to extraordinary fasting and prayer; and all private joys ought to give place to public sorrows for sin or its fruits. In all solemn worship ministers ought to lead the way, and every penitent should be careful to perform whatever may prevent the reproach of Christ and his church, and promote the plentiful and purer enjoyment of his ordinances as a principal benefit. But no fasting can avail us unless the heart be broken and melted by God's kindness, and turned to him. Mercy is all we need ask; and his glory, as interested in our salvation, is a sufficient plea. He will certainly hear when his people cry; and he can easily remove our plagues, renew our comforts, and give us a heart to give him the glory of his work. An abundance of outward comforts are a great mercy when by them our hearts are enlarged in love and thankfulness to God the bestower. And especially when, together with them, our spiritual knowledge and faith are increased. By the most gracious, almighty, and awful exertions of power, is Jesus' kingdom erected in the world or in the hearts of men. And thence happy are they, in the worst of times, who are inter-

SMYRNA, THE CITY OF THE MARTYR POLYCARP—THE DISCIPLE OF ST. JOHN. [Joel, ii:17.]—"Let the priests, the ministers of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them: wherefore should they say among the people, Where is their God?" Smyrna is in Asia Minor, and not a great way from the scenes of some of the fearful massacres of the present time. This picture is appropriate here because it illustrates the truth referred to in the seventeenth verse of this second chapter of Joel, because this verse expresses the spirit of God's people all over the world; for it has been the prayer, perhaps, of every Christian heart, "Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them." Smyrna is a beautiful city of about 300,000 inhabitants. Polycarp, a disciple of Saint John, lived here and here suffered martyrdom. His grave is upon a hill overlooking the city.

and those that suck the breasts: ¹let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet.

17 Let² the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep ³between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule⁴ over them:⁵ wherefore⁶ should they say among the people, Where is their God?

18 ⁷Then will the LORD ⁸be jealous for his land, and pity his people.

19 Yea, the LORD ⁹will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith; and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen:

20 But I will remove far off from you ¹⁰the northern army,¹¹ and will drive him into a land barren and desolate, with his face toward the east sea;¹² and his hinder part toward the utmost sea: and his stink shall come up, and his ill savour¹³ shall come up, because he hath done¹⁴ great things.

21 ¹⁵Fear¹⁶ not, O land; be glad and rejoice: for the LORD ¹⁷will do great things.

22 Be¹⁸ not afraid, ye beasts of the field: for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the¹⁹ tree beareth her fruit, the fig-tree and the vine do yield their strength.

23 Be²⁰ glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice²¹ in the LORD your God: for he hath given you ²²the former rain²³ moderately,²⁴ and he will²⁵ cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain ²⁶in the first month.

24 And ²⁷the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

25 And ²⁸I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the canker-worm, and the caterpillar, and the palmer-worm, my great army which I sent among you.

26 And ²⁹ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt ³⁰wondrously with you: and my people shall never ³¹be ashamed.

27 And ye shall know that ³²I am in the midst of Israel, and that ³³I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed.

28 ³⁴And³⁵ it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your ³⁶daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions.³⁷

29 And ³⁸also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit.

30 And³⁹ I will show wonders in the heavens

34 In interpreting the remarkable prophecy contained in verses 30 and 31, the critic will observe that it is by the grammar inseparably connected with what immediately goes before. The outpouring of the Spirit and the infliction of those judgments must be looked for at the same period. The latter follows the former without a long interval. The period of the fulfilment of the former is fixed by an inspired interpreter—the apostle Peter.

The latter, therefore, must be regarded as fulfilled in the siege and destruction of Jerusalem. This view is confirmed by a comparison of the language of the prophecy with the words of our Lord in Mat. 24.29. See the language is, of course, not to be interpreted in the distant future. Figures and symbols are used, such as were familiar to the people of the East, and such too as we meet with in heathen writers. It would seem, however, while great events were thus foretold in regard to the Jewish state and polity, these were also intended to be symbolical of still greater events in the distant future, namely, the last judgment.—P.

11 This chapter is an amplification of ver. 31 and 32 of the preceding. The time referred to is a very wide one. It extended from the close of the Jewish captivity, when the Jews were restored to Palestine, to that period when the full restoration of the covenant people to the church of God, as predicted in Is. 60.1 (Ro. 11.26), shall be effected. During that period the nations mentioned in detail would be judged.—P.

15 1 regard Jehoshaphat as a symbolic and not a geographical name. Tradition has connected it with the valley of Kidron, but without any evidence. In fact such a scene as is here described would be impossible in the Kidron, which is a narrow, rugged glen, altogether unsuitable for public assemblies.

The word Jehoshaphat signifies 'Jehovah judgeth,' and the idea embodied in the passage seems to be, that the Lord would assuredly judge all nations that had in any way opposed or oppressed his church.—P.

CHAPTER III.

1 God's judgments against the enemies of his people. 9 God will be known in his judgment. 18 His blessing upon the church.

FOR, behold, in those days, and in that time, when ¹I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem,²

2 ³I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the ⁴valley of Jehoshaphat, and will ⁵plead with them there ⁶for my people and ⁷for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land.⁸

3 And they have ⁹cast lots for my people: and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

4 Yea, and ¹⁰what have ye to do with me, O Tyre, and Zidon, and all the coasts of Palestine? will ye render me a recompense? and if ye recompense me, ¹¹swiftly and speedily will I return your recompense upon your own head:

5 Because ye ¹²have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly pleasant¹³ things:

6 The children also of Judah and the children of Jerusalem have ye ¹⁴sold unto the Grecians,¹⁵ that ye might remove them far from their border.

7 Behold, ¹⁶I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them, and ¹⁷will return your recompense upon your own head:

8 And I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they shall sell them to the ¹⁸Sabeans, to a people far off: for the LORD hath spoken it.

9 Proclaim¹⁹ ye this among the Gentiles; Prepare²⁰ war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up:

10 Beat²¹ your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks²² into spears: let the weak say, I am strong.

11 Assemble²³ yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about: thither²⁴ cause thy ²⁵mighty ones to come down, O LORD.²⁶

THE TEMPLE OF THE WINDS, ATHENS—THE CAPITAL OF THE GRECIANS, TO WHOM, ACCORDING TO JOEL, THE CHILDREN OF JUDAH WERE SOLD. [Joel, iii:6.]—"The children also of Judah and the children of Jerusalem have ye sold unto the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border." The mention of Grecians in the above verse brings the Hellenic and Hebrew races into contact for the first time.

was by that remote exile to prevent the possibility of their return to their own land. We give to illustrate this reference a picture of the Temple of the Winds in Athens. This old temple is a small octagonal building in good preservation. Upon its eight faces are many emblematic figures representing the various winds which are most frequent in Greece. According to tradition, Socrates used to take his stand on the site of this temple to instruct the rising youth of Athens. It is about 26 feet in diameter, and 42 feet in height.

REFLECTIONS.—The most kind and obliging often find others unkind and unneighborly. And no sweetness of temper or conduct can soften the enmity of the wicked. But dreadful is their danger who injure the people of God; for without fail, and in great fury, especially at the last day, will God reckon with them! But when wicked men are cast down, believers shall be lifted up in comfort, holiness, and safety.—How delightful shall this world be when all the corners of it shall be filled with the knowledge, glory, and grace of the Lord! And still more happy in the eternal state, in which God and the Lamb shall be ALL and in ALL.

To this view of natural history the book of Joel is particularly directed; and it affords a noble example of the fact, that the Scriptures excel all other books, as much in sublimity as in piety and truth. C.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET AMOS.

Amos was a native of Judea, ch. i.; vii. 14: and began to prophesy along with Hosea, about 800 years before Christ. After denouncing ruin to the neighbouring heathens, who had been bitter enemies to the Hebrews, he calls the Israelites, and sometimes the Jews, to account for their idolatry, ingratitude, violence, treachery, oppression, incorrigibility, uncleanness, contempt of the Sabbath, worldliness, &c., ch. i.-viii.; and concludes, predicting the establishment of the gospel church in the apostolic and millennial periods.

[Amos was one among the herdmen of Tekoa, a town of Judah, four leagues south of Jerusalem; but Beth-el seems to have been his native city, and his removal to Tekoa the consequence of the anger of Jeroboam, the son of Joash, and of Amaziah the priest (ch. 7. 10-13), because of his faithful denunciation of their idolatry. He began to prophesy along with Hosea, about 800 years before Christ; and after proclaiming the judgments of God against the neighbouring heathens, who had cruelly persecuted the Jews, he proceeds to upbraid them with their ingratitude, idolatry, violence, oppression, treachery, Sabbath-breaking, licentiousness, and worldliness; and concludes with predicting the blessed restoration of Israel, and establishment of the universal kingdom of Christ. C.]

Amos was of humble parentage, born in a remote and obscure village, and employed from youth apparently in an humble though honourable calling. He was a shepherd, and his circumstances were such that his chief food consisted of the coarse fruit of the sycamore. He had received no special training; he was not educated at any of those schools of the prophets then common in Palestine. His language and idiom are such as might be expected from one in his position, writing under divine inspiration. Noble thoughts and sublime imagery are couched in simple words, and intermixed with figures and similes drawn from the features of nature and from the ordinary events of village life. Tekoa was a mountain village, situated about half-way between Jerusalem and Hebron, on the borders, and commanding a wide view of, the wilderness of Judah. Its ruins now cover a bleak and dreary mountain side, and when wandering among and around them one can understand the simple words of Amos, 'I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit: and the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel.' He did not seek, he did not expect, such a noble mission. It was wholly the Lord's doing; and in meek submission he did the Lord's work. P.]

CHAPTER I.

3 Amos sheweth God's judgments upon Syria, 6 upon the Philistines, 9 upon Tyrus, 11 upon Edom, 13 upon Ammon.

¹⁴ In Hebrew Bikath-aven. It is highly probable that the place referred to is the great plain or valley between Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon, called Cœle-Syria by the Greeks, and Bukda by the Arabs. It is worthy of note that in and near it are great numbers of ancient temples and Canaanish high-places. The most celebrated of these is Balbek. It is one of the most fertile vales in Syria, and appears to have been densely populated in all ages. Nothing is known of Eden; and the conjectures hazarded by some commentators are not worth repeating.—P.

The bar of Damascus here is a reference to the bolt which secured the gate. To break it was to throw open the city to the enemy. This figure refers to the breaking of the national strength and means of resistance. The flour mill, a picture of which we give above, is in the northern part of the city. The stream of water flowing under the bridge and which furnishes power to turn the mill is the river Abana. These mills in Palestine and throughout Syria are very crude in comparison with such as we know in Europe and America at the present time.

and giving them up to the cruel Edomites, I will, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Maccabees, and others, utterly destroy their cities, rulers, and people. 9-15. For their treachery and cruelty the Edomites and Ammonites shall be served in like manner.

Ver. 2. Roar. Either literally with the thunder as his voice, or with his terrible prophetic denunciations ready to be executed, and as appalling to the conscience of sinners as the lion's voice to the shepherd and his timid flocks. C.

Ver. 5. Bar—the gate: as one of the gates of London is still called 'Temple-bar.'—Aven, vanity. Most probably a plain remarkable for idolatrous rites, as Bethel is called 'Beth-aven' for this reason, Ho. 5:8.—Kir, a city in Media, Is. 22:6. See, for the fulfilment, 2 Ki. 16:9, C.

Ver. 8. Philistines shall perish. While the Jews are still a distinct, numerous, and even great people, the Philistines their oppressors are utterly unknown, and would seem, according to this prophecy, to have been totally extirpated. C.

Ver. 9. The covenant. Begun by David, and continued by Solomon, 2 Sa. 5:11; 1 Ki. 5:17; 9:11. C.

Ver. 10. Houses were often built on the lofty walls of ancient cities, Jos. 2:15. And it is not improbable that, for sake of the elevated situation and prospect of the open country, there the most splendid buildings would be erected. Hence the threatening of fire to the wall and the palaces. C.

Ver. 13. Because they have, &c. This revolting cruelty proceeded upon the calculation that by destroying the mother and the child there might be no heir to claim the possession coveted. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No person need be ashamed of a mean, if honest, original. God can qualify the meanest for the most honourable work. But dreadful is the case of the mightiest nations when the measure of their iniquities is filled up, and the hour of God's judgment is come. Nothing more hastens their destruction than their oppression or murder of the saints, or implacable enmity against near relations. Walls, palaces, cities, or armies are altogether ineffectual to withstand the power of God's wrath. And they who spitefully, covetously, and cruelly thought to drive out others, are often themselves driven out from their dwellings.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 6-8. The most insignificant bribes can carry a cause against the most righteous of the poor. They greedily pant after the small substance which the poor or the meek possess, and insolently trample upon and plunder them. Fathers and sons incestuously commit whoredom with the same woman, to the great dishonour of my name which they profess. Contrary to law, they detain the pledges of the poor, and use them as carpets whereon to prostrate themselves, or to feast or sleep in, before their idolatrous altars; and their drink-offerings are purchased by the fines of those whom they had unjustly condemned.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how horrid are the barbarities of war! But if sinners perish who sinned without law, apostates from God and rebels against his revealed laws may expect double sorrow! Nothing is too

8 And they lay themselves down upon ^aclothes laid to pledge ^bby every altar, and they drink the wine of the condemned⁶ in the house of their god.⁷

9 ^cYet destroyed I the ^dAmorite before them, whose ^eheight was like the height of the cedars,⁸ and he was strong as the oaks; yet I destroyed ^fhis fruit from above, and his roots from beneath.

10 Also ^gI brought you up from the land of Egypt, and ^hI led you forty years through the wilderness: to possess the land of the Amorite.

11 And ⁱI raised up of your sons for prophets, and of your young men for ^jNazarites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith the LORD.

12 But ye gave the Nazarites ^kwine⁹ to drink; and commanded the prophets, saying, ^lProphecy not.

13 Behold, ^mI am pressed¹ under you, as a cart is pressed ⁿthat is full of sheaves.²

14 Therefore ^othe flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver himself.³

15 Neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and ^phe that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself; neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself.

16 And ^qhe that is courageous⁴ among the mighty shall flee away ^rnaked in that day, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER III.

1 The necessity of God's judgment against Israel. 9 The publication of it, with the causes thereof.

HEAR ^athis word that the LORD hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole ^bfamily which ^cI brought up from the land of Egypt, saying,

2 You^d only have I known¹ of all the families of the earth: ^etherefore I will punish² you for all your iniquities.³

horrid for hardened professors. If once men violate their consciences for any advantage, they will soon do it for a very trifling one. And no injury in God's reckoning is more abominable than what is done to the meek; who will not, or, to the poor, who cannot, resent it. Great is the kindness of God in what he hath done for us, and in raising up ministers and patterns of holiness in our families. But, alas! how apt are men to forget mercies received, and to seduce ministers and saints into scandal! The consciences of sinners testify that it is not for want, but through the abuse, of the means of grace they are so wicked! And the obstinacy of professors, in many and highly aggravated crimes, is infinitely provoking to God, and infallibly ruinous to themselves.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 2, 3. You only have I chosen to be, and used as, my peculiar people; and therefore your punishment shall be exemplary, because ye have sinned against clearer light and higher obligations than others; nor need you expect that I will behave towards you as a friend and benefactor while you continue acting in direct contradiction to my nature and laws. 4-8. God would not issue forth such terrible denunciations of judgment unless he had you in view, as being by your sins the proper objects thereof, and intended

CHAPTER VII.

1 The judgments of the grasshoppers, 4 and of the fire, are diverted by the prayer of Amos. 7 By a wall and plumb-line is signified the desolation of Israel. 10 Amaziah complaineth of Amos. 14 Amos sheweth his calling, 16 and Amaziah's judgment.

THUS hath the Lord God ¹showed unto me; and, behold, ²he formed ³grasshoppers² in the beginning of the shooting up of the latter growth; and, lo, it was the latter growth after the king's mowings.³

2 And it came to pass, that when they had made an end of eating the grass of the land, then I said, O Lord God, forgive, I beseech thee; by whom shall Jacob arise?⁴ for he is small.

3 The Lord ⁵repented⁵ for this: It shall not be, saith the Lord.

4 ¶ Thus hath the Lord God showed unto me; and, behold, the Lord God called to contend by ⁶fire,⁶ and it devoured the great deep, and did eat up a part.

5 Then⁷ said I, O Lord God, cease, I beseech thee; by whom shall Jacob arise? for he is small.

6 The⁸ Lord repented for this: This also shall not be, saith the Lord God.

7 ¶ Thus he showed me; and, behold, the Lord stood upon a ⁹wall made by a plumb-line, with ¹⁰a plumb-line in his hand.

8 And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumb-line. Then said the Lord, Behold, I will set a plumb-line⁷ in the midst of my people Israel: ¹¹I will not again pass by them any more:

9 And ¹²the high places of Isaac⁸ shall be desolate, and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste; and I ¹³will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

10 ¶ Then Amaziah, ¹⁴the priest of Beth-el,

Ye have even rendered the civil administrations altogether unjust and oppressive. Ye rejoice in your idols, wealth, and power; and boast of your self-advancement, and your ability to defend yourselves: but, lo, as executioners of my just judgment, the Assyrians, and afterwards the Chaldeans, shall ravage your whole country, and murder or take you captive, from one end of your land to the other.

Ver. 1. Chief of the nations. Not so named of the Gentiles, for they despised the Jews; but either so named of God, when he called them 'my people,' and constituted them the depositories of his holy oracles, and gathered them to his garner as 'the first-fruits' (so the word translated 'chief' signifies) of his harvest; or so named of themselves when, looking to their religious privileges, and overlooking their neglect of them, they proudly arrogated to themselves a title of indefeasible pre-eminence among the kingdoms of the world. C.

Ver. 5. Who imitate David's instruments of music, and affect to follow his example, but who dedicate to revelry what he dedicated to piety. The whole description presents us with a refined, indolent, and luxurious people—an evidence how easily, and how far, fine taste and true religion may be separated among any people—of which Italy, the land of painting and music, affords a sad example, while it proves a deceitful snare to all the nations of Europe. C.

Ver. 10. Uncle. The whole ten brethren, ver. 9, having died, the burial devolves upon the uncle as next of kin.—For we may not, &c. Either on account of the idolaters, who had forbidden all reference to Jehovah; or on account of a superstitious fear of mentioning the name; or, perhaps, a pious acknowledgment that silence best becomes sinners suffering under his righteous displeasure. C.

Ver. 11. Clefts. Either a prophecy of, or allusion to, the earthquake; or an allusion to the clefts that are frequent in the mud walls of cottages in warm climates. C.

REFLECTIONS.—External privileges are very apt to puff up pride. And if we be once abandoned to carnal security, the examples of God's judgments all around us will scarcely affect us. A round of dissipation and luxury effectually alienates the mind from God, and shuts out every serious consideration, and every degree of sympathy with afflicted churches and nations! Piti-ful are the darling pleasures of those who are abandoned of God. But fearful is their case when his wrath begins to burn against them. No external relations, church privileges, or temples can prevent his judgments. He abhors the form of godliness which is separated from its power. Dreadful is the situation, when luxurious dissipation is exchanged for sword, pestilence, famine, captivity, and hell!—when terrible calamities but plunge men into diabolical astonishment and eternal despair!—when all are generally miserable, and none left to comfort another! and when obstinate perverters of justice and proud boasters, are sadly abandoned to their own fate.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1-9. These things were represented to Amos in a vision. The vermin not only consumed the fruits of the ground, but were an emblem of the Assyrian ravagers. The terrible lightning, or drought, dried up their rivers, and destroyed part of the people, or figured out the devastations begun by Tiglath-pileser in Gilead and Galilee. The straight wall signified the Hebrew nation, formed and regulated by the most just laws; and the plumb-line denoted that their conduct was discovered as not answerable to their laws, and therefore God would no longer forbear to punish them.

Ver. 16. Isaac. They call themselves by 'Isaac,' rather than by Abraham or Jacob; taking advantage of the antiquity of Isaac's altar to sanction their modern idolatry. Even as Rome takes advantage of the antiquity of her name and power to sanction her innovations in doctrine and worship, and countenance her usurpations over Christian rights and liberties. C.

Amos to prophesy no

This is his simple, yet noble, reply. The prophetic office was not of his own seeking. He had received no official training,

no human instruction.

It was not as a mere matter of course, arising from the

that he prophesied.

ministry is not human,

it is divine. He was commissioned not by man, but by God.

He could not, therefore, cease from the work to which God had called him. Like the apostles under simi-

CHAPTER IX.

1 The certainty of Israel's desolation. 11 The restoring of the tabernacle of David.

I SAW^a the Lord standing upon the 'altar: and he said, 'Smite the lintel² of the door, that the posts may shake: and cut them³ in the head, all of them; and I will slay the last of them with the sword: 'he that fleeth of them shall not flee away, and he that escapeth of them shall not be delivered.

2 Though^d they dig into hell,⁴ thence shall mine hand take them; though they climb up to heaven,⁵ thence will I bring them down:

3 And though they hide themselves in the top of Carmel, I will search and take them out thence; and though they be 'hid from my sight in the bottom of the sea, thence will I command the serpent,⁶ and he shall bite them:

4 And 'though they go into captivity before their enemies, thence will I command the sword, and it shall slay them: and 'I will set mine eyes upon them for evil, and not for good.

5 And the Lord God of hosts is he that 'toucheth the land, and it shall melt, 'and all that dwell therein shall mourn: and it shall rise up wholly like a flood; and shall be drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

6 It is he that buildeth his 'stories⁷ in the heaven, and hath founded his 'troop⁹ in the earth; 'he that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth; the LORD is his name.

8 Behold, 'the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and 'I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; 'saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the LORD.

force the poor to sell themselves to you for slaves, at a mere trifle, or oblige them to buy the very refuse of your grain. 7-10. God hath therefore sworn by himself that he will punish your wickedness by the most terrible and overwhelming judgments; and that your present prosperity shall, of a sudden, issue in the terrible destruction of your princes and people; and your luxurious and idolatrous revelling and mirth, in the most bitter mourning and anguish. 14. The sin of Samaria, and manner of Beer-sheba, denote idols worshipped there.

Ver. 12. They shall search for a living prophet, but God will raise up none—for they already have Moses and the prophets; and since they will not hear them, it is in vain to send them another. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Whatever God shows us ought to be carefully observed. His patience wears out at length; and obstinate sinning must end in deplorable misery; and sinful mirth in howling and ignominious death. Yea, hopeless is the case when fearful calamities only render men sullen and peevish.—Carnal men heartily hate God and his ordinances. Sabbaths and holy duties are intolerable burdens; and merchandise, even the basest, is to them a cordial pleasure. Nor when nations are ripening for ruin do they ever fail to oppress God's poor people. But riches got by rapine will bring on ruin. And let the oppressor be ever so high, the flood of God's wrath shall overwhelm him. They who would not tremble for the sins of the land, shall tremble under its judgments. And if men hate God's Word and ordinances, they, and every impudent idolater, must expect to be deprived of them, and hastened into eternal misery.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 1. God's standing on the altar at Beth-el, and smiting the lintel, and cutting the posts, denote his treading down and destroying that and other idolatrous temples, together with the king, princes, priests, and people that worshipped there. 5, 6. I, the almighty Former of heaven and earth and all that is therein, and the Governor of seas and rains, will, with the greatest ease, ruin the whole country by the ravaging army of the Assyrians. 7. In my view, ye Israelites are no better than the black, barbarous, and idolatrous Ethiopians; and though I brought you from Egypt, that is no more than what I did for the Philistines, or will do for the Syrians, who are mere heathens. 9. I will despise and afflict you, O ye Israelites and Jews, among all nations; but with such exact care, that not one elect person shall be ruined, or his existence prevented. 11, 12. After the return from Babylon, the Jewish church and nation were re-established, and the Maccabees conquered the Edomites and neighbouring heathens. But by the coming of [AMOS, ix:11.]—"In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof: and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old." This verse doubtless has reference to the rebuilding of the temple, but it may also be regarded as a prophecy of the spiritual temple that was to be raised up through the coming of Christ. The Christian church which is gradually spreading over the whole world represents in modern times what the temple of Solomon did in ancient times. In the above view we have a picture of Corfu, a Christian city, and under the control now of the king of Greece. King George has a palace here about two miles from the citadel, situated in the midst of wide and spacious grounds, embracing, perhaps, fifty or sixty acres.

Christ the church was restored, religion revived, and shone more gloriously than ever before; and Gentiles, as well as Jews, became the happy subjects of his government. 13. The harvest and vintage continuing till the next seed-time, &c., denotes the amazing abundance of spiritual blessings in the apostolic and millennial periods. 14, 15. Their rebuilding the waste cities, &c., denotes the great deliverance from the heathenish idolatry and corrupt lusts; and the abundant peace and prosperity and fixed settlement of the gospel church. These last five verses had a partial fulfilment among the Jews after their captivity in Babylon; and will have a more noted fulfilment among all the Hebrews in the glorious future.

REFLECTIONS.—Obstinate wickedness issues at last in dreadful and unavoidable ruin. It avails not who may be for us, if God be against us: wherever we go his eyes are upon us for evil; whatever we do, his hand can destroy us; and all creatures are at his command to execute his judgment. Alas! how sins indulged turn professors of the true religion into worse than heathens! And if they abandon their peculiar holiness, God must strip them of their peculiar privileges. Nothing can be a more lying refuge than hopes of impunity in impenitency: and never is ruin nearer than when men put it far from their thoughts. But marvelously God preserves his elect amidst the most fearful shakings, confusions, and miseries. When all seems desperate, he wonderfully revives his church, and blesses her with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus. And great shall be the glory of the coming, and especially of the eternal period, in which not one good thing promised shall remain unfulfilled.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF AMOS.

Of the book of Amos two distinct views may be taken. (1) It may be viewed as a mere composition, without any reference to inspiration. And if so, what an elevated idea does it convey of the literary state of Israel, when a common herdsman and fruiterer could produce such a work. Viewed in this light, the sublimity and beauty of its imagery, combined with the purity of its morals, the honesty of its rebukes, and the tenderness and incorruptibility of its patriotism, place it far above every book hitherto produced upon these subjects, in any country, by any of the same rank, opportunities, and education. (2) But while, to humble the pride of man, it may be lawful to draw such a comparison, yet the true view of the book is that of its inspiration—the work of a 'holy man of old speaking as he was moved by the Holy Ghost.' And here we must note the wisdom of God in 'condescending to men of low estate.' He delivers his oracles not by 'the wise,' not by 'the scribe,' not by 'the disputers of this world,' but 'chooses the weak to confound the strong, and things which are not to bring to nought things that are; that no man should glory in his sight.' No doubt God has chosen a Moses, 'learned in all the learning of the Egyptians;' and a Paul, 'bred at the feet of Gamaliel;' but if he did so to demonstrate the power of sanctified learning, he also chose an Amos, who was 'neither a prophet, nor the son (scholar) of a prophet,' but a simple 'herdsman and gatherer of sycamore fruit,' and a few Galilean fishermen, 'without (human) learning,' to demonstrate that God's work is to be done, 'not by wisdom, nor by might, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord.'

Amos prophesied of the same events as Hosea, and seems to have been his contemporary. He is quoted in the New Testament, Ac. 7:42, 43; 15:15-18, corresponding to Am. 5:25, 26; 9:11, 12. C.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET OBADIAH.

Obadiah seems to have prophesied along with Jeremiah, about A.M. 3417. His short prophecy contains, (1) Threatenings against the Edomites, who may be considered as typical of Antichrist and other implacable adversaries of the true church; viz. that their pride should be humbled, ver. 1-4: their wealth plundered, ver. 5-7: their wisdom infatuated, ver. 7-9: their spiteful carriage towards God's distressed people avenged, ver. 10-16. (2) Gracious promises to Israel, that they should subdue the Edomites and others, ver. 17-20: and that Christ's kingdom should be erected by a great salvation, ver. 21.

[The prophecy of Obadiah is remarkable as the shortest book in the Old Testament. Yet, within that brief limit, it foretells and describes the final extirpation of an entire people, ver. 10—a mighty and prosperous kingdom—an event which history has fully realized. For either the Edomites were cut off in the Maccabean and subsequent wars, or completely scattered from their own country and embodied among the Jews, or absorbed by the Nabathean Arabs. C.]

Nothing is known of the personal history or family of Obadiah. The place of his birth is not stated, and the period at which he wrote can only be conjectured from incidental evidence. That he wrote previous to the time of Jeremiah is evident from his language, which is purer and of an older type; it is also evident from the fact that Jeremiah must have read and made use of Obadiah's prophecy (comp. Je. 49:7-22). From this we infer that Obadiah wrote before the captivity. It appears also from a careful comparison of ver. 10-18 with Joel 2:32; 3:1, seq., that the latter was acquainted with and partially quotes the former. Obadiah, therefore, must have been at least as old as Joel, and must have written before him. This places Obadiah among the earliest group of prophets.

There are statements in the book which might at first sight seem to run counter to the above conclusion. In ver. 10-16 the judgments pronounced on Edom are said to have been caused by the Edomites rejoicing that strangers had taken possession of Jerusalem, and led the Jews captives. But it is highly probable that the prophet alludes to the time when Jerusalem was plundered by the Philistines and Arabs in the reign of Jehoram, 2 Ki. 8:20; 2 Ch. 21:8. Then the Edomites joined the enemy and practised great cruelty upon the Jews.

Obadiah's prophecy is one continuous proclamation of the destruction of Edom. But Edom is not spoken of or denounced as an isolated nation. Its attitude towards Israel, the people of God, is the groundwork of the prophecy. This has been well brought out by Keil:—'He regards the judgment upon Edom as one feature in the universal judgment upon all nations, proclaims in the destruction of the power of Edom the overthrow of the power of all nations hostile to God, and in the final elevation and re-establishment of Israel in the Holy Land foretells the completion of the sovereignty of Jehovah, i.e. of the kingdom of God, as dominion over all nations; so that we may say with Hengstenberg, that Obadiah makes the judgment upon the Gentiles and the restoration of Israel the leading object of his prophetic painting.' P.]

HOUSE OF TRIPTOLEMUS, POMPEII—A HEATHEN CITY IN WHICH CICERO HAD A VILLA DESTROYED BY A VOLCANO IN A. D. 79. [Obadiah, i:15-16.]—"For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen; as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head. For as ye have drunk up in my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually; yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been." No heathen city furnishes a better illustration of these verses than Pompeii. This was a city given up to pleasure and idolatry, and when it was buried out of sight by the eruption of Vesuvius it was as though it had not been. Among all of its rich and luxurious inhabitants not a man was found to give literary or philosophic setting to its life or its history. We learn a little of Pompeii from Strabo and from Pliny, but nothing from any man who lived in Pompeii.

PANORAMA OF JAFFA—WHERE JONAH TOOK SHIP. [Jonah, i:3.]—
 "But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the Lord, and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord." Jaffa was the ancient harbor of the Jewish capital. It was here that King Hiram of Tyre landed his cargoes of cedar wood from Lebanon, which were to be used in the erection of Solomon's temple. Jaffa has no harbor, and it is almost with peril to life that a landing is made here. There are ledges of low, jagged rocks just underneath the surface of the water, and it is only with great difficulty that places can be found between these rocks to ride in the small boats from the great ship to the shore. Many people have been drowned here. Pliny said the city existed before the flood.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JONAH.

This prophet was born in Gath-hepher, a city of Galilee, and prophesied about A.M. 3140. In some unwritten predictions he foretold the restoration of the kingdom of Israel by Jehoash and Jeroboam II., 2 Ki. 14. 25. But here we have the history of the warning which he gave to the heathen Ninevites. It contains remarkable manifestations of human infirmity and divine mercy connected. But the principal scope of it is to figure out Jesus Christ's interposition for guilty sinners, and the amazing and effectual spread of his gospel through the Gentile world.

[This prophet was of the tribe of Zebulun, and born at Gath-hepher, a city of that tribe. (See 2 Ki. 14. 25; Jos. 19. 13.) Many things are conjectured concerning him, which, because merely conjectural, we hold it useless to repeat, believing it better, and perhaps the only thing strictly allowable, to speak of those things that are clearly recorded. These things are merely the time of his preaching, which was in or a little before the days of Jeroboam the son of Jehoash (2 Ki. 14. 25), and the facts narrated in the book itself; namely, the prophet's divine commission; his unwillingness to comply; his attempted escape; his wonderful prevention; his miraculous preservation; his faithful announcement of judgment; the remarkable repentance of Nineveh; its merciful reprieve; the prophet's dissatisfaction; and God's condescending defence of his merciful government. These facts, when combined, present us with a truly wonderful narrative—one which, if need were, against mere philosophers, we could well defend; but one of which, to Christians, it is enough to say, its truth is endorsed by our Lord himself; while the miraculous preservation of the prophet is declared to have been a type of his death and resurrection. (See Mat. 12. 39–41; Lu. 11. 30–32; He. 13. 15.) Jonah, though his book rank fifth in order of the minor prophets, must evidently have been one of the most ancient of all, except David, who have left behind them any written predictions. For the fall of Nineveh, and the death of Sardanapalus, the last of the Assyrian monarchs, is, by common consent of chronologers, referred to a period about 820 B.C.; while the same authorities generally refer the preaching of Jonah, and the repentance and reprieve of Nineveh, to a period about 862 B.C., which was during the life of Jehu, king of Israel. C.]

The site of Gath-hepher is well known, and the tomb of Jonah venerated. It is situated, as Jerome says, two miles from Sepphoris, on the way to Tiberias. The road from Nazareth to Tiberias also passes near it. It stands on the top of a rocky hill, and is now called Mashhad, which is the name commonly given in Syria to tomb or shrine of saint or prophet. On the very summit of the hill, visible from afar, is a little square building, surmounted by a white dome; and a very ancient tradition, received alike by Christians and Mohammedans, affirms that this building is the tomb of the prophet Jonah. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 Jonah, sent by God to Nineveh, fleeth to Tarshish. 4 He is overthrown by a tempest, 11 thrown into the sea, 17 and swallowed by a fish.

NOW the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the son of Amittai, saying,
2 Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city,¹ and cry against it; for their wickedness is come up before me.

3 But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish,² from the presence of the LORD, and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD.

4 ¶ But the LORD sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken.

5 Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god, and cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship;⁵ and he lay, and was fast asleep.

6 So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not.

here mentioned by the prophet, nor does it necessarily signify a whale even in Matthew. For the purpose of preservation, however, the whale seems most appropriate; as, without supposing the prophet to have descended into the stomach (which the text does not necessarily require), the mouth of a common whale presents a cavity from 6 to 8 feet wide, from 10 to 12 feet high, and from 15 to 16 feet long; which would contain an abundant supply of air, continually renewed by the creature's ascent to the surface. The fact that whales are not found in the Mediterranean is of no weight, inasmuch as they may have been there abundantly, and 7 And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah.

8 Then said they unto him, Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us; what is thine occupation? and whence comest thou? what is thy country? and of what people art thou?

9 And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, which hath made the sea and the dry land.

10 Then were the men exceedingly afraid,⁸ and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.

11 ¶ Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us?⁹ for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous.¹

12 And he said unto them, Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea: so shall the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

13 Nevertheless, the men rowed hard to bring it to the land; but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them.

14 Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and NAPLES, FROM THE HEIGHTS NEAR PUTEOLI—WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [Jonah, iii:2.]—"Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee." That Jonah was commanded by the Lord to go and preach in Nineveh is an evidence of the fact that the great cities of the nations which surrounded Palestine were no less under the direction and care of Providence than the cities of Palestine itself. Wrongdoing brought its penalties in heathen cities as completely as in Jerusalem. Above we give a picture of Naples from the heights. This city was in the immediate neighborhood of Pompeii, and was close to Baiae and Puteoli, where the wealthy Romans were accustomed to resort for pleasure. Nero was often here, and Tiberias, who lived before Nero, died here. In no city of history have the awful consequences of sin been more apparent than in the cities around the Bay of Naples.

said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and lay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, hast done as it pleased thee.

15 So they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea; and the sea "ceased" from her raging.

16 Then the men feared the LORD exceedingly, and offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made vows.⁴

17 ¶ Now the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly⁵ of the fish three days and three nights.

THEN Jonah "prayed unto the LORD" his God "out of the fish's belly,"

2 And said, I "cried by reason of" mine affliction unto the LORD, and he "heard me;" "out of the belly" of hell³ cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

3 For thou "hadst cast me into the deep, in the midst" of the seas; and "the floods compassed me about: all thy billows and thy waves passed over me.

4 Then I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will "look again toward thy holy temple.

5 The "waters compassed me about, even to the soul: the depth closed me round about, the weeds were wrapped about my head.

6 I went down to the bottoms⁵ of the mountains: the earth with her bars was about me for ever:⁶ yet^a hast thou brought up my life from corruption,⁷ O LORD my God.

7 When my soul "fainted within me" I remembered the LORD: and "my prayer" came in unto thee, into thine "holy temple.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jonah, being sent again, preached the overthrow of Nineveh, 5 Upon their repentance, 10 God repenteth him of the evil.

AND the word¹ of the LORD came unto Jonah the "second time, saying,

2 Arise, go unto "Nineveh, that great city, and "preach" unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

3 So "Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an exceeding "great city" of three days' journey.⁴

4 And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey; and he cried, and said, "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown."⁵

5 ¶ So the people of Nineveh "believed God, and "proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them.

6 For word came unto "the king of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and "sat in ashes.

7 And he caused it to be proclaimed and published⁶ through Nineveh, by the decree of the king and his nobles,⁷ saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing; let them not feed, nor drink water.

8 But let man and beast be covered with "sackcloth, and "cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands.

9 Who^a can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

10 ¶ And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God "repented of the evil that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

extirpated by the fishers, as they have been in other seas and the lower latitudes of the Atlantic. But as the whole transaction was a miracle, it is not necessary to have recourse to these facts in defence of the narrative; it is enough to know there is nothing beyond the power and mercy of God, when wisdom requires their exhibition. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers must either send or bear his message as he directs them. But even good men will often take the most foolish methods to evade difficult and dangerous duties. And Providence may seem at first to favour their projects; but rebellion against God will at last awaken terrible storms in consciences and societies; and saints may become a plague to heathens themselves, and need their rebukes for their wickedness and deep unconcern. In troubles it highly becomes us to inquire into the sinful cause. In sinning, we seldom think how mischievous the consequences may be: and in vain we indulge the most secret wickedness, when God can so easily discover it. Yea, shameful is it when ministers and saints are forced to confess their secret rebellions to his open enemies. But when men are truly humbled for sin, they will readily submit to either shame or suffering for it. And if sin has raised a storm, we never must hope for peace till it be removed by remission and repentance. Those who acknowledge their guilt with openness and grief are entitled to our deepest compassion. But even natural conscience, if awakened, will startle at the very appearance of murder. There is no striving against the counsels of God: his will must be done; and if, with prayer, we follow his direction, we may trust him with the issue. While alarming providences produce short appearances of religion in sinners, God often strangely marks his dominion over and direction of his creatures, and affords marvellous protection to his offending saints.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 5. The weeds. The bottom of the sea is replete with various plants, which being disengaged, and floating on the surface, might readily make way into the mouth, but not into the stomach, of the whale: for it does not live upon vegetable but upon animal food. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Many are forced to pray when and where they never expected. But no place can shut out a saint from communion with his God: nor need he doubt his nearness and willingness to help in a time of need. But how fearful is it to fall into the hands of the living God, even as a provoked Father! Into what hells, what depths, what pits of corruption, desertion, temptation, and affliction may a saint be plunged! and be reduced, how near the brink of despair! But troubles should lead us directly to our God, and make us by faith call to mind his new-covenant characters and promises. To expect happiness in sinful courses, or idolized creatures, is to forsake our own mercy. And if we run from our proper work, we run from our substantial comforts. It is unreasonable, on this side hell, to indulge despair. For great is the power of God over all creatures; and infinite and unbounded his mercy towards penitent and praying offenders. But noted deliverances ought always to issue in high praises and thanksgivings, and in redoubled applications to our duty.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 3. Three days' journey in circumference—being upwards of sixty miles: twenty miles being an average day's march for an army or journey for a traveller. C.

Ver. 4. He cried—that is, occasionally as he advanced through the whole length of the city—probably the principal street. C. Ver. 5. The people of Nineveh believed God. Therefore they believed him to be such as he had proclaimed himself to Moses; and as Jonah knew him to be, ch. 4. 2, and should have declared him; that is, "The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, and transgression, and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty," Ex. 34. 6-7. And from this it unquestionably follows, that the predicted overthrow was subject to all the limitations of this "great name," of which God can never come short in any of his dealings with men. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God often tries the sincerity of men's repentance by assigning to them that very work which they had formerly evaded: and marks his favours to

CANDY SELLER, BEYROUT—THE SEAPORT TOWN OF DAMASCUS, AS TYRE WAS IN THE DAYS OF SOLOMON. [Jonah, iv:11.]—"And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons that can not discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle." Here we have the truth plainly taught that God was interested in, and planned for the welfare of cities outside of the domain of the promised land. From the fact that He specially raised up the Jewish race to teach the great truths of His nature and kingdom, many have thought He left cities among the heathen nations to themselves. But we learn from the Scriptures that God's oversight encompassed all peoples and cities. The above picture, "A Candy Seller" in Beyrout, was taken in a city built up outside the limits of Palestine. This city, however, is destined to be a Christian city, for already, through the influence of missionary work, many of its inhabitants are Christians.

might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief.⁸ So Jonah was exceeding ⁹glad of the gourd.

7 Butⁱ God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

8 And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a vehement¹ east wind; and ^{the} sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and ^kwished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.

9 And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry² for the gourd? And he said, ³I do well to be angry,⁴ even unto death.

true penitents in honouring them with important trusts. And it is a mercy even to be scourged into cheerful obedience. What alarming messages of unexpected wrath must God's ministers sometimes bear! And his Word must not be bent either to the humours of preachers or hearers.—It bears a promising appearance when kings obtain proper notice of God's warnings, and seriously attend to them; when they and their subjects concur in repentance and reformation; and when believing fears of judgment, and hopes of mercy, jointly excite to it. While sinners are stirred up to prayer, there is hope in their end. God favourably regards even external reformation, that he may encourage to that which is truly evangelical.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. It displeased Jonah. How strange that mercy should displease any one, especially a prophet of the Lord! But Jonah, compelled to his duty, takes up the letter, without duly regarding the spirit, of his message; and, being more deeply concerned for his own character as a true prophet, than for the character of Him that sent him as a merciful God, he is sore displeased when his character seems sacrificed, though, in proportion as he apparently suffers, God is really glorified. C.

Ver. 7. A worm. It smote the gourd. Not a single worm smiting the root, as is generally supposed, but 'a worm' taken collectively for some species of caterpillar, a creature more voracious than the locust, which would strip the tree of all its leaves in the course of a single night. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very dangerous to be under the power of a proud peevish spirit. Men often pretend regard for God's honour when they mind only their own; and fear disparagement without any ground. Alas! awful is the consideration that pride and passion should so affect even saints, that they should wish for death, either to themselves or others, when they are very unripe for it; and rage at that very mercy of God which prevents their damnation. Yea, even create inconveniences to themselves, that they may get somewhat to complain of! How apt are men to be lifted up or cast down by a mere trifle. But if they will vex themselves with imaginary miseries, it is but just that they be made to feel real ones. Ungoverned passions too often bear down reason and conscience, and make men vindicate the most glaring absurdity and guilt, and outrageously fly out against both their God and their life. But infinite is the tenderness of God in taking such pains to convince and reclaim the froward children and servants. If we have pity on an earthly comfort, how absurd to quarrel with his pity to babes, to creatures endowed with immortal souls, and to all the works of his hands. But let me not bid adieu to this prophet without beholding in him my once suffering and now glorified Redeemer. He, for our rebellion imputed to him, was pursued by the storm, was cast into the raging ocean of his Father's wrath, to procure for us an eternal calm of forgiveness and favour. After lying a part of three days in the grave, he was miraculously raised from the dead, and ascended to glory. And marvellously effectual was the publication of the gospel to multitudes of sinners, chiefly of the Gentiles, for their conviction, conversion, and eternal salvation.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JONAH.

In whatever point of view he is contemplated, Jonah stands alone among the prophets of God. His first characteristic is resistance to the divine commission. In this, no doubt, he appears assimilated both to Moses and Jeremiah, Ex. 3. 11; Jer. 1. 6; 20. 9; but still there is this remarkable difference,—they only remonstrated against their commission on the ground of their unfitness. Jonah never pleads unfitness, yet timidly, sensitively, alas! it may be, selfishly, shrinks from the unwelcome duty. His second characteristic is irritability; and that, not a momentary ebullition succeeded by as speedy repentance, but a spirit that sits and broods over its malady, and vindicates, even before God, the indulgence of its bitter reflections. The third characteristic stands in the historic events by which his life has been distinguished from other men. His miraculous preservation; his prayer composed at the bottom of the sea; his return from the regions of death; and, probably, his wonderful reappearance to the very mariners that threw him overboard; the faithful boldness of his preaching; its unparalleled success with a rich, luxurious, and abandoned people;—these form peculiarities in the personal history of the prophet perfectly unparalleled among any of his brethren. But with these historical peculiarities we have little concern, farther than to admire them as examples of the wonderful power of God. Our business is rather with the two moral traits by which the prophet is distinguished, which, however strange, nay almost incredible, as they may at first sight appear, will on examination be found much more common than Christians generally imagine.

(1) As to the first—disobedience to the divine commission—is it not every day realized when conscience tells us not to suffer sin upon our neighbour; and yet fear of giving offence, the desire of pleasing, the love of ease, or some selfish interest, prevents us from delivering the unwelcome message. No doubt we may satisfy ourselves with pleading that we have no direct commission as Jonah had; but he that knows his Master's will, and sees a sinner perishing without an attempt for his salvation, is just as culpable as Jonah was, commits exactly the same fault, and with this remarkable aggravation, that he has more light than Jonah had, and is proportionably liable to greater condemnation.

(2) As to the second characteristic—irritability—it may be partly dependent upon bodily structure; partly upon education, example, and previous habits; and partly upon the state of the health; and it may not be denied, that where these concur, though they cannot justify, they may yet go far to palliate many personal faults of temper. But for Jonah what can be pleaded either in excuse or extenuation? Nothing; at least nothing that is recorded. Nor is it needful that he should be defended; nay, it is just that he be condemned. But while we cast the stone at the prophet, let us carefully examine whether we may not stand under like condemnation. Have we never murmured at our lot? Have we never wished to have it changed? Have we never been unreasonably angry with an adversary? Have we never justified that anger to our own conscience or to others? If we have ever been guilty of these, or any of these things, have we not acted in the very spirit of Jonah; and when we condemn him, are we not literally condemning ourselves? C.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET MICAH.

This prophet began his predictions a little after Isaiah, and continued prophesying along with him about fifty years. His scope is to convince the Israelites, and especially the Jews, of their wickedness and danger, and so to bring them to repentance, ch. i.—iii. vi. vii. 1–6; and to comfort the people of God with promises of mercy and deliverance, of the incarnation of the Messiah, and the grace of the gospel through him, ch. ii. 12, 13; iv. v. vii. 7–20.

[Micah is an abbreviated form of Micaiah, the name given to him in Je. 26, 18 (Hebrew), and also of Micaiah, the full form, which signifies 'who is like Jehovah.' He is called 'the Morasthite,' because he was born at Moresheth-Gath, a village situated in the plain of Philistia, at the foot of the mountains of Judah, and, according to Jerome, a short distance east of Eleutheropolis. In his prophecy he mentions no less than ten towns or villages in the neighbourhood of his home, warning them of the approaching calamities. But while he thus lingers for a time near home, Samaria and Jerusalem form the chief subjects of his prophetic denunciations. P.]

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1. Samaria and Jerusalem, the chief cities, denote the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah. 2–4. Hear, ye Israelites and Jews, nay, the nations around, and even the senseless earth, and let God manifest his indignation against you from heaven, if ye despise this warning. Behold, JEHOVAH cometh to execute his just judgment upon you, and to destroy your proud rulers and strong cities, and irresistibly to spread destruction and misery among all ranks in every place. 5–17. Your idolatry and other wickedness, which prevail in the two capitals, and thence spread through the whole kingdoms, are the cause: and therefore shall the Assyrians render Samaria a ruinous heap, and shall seize upon the idols thereof, and their furniture, as a booty bestowed by their gods to reward the toils of the siege. 12–15. The inhabitants of the distressed cities earnestly longed for some news of deliverance; but the Assyrians marched up to Jerusalem itself.—Lachish, which first admitted the idolatries of the ten tribes, shall be peculiarly miserable.—The hired troops of the Philistines shall betray their trust.—The Assyrians shall plunder Mareshah, and pass on to Adullam, or even to Jerusalem. 8, 9, 16. Make therefore every possible demonstration of grief for the murder and captivity of thy people and the desolation of thy cities.

Ver. 6. This prophecy has been fulfilled to the letter, and the present state of this royal city and its site forms one of the most remarkable testimonies to the divine authority of Scripture which we possess. Samaria was built on the summit and sides of an oval-shaped hill, surrounded by fertile valleys, which were again encircled by loftier ridges. The village which represents the capital of Israel contains about sixty houses, all built of old materials. The only structure of importance is the church of St. John, now in ruins. The rest of the site has been long under cultivation, the stones of temples and palaces have been thrown into heaps, or built up in the rude walls which support the sides of the terraces. On the very summit of the hill in the midst of corn-fields stand fifteen columns, but the building with which they were connected is gone. On the south-western slope are the massive ruins of a gate, and from it runs a double colonnade along the side of the hill eastward for about half a mile. The shafts now rise up lonely and bare amid standing corn and luxuriant vineyards. The houses are all gone; the very foundations have disappeared: and away in the bottom of the valley below are great heaps of building-stones which have been rolled down the hill-side. How striking, therefore, and how graphic are the words of Micah in this verse, when viewed in the light of modern research! P.

Ver. 10. Weep ye not at all. The calamity may not be averted by any tears—the sin is finished—the cup of doom is full. C.

Ver. 15. An heir. An enemy that shall inherit all thy accumulated wealth and splendid ornaments. C.

Ver. 16. Make thee bald. Shave off the hair, as was customary in deep mourning, Job 1. 20; Is. 3. 24; Je. 7. 29.—As the eagle. A variety of which has the head totally bald. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very hard to awaken obstinate sinners. But if they will not hear God's voice, they must feel his hand; and nothing can protect them from his almighty wrath. No judgments are inflicted but what our sins have deserved. And the more wicked persons or places be, the larger share in them must they expect. If great cities will be ringleaders in impieties, they must be made distinguished monuments of ruin. Nor need they expect that ever that which hires or tempts men to sin will long prosper. But even the messengers of God ought never to desire the evil day, but to bewail the punishment of sinners, as well as the sufferings of saints. Nor should we ever gratify with tidings such as make merry with the sins or the sorrows of God's people. Alas! what shame, what contempt, what perplexity, what confusion, what

MODERN CORINTHIAN—IN OLD CORINTH, WHERE ST. PAUL PREACHED, AND FOUNDED A CHRISTIAN CHURCH. [Micah, i:5-6.] "For the transgression of Jacob is all this, and for the sins of the house of Israel. What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem? Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof." This prophecy concerning Samaria contained in the 6th verse has literally come to pass. The stones thereof are poured into the valley, and the foundations thereof are brought to light. Corinth was another city in a heathen land as wicked and as idolatrous as was Samaria, and this city is also in complete ruin. The stones of its temples lie scattered over its site. Above we give a view of a Corinthian soldier taken upon the site of old Corinth, chariot to the swift beast: she is the beginning of the sin to the daughter of Zion; for the transgressions of Israel were found in thee.

14 Therefore shalt thou give presents to³ Moresheth-gath: the houses of Achzib shall be a lie to the kings of Israel.

15 Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareshah: he shall come unto Adullam the glory of Israel.⁶

16 Makeⁿ thee bald, and poll thee for thy delicate children; enlarge thy baldness as the eagle; for they are gone into captivity from thee.

CHAPTER II.

1 God's judgment against oppression. 4 A lamentation. 7 A reprobat of injustice and idolatry. 12 A promise of restoring Jacob.

WOE to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light, they practise it, because it is in the power of their hand.

2 And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage.

3 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, against this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks; neither shall ye go haughtily: for this time is evil.²

4 In that day shall one take up a parable against you, and lament with a doleful lamentation,³ and say, We be utterly spoiled: he hath changed the portion of my people: how hath he removed it from me! turning away⁴ he hath divided our fields.

5 Therefore thou shalt have none that shall cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the LORD.

prophecy: they shall not prophesy to them, that they shall not take shame.

7 O thou that art named the house of Jacob, is the Spirit of the LORD straitened? are these his doings? do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?⁸

8 Even of late my people is risen up as an enemy: ye pull off the robe with the garment from them that pass by securely as men averse from war.

9 The women of my people have ye cast out from their pleasant houses; from their children have ye taken away my glory for ever.

10 Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest: because it is polluted, it shall destroy you, even with a sore destruction.

11 If a man, walking in the spirit and falsehood, do lie, saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and of strong drink; he shall even be the prophet of this people.

12 I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel; I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold: they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men.

13 The breaker is come up before them; they have broken up, and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it; and their king shall pass before them, and the LORD on the head of them.

CHAPTER III.

1 Micah reproveth the cruelty of the princes, 5 and the falsehood of the prophets. 8 The ill-grounded security of them both.

AND I said, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel; is it not for you to know judgment?

2 Who hate the good, and love the evil; who anguish and misery, the most delicate sinners are exposed to at last! And by the very sins which themselves introduced, men are effectually driven out of their countries, cities, houses, and property.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 3-5. 10. The Assyrians, and after them the Chaldeans and Romans, shall invade, plunder, and desolate your country, murder, and carry you into captivity, and give your inheritances to others, because of your wickedness. 6. Ye attempt to silence my faithful prophets, who declare to you your transgressions, and warn you of my judgments, that ye may repent; and therefore quickly no more pains shall be taken with you, to render you sensible of your sins. But ye encourage those lying impostors, who, to obtain a good living to themselves, prophesy to you of nothing but peace and plenty, answerably to your luxurious inclinations. 7. Ye who glory in your descent from the patriarch Jacob, but are very unlike to him, can ye stop the revelations of my Spirit? or is the work of threatening a pleasure to me? Do not all my messages work for the real good of penitent and upright persons? 8-10. Lately, you Israelites, under Pekah, fearfully ravaged Judea, without any provocation, plundering the very poor, abusing the very women and children, and, by enslaving and selling them to the heathens around, ye have for ever deprived them of my worship, privileges, and country; therefore shall ye, in a little time, be murdered in, or carried from, your own country, which ye have so much defiled by your wickedness. 12, 13. These verses, as connected with the preceding, seem to import that God would gather the Israelites and Jews into their cities for the slaughter; and that the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans would break into them, and carry them and their kings into a dismal captivity. But taking them as a promise, they mean that God would not only bring back the Jews and Israelites to Canaan, but would render his scattered people one flock under Jesus Christ, who, in consequence of his resurrection and ascension, would, in the apostolic and millennial periods, conquer both Jews and Gentiles, and bring them at last to eternal glory.

Ver. 5. Cast a cord by lot. When a man died in Israel, leaving landed property, and four sons, it was divided by 'the cord,' or measuring line, into five lots; of which two, or a double portion, went to the eldest, equal shares to the other three. The prophet declares that dying fathers shall now have no successors. C.

Ver. 13. The breaker. By some translated 'the increaser,' and referred to John the Baptist, or even to Christ himself. But the word translated 'breaker' is scarcely ever taken in a good sense, see Ex. 19. 22-24; Job. 21. 15; Ps. 17. 4; Je. 7. 11; and, taken in conjunction with what follows, can scarcely be understood of any but an enemy, such as the king of Assyria, whom 'the LORD on the head' sent against an hypocritical nation, Is. 10. 5, 6. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In vain do men think that they may do whatever they can, since no power is given for destruction, but for edification. And if covetousness reign in men's hearts, compassion will be banished from it. The more design and deliberation men discover in their sinning, the more will God manifest his wisdom and power in the certainty, severity, notoriety, and answerableness of their punishment. And no injuries does God more fearfully resent than those which are done to the harmless, the fatherless, and widows, who have least help in man. They who have used others fraudulently and violently shall be so used themselves. And nothing can be more dreadful than to be cut off from the church of God and its exalted privileges. They who were most haughty and secure in their prosperity, are generally the most dejected and desperate in their adversity. They who hate holiness hate reproof, and reckon faithful ministers a nuisance and a burden; and being vicious and debauched, they wish to have ministers, and even a god, like themselves. But upright men delight in God's messages, whether promises or threatenings. Blessed be God that Jesus is our chief Shepherd: and, notwithstanding all the rage of hell and earth, he will gather the outcasts of Israel, render his gospel church extensive as the earth, and her members numerous as the sand by the seashore; and without losing one, bring them from sin, from death, and the grave, to the mansions above!

CHAPTER III. Ver. 2, 3. They cruelly oppressed their subjects, and, by exactions and rapine, took all from them that they could, barbarously making their very lives a burden to them. 5-7. Because they, by their flatteries, seduce my people into wickedness, for the sake of their own bellies, and hate and do all the mischief they can to my prophets, and all such as give them nothing, therefore such calamities shall come as will effectually refute their flatteries, and shamefully hinder them from foreseeing anything good, either for themselves or others. 8. Called and inspired by the Spirit of God, I, regardless of all your opposition, faithfully and boldly charge you with your sins, and pluck^d off their skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones:

3 Who also eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from off them; and they break their bones, and chop them in pieces as for the pot, and as flesh within the caldron.

4 Then^e shall they cry unto the LORD, but he will not hear them; ^hhe will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that make my people err, that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace: and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him:

6 Therefore ^knight shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision;¹ and it shall be dark unto you, that ye shall not divine;² and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them.

7 Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their lips;³ for there is no answer of God.

8 ¶ But truly I am full of power by the Spirit of the LORD, and of judgment, and of might, ^oto declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin.

9 Hear^a this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

10 They build up Zion with blood,⁴ and Jerusalem with iniquity.⁵

11 The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money; yet will they lean upon the LORD, and say,⁶ Is not the LORD among us? none evil can come upon us.

j Having enumerated the sins of the people, the prophet here in graphic language predicts the doom that would ensue. There is a striking analogy between the part of the sin and the punishment.

k The rulers took delight in adorning the capital with the fruits of their crimes (ver. 10); and upon that capital its judgment was specially pronounced. It is divided into three parts, and against each division a distinct curse is uttered.

l Zion, the site of the royal palace and citadel, shall be ploughed as a field.

filled now. I have seen the plough turning over the furrows upon the site of Zion, Jerusalem, where the people dwell, as distinguished from the palace, 'shall become heaps' of ruin. The greater part is so now. Heaps of rubbish cover the ancient foundations in some places to the depth of 100 feet. The mountain of the house of Moriah, on which the house of the Lord stood, shall be 'as the high-place of the forest.' For a long period after the destruction of the city by the Romans, the site of the temple was waste; even now a great part of Moriah is desolate.—P.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The establishment of Christ's kingdom: 3 the peace of it. 6 The restoration, 11 and victory of the church.

BUT in^a the last days it shall come to pass, ^bthat the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

2 And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.¹

3 ¶ And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks:² nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

4 But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig-tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the LORD of hosts hath spoken it.

5 For all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the LORD our God for ever and ever.

6 ¶ In that day, saith the LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted;

7 And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation; and the LORD shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.

warn you of approaching judgments. 10-12. Since ye repair the temple and palace, and the houses or walls of Jerusalem, with the money which ye have procured by taking away the lives of the innocent, and then seizing on their estates, and that obtained by bribery; and since, notwithstanding the basest dishonesty in your respective stations, ye expect prosperity, because of the Lord's temple among you, and other external privileges; therefore shall your temple and holy city, for your wickedness, be, by the Chaldeans, and especially the Romans, turned into heaps of rubbish and an absolute desert.

Ver. 1. Is it not for you to know judgment? Has not God given you the means of a superior education that you might learn and know his judgments, and raised you to high rank that you might rule in justice and mercy? C.

Ver. 2. Pluck off their skin. This may be a strong figure for cruelty and oppression, but is much more probably a literal statement—being a species of torture not confined to savages, but found, alas! in the history of nations in which civilization and Christianity had both found a name. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of nations and churches when they who ought to be chief promoters of religion and virtue become ringleaders in impiety. And they who oppress or seduce others infallibly prepare for themselves misery, contempt, and perplexity. Ministers have great need of a clear call and remarkable qualifications to render them duly faithful and bold, in opposition to universally rampant corruptions. Nor must they respect even the greatest, but in God's name rebuke with all authority. No pretences of piety can consecrate wicked conduct; but often that which is good is rendered profane by the carnality of its principle, manner, and end. And, alas! often the sins of rulers hasten ruin upon both churches and nations!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1-5. In the apostolic and future periods the gospel church, represented by Zion and the temple, shall, in all the kingdoms of the world, be most firmly and visibly established. Then shall multitudes of Gentiles everywhere earnestly excite one another to attend the ordinances and embrace the doctrines of the gospel, issuing forth from Jerusalem in the ministration of the apostles and other Jewish preachers; and, by his gracious influences and government, Jesus Christ shall introduce spiritual peace and holy conversation, and even civil concord, virtuous industry, and safety among the nations, where murderous wars, idleness, and danger had long prevailed.—And though others should follow their idolatrous courses, in which they have been educated, we will constantly persevere in the faith, profession, worship, and obedience of the true God, in his strength, and according to the rule of his word. 6, 7. And not only shall the weak, dispirited, and scattered Jews be preserved, brought back to, and happily re-established in their own land, as the people of God, but the most weak and wretched sinners shall be everywhere gathered to Christ, and the very weakest of saints encouraged by him. 8. And both in the apostolic and future periods multitudes of Jews shall be among the first noted converts to the gospel church. 9, 10. There is therefore no ground of desperate sorrow amidst your distresses by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, or Romans; for after ye have been reduced to the most miserable captivity, bondage, and dispersion, ye shall be marvelously delivered; and the deliverances of the gospel church from her heathen and antichristian persecutors shall take place when her distress is at the greatest, and her case seemingly desperate. 11-13. And however the Gentiles may insult you, O Jewish church and nation, in your distress by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, and Romans, and rejoice in hopes of your utter destruction, God shall, in prosecution of his good will, permit them in sin to be destroyed, even by your means, and their spoils shall be consecrated to pious uses, and many of themselves be turned to the Lord. And however the heathens, antichristians, and Mahometans, insult the gospel church, she shall at last be exalted on their ruins, and true Christians be enabled to destroy and tread under foot all opposition.

Ver. 1. In the last days. This prophecy has been considered by some as a quotation from Is. 2. 2, with which it fully corresponds in meaning, though not exactly in words. There is no doubt that one prophet studied the predictions of others, Da. 9. 2; still the difference between Isaiah and Micah is so considerable that the one cannot well be viewed as taken from the other. It is safer therefore to trace the similarity to the one Spirit in both, and the variation to some difference in the objects which the wisdom of God had in view by each prediction. C.

INTERIOR PUBLIC GARDENS, NAPLES—WHERE NERO MURDERED HIS OWN MOTHER, AGRIPPINA. [Micah, iv:1-2.]—"But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Twenty-six hundred and six years after the utterance of this prophecy we find its words fulfilled with reference to the most enlightened portions of the earth. Naples, so long a heathen and wicked city, is now a city of churches, and under the influence of Christian civilization.

9 Now why dost thou cry out aloud? is there no king in thee? is thy counsellor perished? for pangs have taken thee as a woman in travail.

10 Be² in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field, and thou shalt go even to Babylon; there shalt thou be delivered; there the LORD shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

11 ¶ Now⁶ also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion.

12 But they know not the thoughts of the LORD, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall gather them as the sheaves into the floor.

13 Arise,⁴ and thrash, O daughter of Zion: for I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass; and thou shalt beat in pieces many people; and I will consecrate their gain unto the LORD, and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth.

REFLECTIONS.—Graciously has God set his promises and threatenings the one over against the other. And glorious is our New Testament church, and regularly and firmly founded. What profitable instruction, light and conviction, peace and love, faithfulness, vigour, harmony, holiness, and comfort abound in her! God graciously issues forth comforting promises before distress takes place, that his consolations may be ready for his afflicted people. And the extremity of trouble always issues in marvellous deliverances to the church and her members. Yea, in all her harassments and oppressions her enemies and her God have very different ends. They aim at ruining her and exalting themselves, and God aims at purifying, enlarging, and enriching her, and ruining them.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1, 2. Notwithstanding the Chaldeans or others who assemble themselves to destroy the cities and afflict the rulers of Judah, the Messiah, who was from eternity begotten by the Father, and constituted the living head of all believers, shall, in due time, be born in the small city of Beth-lehem-Judah, to be the great Ruler and Governor of the virgin, and multitudes of Gentile converts flow together unto him. Then, to his own and his Father's honour, he shall, in the most powerful manner, gather and govern, establish and perfect, his gospel church. His kingdom shall be extended, and his honour advanced over the world. And not only shall he protect Jerusalem from the Assyrian invaders, but, in every age, shall defend his church from heathen, anti-christian, or Mahometan enemies; and, by proper instruments in church or state, shall punish them with a fearful destruction. 7-9. And as at the return from Babylon and their present dispersion the Jews shall be exceedingly blessed and emboldened by God, and made a blessing to multitudes around them, and a terror to their opposers, so shall their preachers, in the apostolic and future periods, be remarkably useful in converting the Gentiles to Christ, but a terrible curse and mean of destruction to be opposition. 10, 11. I will purge them from all their former corruptions, particu-

4 ¶ And he shall stand and feed⁵ in the strength of the LORD, in the majesty of the name of the LORD his God; and they shall abide: for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth.

5 And this man shall be the peace, when the Assyrian shall come into our land; and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall we raise against him seven shepherds, and eight principal men.⁶

6 And they shall waste⁷ the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof:⁸ thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our borders.

7 And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people, as a dew from the LORD, as the showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men.

8 ¶ And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep;⁹ who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.

9 Thine^a hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off.

10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots:

11 And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy strong holds:

12 And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thine hand; and thou shalt have no more soothsayers;

13 Thy^d graven images also will I cut off, and thy standing images¹ out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt no more worship the work of thine hands:

ENTRANCE TO THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY—BUILT UPON THE SITE OF THE INN WHERE CHRIST WAS BORN. [Micah, v:2.]—"But thou, Bethlehem, Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." The central point of attraction to the thousands of pilgrims who go to Bethlehem is the Church of the Nativity, which contains the birthplace of our Savior. A silver star, surrounded by lamps which burn day and night, shows the entrance to the grotto where the Savior was born. The manger is exhibited, and stations, all of which are hallowed by some legend, as well as many of the events from David down to Christ, and of the shepherds, the wise men, of Elizabeth, John, Joseph and Mary, and of the good men of the first centuries of the Christian era to the time of Jerome, are all localized here.

15 And I will execute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen, such as they have not heard.

CHAPTER VI.

1 God's controversy with his people for ingratitude. 6 What service is acceptable to him. 10 He reproveth them for their injustice, 16 and idolatry.

HEAR ye ^{now} what the LORD saith; Arise, contend¹ thou before¹ the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice.

2 Hear ye, O mountains,² the LORD's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: for the LORD hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

3 O⁴ my people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me.

4 For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.

5 O my people, remember now ^{what} Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him from Shittim unto Gilgal;³ that ye may know the ^{righteousness} of the LORD.

6 ¶ Wherewith¹ shall I come⁴ before the LORD, and bow myself before the high God? shall I come before him ^{with} burnt-offerings, with calves of a year old?⁵

7 Will¹ the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? shall I give my first-born ^{for} my transgression, the fruit of my body⁶ ^{for} the sin of my soul?

8 He hath ^{showed} thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly⁷ with thy God?

9 The LORD's ^{voice} crieth unto the city, and the man of wisdom ^{shall} see thy name:⁸ hear ye ^{the} rod, and who hath appointed it.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The church, complaining of her small number, 3 and the general corruption, 5 putteth her confidence not in man, but in God. 8 She triumpheth over her enemies. 14 God comforteth her by promises, 16 by confusion of the enemies, 18 and by his mercies.

true, and it will surely be fulfilled. The predicted destruction of the Assyrian is therefore also future, and is to be referred to the terrible northern enemies by which the church of God is yet to be assailed. C.

Ver. 9. Thine hand. The address is to 'the daughter,' ver. 1, and the 'cutting off' of horses, cities, &c., is in 'the siege' which the Lord directs against her for her correction and reformation.—This, like the preceding prophecy, is also future. No such event has taken place; but 'the Lord is not slack concerning his promise.' C.

Ver. 15. Heathens. The destruction of Gog and Magog—the unparalleled overthrow of heathenism. See ver. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Behold the miseries of Israel and the disgrace of the family of David gloriously counterbalanced in the person, incarnation, mediation, and glory of Christ! And grievous distresses and troubles making way for the most glorious benefits of redemption! Behold how extensive, glorious, peaceful, safe, and lasting is his spiritual kingdom! They who attempt to ruin it but hasten their own destruction. Greatly useful were the Jews, and still shall be, in converting others to Christ, whom they have long so heartily hated. And with great readiness and boldness men act for God when animated by his Spirit. Yea, thrice happy are the churches when their enemies are overcome and their internal corruptions removed!

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—With solemn earnestness ought ministers to speak on God's behalf, and to inculcate the warnings, threatenings, charges, and promises of God. In fearful controversies God pleads with his own people for their sins. And if he graciously bestow good magistrates and teachers, and disappoint the plots of our enemies, vile and provoking is our ingratitude. Deep convictions of guilt, or fondness of an enterprise, may occasion the most anxious inquiries after peace and pardon. And by the most costly expedients would men willingly procure these blessings. But not all the inventions of men can recommend us to God; and faith in Christ, and in God as our God in him, and a true repentance and real holiness, are preferable to every ceremonial service. Infinite then is the kindness of God in teaching us both by his Word and by his rod of afflictions. And great is the necessity of improving both, to promote our turning to God. Sinners, by their wickedness, infallibly bring multiplied calamities upon their own heads. And wicked rulers are awful plagues to nations and churches; for great multitudes will soon cleave to the very worst laws and customs.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1-6. Alas! few upright men are now left in the country with whom I can conscientiously associate; and early religion, and noted progress in holiness, are scarcely to be found. Good and upright men are almost entirely gone out of this world; and almost every one is ready, for self-interest, to murder or oppress the most innocent, or most nearly related. Bent upon doing as much mischief as they can, their very princes and judges even impudently demand bribes, and, without sense of shame, they agree to perpetrate the most shocking mischiefs. The very best of them are mischievous and hurtful; therefore shall God quickly plunge them into just and most inextricable miseries. So terribly treacherous are they become, that no one is safe in trusting even his nearest relations; nay, none are more to be suspected. 7-10. Therefore will I, by faith and patience, wait on the Lord, and pray and look for deliverance and safety from him alone, as my God in Christ; nor shall mine enemies have any reason to rejoice over and insult me, for the all-sufficient JEHOVAH shall support, comfort, and deliver me in all my troubles. I will therefore justify God, and submit to his corrections, as procured by my own iniquity, until he revenge the injuries done to me, and publicly own me as his, and honour me to behold the exertions of his equity, mercy, and faithfulness; and till the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, Antichristians, and Mahometans, who have oppressed us, be altogether disgraced and ruined. 11-13. Though the country shall be desolated, on account of the sins of the inhabitants, yet, whenever the time fixed in God's mind for relieving the nation, rebuilding Jerusalem, or other cities, and for the re-establishment of the churches, comes, all restraints and hindrances shall be entirely taken out of the way, and the gospel preached over all the world; and not only shall the Jews return from all lands in which they have been dispersed, but Gentiles, from all parts of the

ODEON OF HEROD ATTICUS, FROM ACROPOLIS—NEAR THE PLACE WHERE ST. PAUL PREACHED THE NOTABLE SERMON CONCERNING IDOLATRY ON MARS HILL, ATHENS.—[MICAH, vi: 16.]—"For the statues of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels; that I should make thee a desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hissing: therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people." Illustrating this Scripture we give a view above of the Odeon of Herod Atticus from the Acropolis in Athens. The prophet in the sixteenth verse attributes the desolation and ruin of Israel to the influence of the house of Ahab. But the prophecy is of universal application, and we find that ruin and desolation has come to all cities that have had nothing purer to conserve them than the religious of idolatry. The Odeon of Herod Atticus is among the ruins at the base of the Acropolis. It was built by a member of an eminent Roman family who inherited immense wealth which he spent in beautifying the city of Athens.

asketh for a reward; and the great man, he uttereth his mischievous desire:⁵ so they wrap it up.

4 The best of them is as a brier; the most upright is sharper than a thorn hedge: the day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh; now shall be their perplexity.

5 ¶ Trust ye not in a friend; put ye not confidence in a guide; keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.

6 For the son dishonoureth the father, the daughter riseth up against her mother, the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; a man's enemies are the men of his own house.

7 Therefore I will look unto the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation; my God will hear me.

8 ¶ Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, the LORD shall be a light unto me.

9 I will bear the indignation of the LORD, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause and execute judgment for me: he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness.

10 Then she that is mine enemy shall see it, and shame shall cover her which said unto me, Where is the LORD thy God? mine eyes shall behold her: now shall she be trodden down as the mire of the streets.

11 In the day that thy walls are to be built, in that day shall the decree be far removed.
